Luke 21:34-36—“But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man” (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Staff titled “Obama Under Fire: Says Jews ‘Took Land’ From Palestinians” was posted at theyeshivaworld.com on Oct. 15, 2026.

Former President Barack Obama is facing criticism over remarks about the Israeli-Palestinian conflict during an interview in Belfast, Northern Ireland, while on a speaking tour in Britain.

Obama said that Jewish efforts to find refuge were understandable after the persecution Jews faced in Europe, but added that “it is undeniable that they took land from people and acted excessively.”

He called on Israel to find a “just, ethical and moral way” to defend itself rather than “walling itself off,” arguing that the government’s reliance on military force without making concessions is costing Israel its moral standing. Obama also urged Palestinians to abandon violent strategies, saying Hamas’s October 7 attack proved futile. He listed easing suffering, ending the violence, halting expansion in the West Bank and rebuilding Gaza as immediate goals.

The remarks drew sharp criticism from pro-Israel voices. The Daily Wire and HonestReporting accused Obama of historical revisionism, arguing that he portrayed Israel’s founding solely as a response to the Holocaust while ignoring the Jewish people’s thousands-of-years connection to the land. Critics also said he omitted the extensive legal land purchases made by Jews in Eretz Yisroel before the establishment of the state.

An article by Staff titled “ ‘This Is Our Homeland’: Netanyahu Responds to Obama Accusations That Israel Stole Palestinian Land” was posted at jpost.com on Oct. 16, 2026.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu responded on Friday to comments made by former US president Barack Obama, in which he accused Israel of taking “land off people” and being “excessive,” referring to Israel's treatment of the Palestinian people throughout the country's history.

Obama made the comments during a visit to Belfast, Northern Ireland, on Tuesday.

“The Jewish people are not foreign occupiers in the land of our forefathers,” Netanyahu said in a video posted to X/Twitter. “Our history is not a colonial enterprise. Our land is not stolen land. This is our homeland.”

Netanyahu called Obama's Belfast comments a “regrettable statement,” emphasizing the connection between the Jewish people and the Land of Israel, noting its biblical name, “Judea.”

“That's where Jews come from,” he said. “And we've been attached to it for thousands of years.”

The prime minister differentiated Israel from European nations with colonial pasts, saying that the Jews in Israel are not “the Dutch in Indonesia . . . the Belgians in the Congo, we're Jews in Judea.”

- Obstacle to peace lies with Israel's, America's enemies, Netanyahu says

Regarding the path to a peace agreement, Netanyahu said that the obstacle to peace is not Israel, but rather the enemies in the region shared by Israel and the United States.

Specifically, Netanyahu noted the enemies’ “refusal to recognize the Jewish people's right to a state of our own, in any boundary.”

He cited chants of “Death to Israel” and “Death to America,” which are common in states like Iran, a shared enemy of the US and Israel.

“We are the ‘Little Satan,’ you are the ‘Great Satan,’ ” he said, referencing how such states often refer to Israel and the US, respectively, saying that both countries are “defending our common civilization.”

“A peace built on illusions will crash against the rocks of Middle Eastern reality,” said Netanyahu. “Israel will not gamble with its survival to accommodate those who refuse to accept the facts of history, to accept our right to exist, or who wish to appease terror. We certainly do not; we never will.”

- Obama: Palestinians “understandably” want their “land back”

Obama's comments on Tuesday, made in a conversation with journalist Susan McKay, referred to the Palestinians' reaction to the Jewish people's exerting cultural and military control over the State of Israel by explaining that “those people understandably said, ‘This is injustice, and I want my land back.’ ”

“The fact is that the Jewish people, for millennia, were oppressed, discriminated against, killed,” said Obama at the time. “Europe was responsible for much of it. They understandably sought a refuge. If the attitude of Israel is, now that we are the strongest, the most technologically advanced in the region, then our security will depend on us simply doing whatever we need and taking whatever we want, and not making any concessions to anyone,” he added. “That may work short-term . . . but you have ceded moral ground if that is the position you take.”

Obama did introduce nuance into the conversation, according to The Irish Times, saying that the millions of Jews and Palestinians in the region “aren't going anywhere.”

“The citizenry of Israel has to rethink, to reimagine, how your children and grandchildren are going to live in this region,” he said. “Are you just going to be behind walls and wipe out everybody around you, or are you going to find some just way of defending yourself while still acting in an ethical, moral way?”

Obama added that the Palestinians must come to understand that they will not “outkill” or “outweaponize the Israelis.”

“We have to look to other examples of how change comes about,” he said, pointing toward “nonviolent strategies.”

“That's going to take some time.”

An article by Victor Davis Hanson titled “What Might Have Saved Gaza?” was posted at amgreatness.com on Oct. 13, 2026. (Hamas could have spared Gaza’s devastation by choosing peace over terrorism. The conflict has exposed international double standards toward Israel and fueled a resurgence of anti-semitism.)

After October 7, 2023 – Could the destruction of Gaza after October 7 have been avoided? The answer is yes – had Hamas so wished.

- First, if the Hamas leadership had simply complied with Israeli demands to (a) return the 251 hostages and (b) surrender the architects and perpetrators of the massacre of some 1,200 Israelis, the Israelis would not have had to fight Hamas in the streets and tunnels of Gaza.

Note how critics of Israel consistently fail to offer any viable alternative to the Israeli ground effort to destroy the Hamas mass murderers.

Nor do Israel's enemies ever bother to explain why Hamas did not return its hostages and give up the perpetrators of October 7. Why did nobody expect the International Criminal Court or the UN to have the slightest effect when they ineffectually interceded to demand the return of the hostages and issued arrest warrants for the "war criminals" of Hamas?

The answer, of course, is that there was no more likelihood of them getting Hamas to cooperate than there was of the defunct League of Nations convincing Hitler to stop the killing of Jews or the UN persuading Pol Pot to stop murdering Cambodians. And it is likely that many anti-Israeli UN members silently approved of the murders.

Moreover, there is no evidence that most Gazans objected to the terrorism. Indeed, large numbers joined in when possible. More than 2,000 civilians tagged along in hopes of killing, raping, torturing, and looting with impunity. And when corpses and hostages appeared in the trucks of the returning Hamas murderers, the killers had to protect their prizes from their own even more bloodthirsty people back home, who sought to beat and spit on already dead and wounded Jews. Imagine: the killers had to protect their hostages from an even more bloodthirsty "civilian" mob.

- Second, Hamas didn't just refuse to stand down and hand over the hostages and culpable terrorists to the Israelis. Far from seeking peace, Hamas and Hezbollah spent the 20 days between the slaughter of October 7 and the Israeli ground forces' entry into Gaza launching thousands of missiles, rockets, and drones at civilians in Israel (barrages that would exceed, within a year, 25,000 launches).
- Third, the death toll in Gaza would have been far lower had the killers of October 7 helped their own civilians keep clear of combat zones. Far fewer Gazans would have died had Hamas not deliberately situated its tunnel exits and entrances beneath private homes, hospitals, mosques, and schools.

The IDF gave warnings to civilians and even texted thousands of Gazans with instructions to evacuate northern Gaza and keep clear of the Hamas terrorists who were using their own citizens as human shields. And why did Hamas do this, if not in the correct belief that the Israelis would avoid those human shields in a way that Hamas itself would never have avoided Israeli human shields had the situation been reversed?

Worse, Hamas had even less respect for its own citizens than did the supposedly genocidal Israeli enemy. It used noncombatants, hospitals, and mosques as shields because it was certain that Israel would show them more deference by not bombing them than Hamas itself showed by putting them in harm's way.

What would have happened had Hamas (after jubilantly returning home with hostages, trophy corpses, and loot) immediately insisted that Gazan citizens descend into its 310 miles of subterranean sanctuaries to use them as air-raid shelters – while Hamas fighters battled the enemy above ground?

Could anyone imagine British soldiers during the Blitz sneaking into subway tunnels and hiding, Hamas-style, while British civilians fought above and braved the bombing?

Most fundamentally of all, if Hamas and the people of Gaza had opted out of the “ring of fire” – the Iranian-sponsored plan to use Arab proxies to destroy the Jewish state by both aerial assault and ground invasion – there would be no Gaza moonscape today.

But that scenario, too, was impossible, because Hamas was a prime architect of the multinational, multi-cabal effort to launch a surprise attack.

Hamas's ultimate plan was always for its invasion force of 4,000 terrorists and 2,000 civilians to kill thousands of Jews and drive much farther into Israel than the 17 miles the killers eventually reached. Hamas expected that Hezbollah would at the same time unleash its huge arsenal of missiles and drones along Israel's northern border, while the Houthis launched swarms of drones and missiles at key Israeli civilian infrastructure.

Iran was the bank and brain behind the complex invasion of Israel. Had Iran simply cut off funding to these three Arab entities, they would not have had the wherewithal to conduct such a costly operation. Meanwhile, the Iranian maestros of death would (at least for a while) safely sit back 1,000 miles away, under their supposedly state-of-the-art Russian and Chinese air defenses, pulling the strings, always denying any culpability.

Hamas, however, like Iran's other fully funded proxies, Hezbollah and the Houthis, was foolish enough to be left openly holding the bag.

Before October 7, 2023

But to truly understand how the destruction of Gaza could have been avoided, it's necessary to go back long before the recent Iranian death scheme.

The last Jewish settlement was forcibly removed from Gaza – by the Israeli authorities themselves – on September 12, 2005, some eighteen years before the October 2023 massacre.

Hamas won a legislative majority on January 25, 2006 – its first and last election. After that, Hamas quickly silenced the population, killed off any lingering opposition, and never held another vote.

Instead, Hamas thugs set up an Iranian-style theocratic autocracy, with the express aim of destroying Israel and killing its Jewish population.

Much of the valuable Israeli infrastructure left behind for Gazans and paid for by Western philanthropists was quickly destroyed by civilian mobs. But even afterward, a great deal of Gaza's fuel, power, and water was supplied by the Israelis. About the only way to stop that subsidy was to murder 1,200 Israelis during a time of peace.

Gaza's Mediterranean beaches should have been more valuable than the distant Gulf coasts. So it is surreal to see vapid Western youth chant, "From the river to the sea, Palestine will be free" – given that an autonomous Gaza, without a single Jew inside its borders, was already in possession of an invaluable coastal corridor of some 24 miles on the Mediterranean Sea!

Over the next eighteen years, all Hamas had to do was to hold regular elections, cease efforts to kill Israeli Jews, invite Gulf investors to develop a tourist mecca, and use some of the $40 billion in aggregate UN, European, U.S., and Gulf state aid – not to build a pathological 310-mile military labyrinth from which to launch attacks on Israel, but to provide state-of-the-art housing, roads, bridges, infrastructure, and health care for its own people.

But that was impossible. Hamas was neither a political party nor a government. It was and remains a murderous cohort dedicated to directing all international aid and resources to its one unhinged goal – the complete destruction of Israel and the murder of every Jew within its reach.

All the World's Lies

Granted that Israel's actions in Gaza were unavoidable, were they perhaps worthy of opprobrium on other grounds?

Let us consider the ex post facto appeal of Israel's critics to "proportionality."

Can anyone cite an example from history in which "proportionality" stopped an aggressor?

Did America limit Japanese casualties to the number of Americans killed at Pearl Harbor?

And had we done so, would that restraint have stopped the Japanese killing machine that would eventually slaughter some 20 million Chinese and Asian civilians, as well as Allied soldiers?

After 1939, did the Allies decide to limit their killing of Germans to roughly the number of Allied citizens that Hitler's forces had killed? And had they done so, would that have stopped the Nazi reign of destruction that was finally responsible for over 30 million civilian and military deaths?

In sum, disproportionality is a fact of war. Usually, the more disproportionate the use of force, the more likely one is to bring about a quick end to the war.

And this brutal, eternal truth of disproportionality especially applies to aggressors who start hostilities and are deemed unlikely to desist until they have suffered disproportionate losses. It serves as a warning to cease their aggression and so avoid even greater lethal asymmetries in the future.

Let us also consider whether Hamas's actions were a justifiable response to Israeli provocation – variously defined as genocide, apartheid, or occupation.

- First, the now-debased charge of “genocide.”

In 2005, when the Israelis left Gaza, there were roughly 1.4 million Gazans. When Hamas attacked Israel in 2023, that population had soared in less than two decades to 2.2 million.

A genocidal regime does not remove all its soldiers and civilians from a neighboring belligerent – and then see the population grow by nearly 60 percent in only eighteen years.

Nor does a genocidal regime, supposedly bent on wiping out Arabs, allow the Arab population inside its own borders to grow to nearly fourteen times its original size—from 158,000 and 18 percent of the population in 1948 to 2.17 million and 21 percent of the population in 2026.

Nor does a genocidal regime, on the eve of a murderous attack by Hamas, issue some 18,000 work permits to Gazan civilians to work side by side with its own citizens inside Israel – at an average wage equivalent to some $10–$12 an hour, four to six times higher than wages inside Gaza.

Before October 7, could Jews visit Gaza and work there in safety in the manner of Gazans inside Israel?

Nearly one million Jews have been ethnically cleansed since 1948 from their ancestral homes all over the Muslim Middle East to ensure that those societies would be Judenrein, in the spirit of Hitler's National Socialism. Do campus rioters ever ask whether Arab citizens are safer inside Israel than Jews would be today in any Arab country, or for that matter in most European nations?

Nor is it only Jews expelled long ago who fail to attract sympathy.

Did Columbia erupt in protests against Azerbaijan when, just a month before the invasion of Gaza, it ethnically cleansed more than 100,000 Armenian Christians – the entire native population – from the Nagorno-Karabakh enclave?

- Next, the now-debased word “apartheid.”

An apartheid state would not allow its supposedly victimized minority to enjoy full voting rights, the ability to form political parties, and the freedom to hold office. Unlike blacks in apartheid South Africa, Arabs can become full Israeli citizens, enjoying complete legal equality. And Israeli Arabs enjoy higher incomes, better education, and longer life expectancies than any of their Arab counterparts elsewhere, save only for the wealthiest Gulf oil sheikdoms.

It is also striking that a supposedly Jewish-supremacist Israeli apartheid state is one of a tiny handful of nations in the Middle East where it is both legal and safe for a citizen to convert from the majority religion to a minority faith.

- Finally, the nearly meaningless term “occupation.”

Here, note that Israel would still have its UN-approved 1947 borders had its Arab neighbors not tried to destroy it in 1948, 1967, and 1973 – and lost all those wars.

How many nations that win wars return the land they conquered? Does Ukraine today intend to return to Poland the majority of western Ukraine, stolen from Poland by Stalin in 1939? Are Ukrainians then “occupiers” or “settler-colonialists”?

Is Germany still demanding that the Poles and Russians give up Danzig and East Prussia – lost after World War II, when Germany’s aggression was defeated? Have the Poles, according to the logic of Hamas, been occupiers since the 1940s?

Note also that, despite all these precedents, Israel in 1982 returned all 23,000 square miles of Sinai to Egypt after the latter’s failed attempt to use it as a launching pad to destroy Israel in 1967. Why did Israel return 6 percent of Egypt’s land area? The answer is simple: the Egyptian government had finally ceased trying to destroy Israel and stopped allowing terrorists to do so from its territory.

Even when we turn to more recent conflicts, Israel’s “occupations” seem to be the only ones of concern. Whenever we hear talk about “occupation,” the speakers rarely refer to Turkey, which occupies 37 percent of Cyprus through a puppet proxy.

Nor did Mayor Mamdani threaten to arrest the Chinese delegation to the UN upon its arrival in New York, despite the fact that the Chinese still “occupy” Tibet – and, even more relevantly, Muslim Xinjiang – as “settler-colonialists.”

(Nor, for that matter, has China's mass incarceration, de facto enslavement, and genocidal forced sterilization of Uyghur Muslims attracted much, if any, condemnation from other Muslim nations.)

The world knows the reasons for all these double standards, even if it keeps silent.

As far as the Middle East is concerned, most of its 640 million Muslims despise tiny Israel because even without oil wealth it has still achieved a level of prosperity, security, and freedom unthinkable elsewhere in the region. And the more their racially and religiously driven envy incited Middle Easterners to try to destroy Israel, the stronger it emerged and the weaker its enemies became.

As far as the rest of the anti-Israeli world is concerned, it shares the pathologies of the Muslim Middle East, with Jews as a whole taking the place of Israelis. The more that Jews preserve their culture and religion – and the more that they thrive intellectually, economically, and politically – the more jealousy and hatred fuel the venom.

In 2026, these two pernicious forces have united in the new Democratic Party: the antisemitic socialism of the Western Left has now merged with the anti-Israeli Islamism of the growing Muslim and Arab population within the West.

And the result is that the once-somnolent, age-old bane of hating and killing Jews has reemerged, replete with the same old lies and violence – and with the same old silence from cowardly and terrified onlookers.

An article by Stephen Miller titled “Sensing Midterm Blood in the Water, the Hibernating Woke Left Is Waking Up” was posted at townhall.com on Oct. 13, 2026.

In June of this year, several MLB baseball players hand-scribed Bible verses on their Pride Night uniforms and caps. It was a silent declaration of faith even as they were made by Major League Baseball to “Wear the ribbon.”

In response, Vice President JD Vance wrote on X, “Trump won we don’t have to do this anymore.” He wasn’t entirely wrong. In the wake of Donald Trump’s 2024 electoral win, the political and cultural Left was left completely defanged and seemingly out in the wilderness. Icons like Wayne Gretzky weren’t afraid to don MAGA hats on the golf course as calls for him to apologize were shrugged off. There was about a five-minute period there where Democrats warned about the gender theory insanity that infected their party.

Stephen Colbert's "Late Show" folded due to low ratings and a bloated budget. Attacks on actress Sydney Sweeney for her denim ad campaigns were feckless. The exhaustive cancel culture that has infected the media and the country was responded to with a resounding Donald Trump reelection, to the point that Congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez (NY-14), the Democratic totem for much of that atmosphere, was forced to declare that "Woke One was Crazy!" when asked about the insanity of the past five years that she and her party had propagated onto the country. She even stopped using the term "Latinx," and Former Affable Gay Mayor Secretary Pete Buttigieg removed the pronouns from his X bio.

The problem is there was no Woke One.

There is only Woke, and it has simply been in hibernation, and now, feeling emboldened by polling, showing a Democratic Party resurgence coming out of the midterm elections, they are once again ramping up and sharpening their knives.

Look no further than the aptly timed organized protests against Cornell University over the handling of a consensual student fraternity orgy from two years ago. One of the participants, a female, is now filing a civil lawsuit against what has come to be known as "The Cornell Seven," and has reinvigorated the MeToo Moral Panic mob mentality. Protests being organized on college campuses feel artificially timed for the midterm elections happening in just three weeks.

- Earlier this month, the Baltimore City Rock Opera Society hired and then abruptly fired their new executive director over what they believed was an act of racist cultural appropriation.

What was that unforgivable act? She appeared in a social media video with her hair in corn-rows, which she stated she did for the Burning Man Festival, the famous EDM (and drug-fueled) costumed art gathering in the Nevada desert.

- Last week, the Portland Trail Blazers also hired, and then instantly dismissed the same day, their new play-by-play commentator after a local reporter dug up tweets from him, dating back to his teenage years, which they felt were racist, sexist, and inappropriate.

There were only three tweets that were rediscovered, but it was enough for the NBA team to fire a new team voice.

- Last month, several members of the Democratic Party, including Rep. Ocasio-Cortez, pushed a vile lynching hoax without any media repercussions or fact-checking. That's not on accident.
- And just this past weekend, a media-driven mob has set its sights on comedian Shane Gillis (again), lashing out at his monologue as Saturday Night Live's (SNL) guest host.

Gillis performed his usual “every-man” bro-style of comedy and made comments on women’s gym attire. Gillis is usually the self-target of his own brand of self-deprecation, and this was no different. That has not stopped the BlueSkies and the media from attempting to get Gillis banned from hosting SNL for a fourth time.

Hollywood Reporter journalist Tony Maglio wrote: “SNL attracts liberal talent and a similar audience. It films in New York City and its main target is Donald Trump. The show’s writers and cast members are generally a diverse group of Gen Z-ers that came up in improv, sketch and standup comedy. They don’t listen to Joe Rogan — Gillis’ buddy who, along with Theo Von (and Dan Soder, kind of) got a shoutout in the set — and they don’t drink the Bud Light Gillis endorses. Studio 8H is not the place for gay jokes and jokes against women.”

- That kind of blatant admission is unusual.
- None of this is happening in a vacuum.
- The media, offering their as-usual friendly assistance to Democratic Party candidates, senses blood in the water for a perceived unpopular GOP heading into a midterm election where they can claw back some kind of congressional power and cultural relevance, and if you think Woke One was crazy, we’ve gotten just a minor taste of what Woke Two is going to look like.

An article by Rebeka Zeljko titled “Lindsay Clancy-Style Horror Stories Pile Up as Moms Turn on Their Own Children” was posted at dailycaller.com on Oct. 8, 2026.

Numerous stories involving mothers accused of attacking or killing their own children have emerged in the weeks surrounding the Lindsay Clancy trial.

Clancy’s trial made waves, prompting public support for the mother who strangled her three children — ages five, three, and eight months old — using exercise bands. Clancy’s defense argued the killings resulted from her postpartum psychosis, drawing the attention of many women across the country.

While many found the compassion for Clancy shocking, an even more disturbing string of cases involving mothers accused of attacking or killing their children has emerged.

In the days leading up to the verdict in Clancy’s trial, an Illinois woman named Corie Walsh was accused of killing her two-year-old son after law enforcement discovered him hanging in the basement of their home.

Walsh was found in a bloody bathtub with cuts to her wrists and thighs. Notably, Clancy had also attempted to commit suicide by cutting her wrists and neck before jumping out a window.

Prosecutors claimed Walsh had become “very interested” in the Clancy trial and was discussing it in a group text just hours before allegedly killing her son.

Tragically, Walsh’s case was not an isolated incident.

A Texas woman is currently facing charges of attempted murder after she allegedly stabbed her husband and her two young children. Holly Leeann Flores was detained after her husband called 911, saying his wife had stabbed him in the head. The couple’s three-year-old daughter and 10-month-old son were also discovered with stab wounds to their chests.

Flores’ husband reportedly told investigators she had been suffering from postpartum depression.

A South Carolina woman, Taylor Gosnell, was similarly charged with attempted murder for allegedly stabbing her six-year-old and three-year-old children. Law enforcement responded to a welfare check at Gosnell’s home where they found the children with more than 50 stab wounds combined.

Another Texas woman allegedly fatally shot her four-year-old daughter, Vivian Savella, after a custody hearing before turning the gun on herself. The mother survived for several hours before later dying at the hospital.

Cindy Tamez reportedly gunned down her entire family in a horrific murder-suicide. Tamez killed her partner, Leodegario Moya, her 12-year-old son, and her 11-year-old son in their Mexico home. Tamez later drove off with her two-year-old son before she fatally shot him and then took her own life.

A South Carolina woman named Justine May was accused of starving her 15-month-old and two-year-old to death after police discovered the deceased children in their home. May’s own mother drew the comparison between the horrific deaths of her grandchildren and the Lindsay Clancy case.

“This has been the fresh hell your family has been living every day that you don’t communicate or let us see the girls,” May’s mom wrote, referring to the Clancy case. “Would Justine do this? No. Would this dark entity that is behind Justine’s eyes do this? This haunts my worst nightmares.”

An article by Miranda Devine titled “Major Banks Closed Accounts of MAGA, Pro-Life and Other Conservative Groups Disfavored by Biden Administration: Bombshell Report” was posted at nypost.com on Oct. 14, 2026.

Major banks closed accounts and refused credit to MAGA merchants, pro-life causes, religious groups, conservative organizations and sectors disfavored by the Biden administration, such as firearms, oil and gas, and private prisons, a bombshell report from the federal banking regulator has found.

The Debanking Review by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) investigated 100,000 complaints and scrutinized 50,000 internal bank records to reveal how customers were “debanked” based purely on their political, social, or religious beliefs.

JPMorgan Chase, Bank of America, Citibank, Wells Fargo, U.S. Bank, Capital One, PNC, TD Bank, and BMO Bank were found to have discriminated against American consumers, citing “reputation risk” as a reason to deny service between 2020 and 2025.

Negative press, protests, criticism from advocacy groups such as the Southern Poverty Law Center, and reprisals from regulators or politicians were cited as the reputation risks most feared by the banks.

The 47-page OCC report, “Guaranteeing Fair Banking for All Americans,” released Wednesday, found that the nation’s largest banks targeted Christian organizations over abortion, LGBTQ issues, and traditional family values.

The banks also restricted financing for “disfavored” industries such as firearms makers and retailers, Arctic oil and gas, coal, detention facilities, tobacco and e-cigarettes.

Among the examples in the report is JPMorgan Chase’s payment operation, WePay, closing the account of a merchant that sold merchandise promoting President Trump and the Make America Great Again (MAGA) brand, claiming it “promote[d] hate, violence, or racial intolerance.”

The bank’s internal screening system regularly flagged terms such as “MAGA,” “Make America Great,” and “America First” that appeared in merchants’ customer profiles, websites, and transaction information. Several of the terms used to find “violations” were added after the January 6, 2021, Capitol riot.

WePay also closed accounts for a merchant selling “conservative/republican t-shirts, hats, etc.” Merchandise that raised “red flags” included a “Biden-Illegitimate-Tshirt,” “The-Big-Lie-Sticker”, and a “Trump-Won” flag.

A merchant was debanked for processing payments for a planned event after the event organizer posted promotional material on social media that bank employees decided was “an incitement of hate”.

The posts described Black Lives Matter as “Marxists” and called President Biden and Anthony Fauci “the enemy”.

Banks regularly used hate group designations from the Southern Poverty Law Center to debank customers. The SPLC was indicted in April on federal fraud and money-laundering charges, with prosecutors alleging it defrauded donors of millions of dollars. FBI Director Kash Patel has described the non-profit as a “partisan smear machine.”

JPMorgan’s WePay, for instance, closed the account of a religious organization citing the fact it had been designated an “extremist hate group” by the SPLC.

In the bank’s internal tracking system, employees described the organization as a “[r]ight wing religious conservative non profit with strong anti LGBTQ rhetoric.”

WePay also closed an account used to raise funds to support a legal challenge of anti-discrimination laws by a “devout Christian”.

PNC refused to issue a line of credit to a successful media company because the bank’s environmental and social governance group noted that one owner had a foundation that “has funded several Christian conservative groups, including several identified as hate groups by the Southern Poverty Law Center.” Another owner was branded “a conservative political commentator.”

The bank employee who recommended the refusal wrote: “I think it becomes really difficult to justify aligning ourselves with a company whose owners have built very public personas around opinions very contrary to PNC’s beliefs/values.”

Wells Fargo pressured a payment processor to terminate a religious nonprofit because of its views on same-sex marriage.

Wells Fargo also declined to lend money to two firearms businesses, with employees fearing repercussions from the Biden administration and criticism from anti-gun activists and members of Congress.

“Under the Biden administration, banks could face greater supervisory pressure to move away from lending to the firearms industry,” noted a reputation risk review of a prospective firearms client.

Bank of America debanked private-prison businesses citing “changing policymaker attitudes,” and then tried to re-establish one of the accounts just months into the Trump administration.

The OCC report also found organizations on both sides of the political spectrum had been denied services because of their perceived political affiliations.

Capital One, for instance, declined to provide financial services to any partisan entity that supported the campaigns of candidates from a single political party.

The bank refused business with an organization promoting “reproductive rights [that was] synonymous with abortion and the Dems” and also declined services to a gun rights organization “due to optics that we endorsed its position.”

Although all nine banks told the OCC they had revised their practices, the regulator said the reforms have not gone far enough and that no bank had “fully and publicly acknowledged” its “weaponization of finance against hardworking Americans.”

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) announced an investigation into the banks Wednesday and pledged to address any consumer harm caused by the debanking practices described in the report.

“It is appalling that these banks targeted American consumers for their political, social, or religious beliefs that did not align with the Biden Administration or its leftist allies,” said CFPB’s Acting Director Mark Paoletta.

“Many of those targeted were supporters of President Trump. These thuggish tactics . . . have no place in America . . .

“The CFPB will fully investigate whether the institutions featured in OCC’s report and others have complied with federal consumer financial laws and take appropriate action.”

The CFPB holds primary supervisory and enforcement authority for banks with over $10 billion in assets. Comptroller of the Currency Jonathan V. Gould said the OCC is considering further action to stop banks discriminating against customers on the basis of their political or religious beliefs.

“Today’s report provides irrefutable evidence that the nation’s largest banks have denied, debanked and discriminated against customers and lawful businesses,” he said.

The OCC review followed President Trump’s executive order directing federal banking regulators to combat “politicized or unlawful debanking”. The August 7, 2025 order declared that “no American should be denied access to financial services because of their constitutionally or statutorily protected beliefs, affiliations, or political views.”

Donald Trump is suing JPMorgan Chase, alleging it closed his accounts in 2021 for political reasons after the Capitol riot.

Melania, Eric, and Barron Trump have also complained they were debanked at that time, along with several Trump businesses.

Tech founder Marc Andreessen has claimed tech entrepreneurs were debanked under a program by the Biden administration because they were operating disfavored businesses like crypto. He also alleged his partner's father was debanked for his conservative political views.

Americans who believe they were unfairly debanked can visit helpwithmybank.gov.

A spokesman for JPMorgan Chase said: "A process used by WePay, a small technology company we acquired years ago and have since wound down, did not meet our expectations. We identified it, corrected it, and the business no longer operates . . . Our policies prohibit discrimination against customers based on political or religious views."

An article by Brianna Lyman titled "New York Times Op-Ed Shows Why Voters Worried About Affordability Should Be Wary of Democrats" was posted at thefederalist.com on Oct. 14, 2026. Following are excerpts of the article.

For Americans considering voting Democrat because they want cheaper groceries and lower gas prices, a New York Times op-ed offers a warning about what a Democrat victory would actually deliver: another round of get-conservatives lawfare, resource-squandering impeachment witch hunts, and performative stonewalling of Trump's judicial nominees.

Democrats have spent months positioning themselves as the answer to Americans' affordability concerns. But voters — particularly independents, moderates, and frustrated Republicans — should pay attention to what Democrats say they would actually do with control of Congress.

Writing for the Times, Jamelle Bouie says if Democrats win back the House and Senate, they "would have an opportunity not just to check the Trump administration but to neuter it: to halt the confirmation of new judges, to block the president's attempts to appoint more unqualified toadies to key offices and to focus the investigative fire of both chambers on every aspect of this White House."

Bouie all but salivates at the prospect of lawfare, writing: "Should Democrats find the will to do so, they could launch the kind of full-court press that no president has faced from the opposition since Barack Obama had to contend with a Republican Congress in the last two years of his administration. The difference is that Democrats will have real corruption and malfeasance to work with.”

In a lot more words than needed, Bouie is arguing for a two-year-long lawfare campaign against the president and his agenda. Elect Democrats, and you’ll get political lawfare, Bouie hopes. Voters anticipating a Democrat Congress would focus on affordability — which certainly would include working with Republicans and the president despite Bouie’s desire for no bipartisan work — should be wary.

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word by that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
