Luke 21:34-36–“But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man” (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Victor Nava titled “Todd Blanche Tells ‘Pod Force One’ Ilhan Omar Will Be Given One Right Trump Was Denied During [His] Indictments” was posted at nypost.com on Oct. 21, 2026.

Embattled Rep. Ilhan Omar (D-Minn.) is allowed to speak freely about the federal immigration fraud investigation against her – a privilege President Trump was not afforded during his legal woes, Attorney General Todd Blanche noted on the latest episode of “Pod Force One.”

Blanche, who served as Trump’s personal lawyer when the president faced four criminal indictments during his 2024 campaign, couldn’t discuss the details of the ongoing case against Omar but drew a contrast between the Minnesota Democrat’s treatment and the various gag orders imposed on Trump.

“To the extent that [Omar’s] commented on it, one of the things that she said is that we’re not going to keep her quiet, right? We’re not trying to keep her quiet,” Blanche told “Pod Force One” host Miranda Devine.

“There’s no effort by the Department of Justice, unlike the last Department of Justice that worked very hard to keep President Trump quiet by getting gag orders and the like – that’s not what we’re doing,” the attorney general added.

Former Special Counsel Jack Smith asked judges to place gag orders on Trump in the election interference and classified documents cases.

Smith was successful in the election interference case, but a judge denied the prosecutor's effort to keep Trump from discussing the classified documents case.

The president was also subjected to gag orders during his civil fraud and "hush money" trials in Manhattan.

Given Trump's treatment by the Biden DOJ and leftist district attorneys, Blanche accused Democrats "gaslighting the American people" when they suggest Trump is "weaponizing" the Department of Justice against the "Squad" congresswoman.

"If you compare – and we've spent a lot of time at the Department of Justice working on our anti-weaponization task force, just talking about what happened over the past several years beyond President Trump and his family – but if you want to talk about President Trump and his family, aside from the multiple indictments against the President in multiple jurisdictions, there's an attorney general in your state in New York that tried to destroy not only him, his family, his children, his business, okay, but yet we're weaponizing," he said.

"I don't think, I know, the American people see right through that."

Asked about Trump's mood when the justice system was coming down on him amid his efforts to get back in the White House, Blanche noted the president was "frustrated and mad and angry" but "never down."

"I remember when he had the mugshot taken in Atlanta, you would think that that would have been a down – he had his mugshot taken. A former President of the United States. The federal system, they didn't take his mugshot, and they didn't take it in Manhattan either. So, in three of the four cases, no mugshot, and it gets one in Atlanta. And I thought, 'Oh no,'" Blanche recalled.

"But what happens? He loved it," the attorney general continued. "It became the whole campaign. So even something that you would think would be, 'Wow, that must have been the darkest day,' not for him. Not for him. That became kind of a rallying cry for him."

An article by Miranda Devine titled “Ilhan Omar Is in Deep Trouble – That’s Why They Had Obama Parachute In” was posted at nypost.com on Oct. 22, 2026.

Barack Obama is like a firefighter parachuted in by the Democratic Party at times of crisis to put out fires.

So when he weighed in on Sunday on the federal investigation of Minnesota Rep. Ilhan Omar over potential allegations of immigration fraud and financial offenses, you just knew that the party is seriously worried about the national implications if she were to be indicted and potentially denaturalized and deported.

Railing against the “appalling” investigation, Obama claimed Omar was “a law-abiding elected official” targeted because she “has dared to criticize the president,” and we should all be “outraged” about the weaponization of the Justice Department.

“It is a basic principle of American democracy that the government can’t selectively target individuals simply because of their political beliefs or what they say.”

That’s quite some chutzpah from the former president who launched the Russia-hoax persecutions of Trump.

But when it comes to the far-left Somalian-born congresswoman from Minnesota, there have long been rumors that she married her brother for immigration purposes.

Republican donors in 2021 spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on private investigators to covertly obtain DNA samples of Omar and her second husband, Ahmed Nur Said Elmi, who was living in London.

The samples gathered from discarded Coca-Cola cans, hair and cigarette butts were submitted to Endeavor DNA Laboratories.

The test results stated there was a 99.999998 percent chance that Omar and her now ex-husband, Elmi, are siblings.

Probe picking up

The story never went anywhere at the time because, only hours after a Minnesota GOP operative posted the DNA evidence online, the FBI busted him on child sex-trafficking charges for which he was convicted and remains in prison.

But now the story has picked up steam, as federal prosecutors plan to use DNA evidence in their immigration case against Omar, sources told The Post's Josh Christenson this week.

And on Wednesday, for the first time, Omar's alias was revealed in a government motion filed in the DC District Court: "Ilhan Nur Said Elmi," the same surname as her alleged brother/husband.

Prosecutors called her "Congresswoman Ilhan Nur Said Elmi, a/k/a Ilhan Abdullahi Omar" when referring to the subject of the Oct. 12 search of her Washington, DC, residence.

Separate allegations have also emerged that Omar and her late father misrepresented her age to obtain American citizenship.

Federal investigators from Homeland Security Investigations and the DOJ reportedly seized Omar's phone during the search of her Minnesota home on Oct. 12 and have since questioned her sister Sahra Noor.

More than a dozen grand-jury subpoenas have been issued in the case.

The search warrant was approved by Magistrate Judge Matthew Sharbaugh, an Obama appointee and Hillary Clinton donor, which rather punctures Obama and Omar's claims of partisan lawfare.

Additionally, Rep James Comer, the Republican chair of the House Oversight Committee, claimed this week that Omar and husband Tim Mynett's winery was shut down in April "because of fraud" after allegedly selling empty barrels of wine to investors.

Comer began probing financial disclosures filed by Omar in February, questioning how her and Mynett's net worth went from $51,000 in 2023 to as much as $30 million in 2024, and then fell to five figures again after the Oversight inquiry began.

No gag orders

DC US Attorney Janine Pirro has said her office is probing Omar, 44, in a separate financial investigation.

Attorney General Todd Blanche told The Post this week that he would not comment on the "ongoing investigation, except to say that, to the extent that she's commented on it, one of the things that she said is that we're not going to keep her quiet.

"We're not trying to keep her quiet. There's no effort by the Department of Justice [to silence Omar], unlike the last Department of Justice that worked very hard to keep President Trump quiet by getting gag orders and the like."

Omar did go quiet for almost 10 days after the search of her house but emerged this week to ask for donations in a plaintive video filmed in her car.

“We’re not going to be intimidated. We’re not going to be silenced. We’re not going to be scared,” she said.

Minnesota’s Somali community has been a hot spot for immigration fraud investigations since at least 2008, when the State Department reportedly placed a moratorium on family reunification after finding DNA matches on people seeking refugee status as a family found biological relationships in fewer than 20 percent of cases.

In a state long viewed as a progressive incubator and which boasts the largest Somali population in the country, Democrats’ comfortable power base has been rocked by the Omar probe on top of multimillion-dollar welfare fraud scandals that have handed Republican newcomer Michele Tafoya a potent weapon as she closes in on leftist Lt. Gov. Peggy Flanagan in the US Senate race.

If Tafoya wins, it would be the first time in almost a quarter century that a Republican has taken a Minnesota Senate seat.

President Trump lit into Omar from the Oval Office this week, when asked if she could be deported.

“She could also go to jail,” he said. “This is just my opinion: I think she’s a sick, very dishonest person who hates our country, and she comes from a country that [is] a real s–thouse.”

Whether or not Omar is deported or goes to jail depends on the evidence, obviously, but if she were to be found guilty of immigration fraud, she could potentially be denaturalized and rendered ineligible to serve in Congress.

She would just be replaced by another Democrat, but her fate would serve as a deterrent for others.

In any case, the current investigation into one of MAGA’s most-loathed figures is symbolic of the determined progress the Trump administration has made on immigration.

Immigration drop

Trump is the first president since 1965 to preside over a net fall in immigration.

The border is closed, illegal aliens are exiting, vetting and quality control are back, and international welfare fraud networks are being busted.

More than 3 million illegal aliens have either been deported or chosen to go home, and the administration has revoked more than 300,000 visas of wrongdoers so far.

Yet polls show Democrats leading on immigration.

The latest New York Times/Siena poll found voters chose Democrats as the “party you trust to do a better job handling immigration” by 50 percent to the GOP’s 46 percent.

Why Republicans don’t upend perceptions and hammer home their victories is a mystery, because border security also is an “affordability” win.

More jobs for Americans, less pressure on housing, fewer welfare dependents and fraudsters, more productive newcomers.

Promises made, promises kept. It’s campaign malpractice that the party that flung open the border and let in as many as 20 million illegal aliens is winning on the issue.

An article by Michael Goodwin titled “Democrats Betrayal of Israel Fueled by Obama’s Wrath Toward the Jewish State” was posted at nypost.com on Oct. 20, 2026.

When Barack Obama was president and feuding with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu while apologizing to Arab potentates about America’s history in the region, a friend offered an observation.

To wit, that Obama was proving the truth of a deep suspicion among American conservatives that Democrats love Jews but secretly hate Israel.

Time and milestone events have passed since then, but the evidence that my friend was onto something important continues to grow by leaps and bounds.

Acceptable

So much so that the Dems’ hard turn against Israel is now dangerously close to a fundamental party doctrine.

And a reasonable explanation is that Obama made it acceptable and even a requirement for officials and candidates to condemn the Jewish state.

His animus ran deep when he was in the White House, but didn’t stop when he left office a decade ago.

Even now, the former president continues to stir the pot of hatred, as demonstrated by comments he made last week.

Accepting an honorary doctorate from Queen's University Belfast in Northern Ireland, Obama said, in reference to the creation of the state of Israel, that Jews "took land off people, and they were excessive. And those people understandably said, 'This is injustice and I want my land back.' "

By ignoring the fact that Jews were indigenous throughout the Middle East for thousands of years before the state of Israel was created by the United Nations partition in 1947, Obama comes off as willfully ignorant.

All the more so when he insists that "the attitude of Israel is, now that we are the strongest, the most technologically advanced in the region, then our security will depend on us simply doing whatever we need and taking whatever we want, and not making any concessions to anyone."

He twisted the knife by saying that Israel has conceded the "moral high ground."

He's one of those lefties who likes Israel when it's a victim, but hates it when it hits back and wins. He also avoids any mention of the historic Abraham Accords, because that would mean giving President Trump credit and -admitting that not all Muslims and Arabs hate Israel.

Bam-Mam link

His biased distortions recall the hateful ignorance that Mayor Mamdani often spews about Israel being an occupier and running an apartheid state.

It's not a coincidence that Obama has become a Mamdani pal and adviser.

Netanyahu responded to Obama by noting that the former president's argument is contrary to long-established facts.

"Our land is not stolen land. This is our homeland; it's called Judea. That's where Jews come from. We've been attached to it for thousands of years," the prime minister said.

A more thorough and devastating response to Obama came in a Wall Street Journal op-ed, where Elisha Wiesel asks and answers the critical questions the former president conveniently ignores.

"Was it excessive for the Jews of Hebron, a community that had prayed there for centuries, to be slaughtered by rioters in 1929, nearly 20 years before there was a Jewish state, an occupation or a West Bank settlement to blame?" Wiesel writes.

He goes on to ask, “Was it excessive for Jews to accept the United Nations’ 1947 partition plan while facing an impending invasion by five armies in 1948? To offer peace at Camp David in 2000, and again in 2008? To pull every soldier and settler out of Gaza in 2005?

“Is it excessive to want to live in peace?”

The writer’s authority on the subject is unassailable.

He is the son of the late Elie Wiesel, the survivor of Auschwitz and Buchenwald who won the Nobel Peace Prize for his writing and teaching about the Holocaust and his work as an international activist for human rights.

In his op-ed, Elisha Wiesel, a businessman and chairman of his parents’ foundation, recalls the strong bond his father built with Obama. In 2009, they visited Buchenwald with then-German Chancellor Angela Merkel.

But a rift grew over Obama’s dangerously soft nuclear deal with Iran, with Elie Wiesel attending a 2015 Netanyahu speech to Congress denouncing the deal.

According to the son, his father never again heard from Obama.

Still, the auditorium in the Obama Presidential Center in Chicago is named after Wiesel.

As the son writes, “The Elie Wiesel Auditorium must also stand as a warning, my father’s life was a testimony to what words can do. History is replete with speeches, lectures, editorials and textbooks turning neighbors into intruders and murder into justice.”

He concludes with his hope that Obama “reconsiders his words” about Israel’s founding, saying “it would be an act worthy of his friendship with my father.”

Abdul endorsement

Unfortunately, that’s the longest of long shots, especially now that Obama is endorsing Michigan’s radical Senate candidate, Abdul El-Sayed, and planning to campaign with him this weekend, when Michigan statewide early voting begins.

Obama’s move comes as El-Sayed drops the pretense that he is anything other than a hater of Israel.

In an interview with ABC, he declared that Israel is “not actually our friend,” then parroted the false claims, first made in The New York Times, that Israel pushed a reluctant Donald Trump into attacking Iran.

“An ally that takes your money to push you into wars you shouldn’t be fighting is not an ally,” said El-Sayed.

In another interview, he insisted “the government of Israel has done nothing but use us” and “has done terrible things with our money.”

He also said “the Israeli military has done heinous things, full war crimes, genocide. So I think we got to just get serious about whether or not we as a country should be subsidizing that government.”

Now that the fig leaf has been lifted, there can be no doubts: He and Obama are two of a kind.

An article by Seth J. Frantzman titled “Why Libya’s Embrace of Turkey’s Maritime Deal Reshapes the Mediterranean Alignment – Analysis” was posted at jpost.com on Oct. 22, 2026.

Libya’s eastern parliament approved a maritime boundary deal with Turkey on Tuesday, appearing to bolster Turkey’s claims to part of the Eastern Mediterranean.

The deal dates from 2019, when Turkey sought to exploit Libya’s divisions by laying claim to a maritime boundary that would ostensibly link Libya and Turkey via a maritime border off the coast of Crete. This clearly overlaps with Greek claims. However, it is at the heart of Ankara’s Mavi Vatan, or Blue Homeland policy, which asserts that Turkey claims a maritime zone that negates Greek claims to waterways between its islands.

Turkey is not going to take over these waters anytime soon. It also isn’t likely to be engaging in any kind of energy exploration off the coast of Crete. Libya is a divided and poor country. Therefore, the deal is more about symbolism. Turkey gets support from Libya, a country that can’t exercise its claims anyway.

This move increases tensions with Greece. However, Ankara may think that it can get some kind of concessions in the future. Either way, it means that any energy company that might want to explore a block of ocean off the coast of some Greek islands that overlap with Ankara’s claims may be wary of doing so. Thus, by asserting claims, Turkey can cause trouble and not have to do much more.

Increased tensions in eastern Mediterranean

When the deal took place in 2019, the Libyan government in Tripoli, which was called the Government of National Accord, was suffering setbacks on the battlefield against the Eastern/Tobruk-based administration aligned with General Khalifa Haftar's Libyan National Army (LNA).

After the deal, Turkey rushed support to Tripoli. Forces arrived, along with Turkish drones. Haftar's army was defeated in a battle at Watiya airbase in 2010.

"It has been fighting for more than a year to capture Tripoli, seat of the Government of National Accord (GNA), which is recognized by the United Nations and has moved onto the front foot in the war since January with military help from Turkey," France24 noted at the time. "The LNA, under Khalifa Haftar, is supported by the United Arab Emirates, Russia and Egypt."

Since 2020, Libya's frontlines have been mostly a stalemate. The Trump administration has been hoping for a deal in Libya. Le Monde noted in September that "after 15 years of keeping a low profile on Libya, Washington now wants to reconcile the rival authorities in the country's east and west by brokering a power-sharing agreement negotiated among a handful of local warlords.

Far from calming the nation, this initiative has triggered a frantic reshuffling of power dynamics and exposed the fragility of alliances on both sides."

The Libya deal with Turkey in 2019 was designed to give Ankara a reason to back Tripoli. This was successful, and Ankara got a foothold in Libya, and the Libyan government was able to push back Haftar's forces.

However, why has the deal been revived now?

Having the eastern Libyan parliament embrace the deal would appear to mean that Libya is now unified on this policy. The decision has angered several other countries.

- Egypt has condemned the decision.
- Greece and Israel have also condemned it.

"Israel strongly condemns the decision of the Libyan House of Representatives to ratify the Maritime Jurisdiction Memorandum between Turkey and Libya. This agreement infringes upon the sovereign rights of our close allies in the region. Regretfully, once again we see Turkey working to destabilize the Eastern Mediterranean region."

The Libya Observer notes that "the EU, Greece, Egypt and Israel have rejected the Libyan House of Representatives' ratification of the 2019 maritime agreement with Turkey, arguing that the deal violates international law and infringes on the sovereign rights of other countries in the Eastern Mediterranean."

Why did Libya decide now is a good time to make the decision?

With so many condemnations pouring in, why would Libya decide now is a good time to discuss this issue?

On the one hand, the new focus on the maritime claims could open up a new front in Turkey-Israel tensions. Turkey and Israel already have tensions over Syria and potentially over Somalia after Israel recognized Somaliland. Turkey has signed on to a new pact with Saudi Arabia and Pakistan. Meanwhile, it also has a deal with Indonesia, Qatar, and Pakistan to develop defense industrial production.

However, the tensions with Egypt and Libya over the deal also seem to create a challenge. Turkey and Egypt have been patching up their relations over the last several years. This comes after the countries were at odds over the toppling of Egyptian President Mohammed Morsi in 2013. In fact, when the deal was first announced in Libya in 2019, it appeared that Ankara and Cairo were involved in a proxy war in Libya. These days, Egypt is very close to Saudi Arabia and is considering backing it against the Houthis. Turkey and Riyadh are also allies.

How will the deal potentially create tensions between Cairo and Ankara and thus create challenges for Riyadh?

There are other issues at stake. Israel's Prime Minister recently laid out a national security doctrine. In his speech on October 18, he showed a map of the region. The map appeared similar to one created by the Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung, which is associated with the Social Democratic Party of Germany. The map shows Israel aligned with the UAE, a member of the Abraham Accords. The map has raised eyebrows because of the alliances it appears to sketch out for Israel.

"Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu unveiled a map of the wider Middle East showing his country and the UAE aligned with a paramilitary in Sudan, accused of committing genocide, and separatists in Libya, Yemen, and Somaliland," Middle East Eye noted.

Middle East Eye is hostile to Israel and usually sympathetic to Turkey and Qatar. Nevertheless, it makes a point about Libya that is worth considering.

If Israel was close to the eastern Libyan government in the past, then why would the eastern Libyans agree to the Turkish maritime deal?

Has this angered their friends in Cairo also?

What is afoot?

Is it just strange timing?

It will take time to see what happens with this latest maritime controversy. It could fade, just as the 2019 deal did. That deal led to some increased tensions in the Eastern Mediterranean.

However, it eventually seemed to be put on ice. Israel has increased its investment in its navy. It acquired new Sa'ar 6-class corvettes and submarines. Israel is now building five new Reshef-class vessels designed to replace the Sa'ar 4.5 ships.

Israel and Greece are also growing closer. Greece is procuring a number of Israeli air defense systems as part of the billion-dollar Achilles Shield program. Meanwhile, Morocco is also seeking to acquire Israeli defense systems. Clearly, this shows that Israel has more influence in the Mediterranean.

What comes next with the Libyans?

The US might get the Libyans to unite. The US has also pushed for a ceasefire in Sudan. There are other issues in the Horn of Africa. Ethiopia and Eritrea have tensions, and there are rebel groups in Ethiopia.

With so many new initiatives in the region, such as the Saudi-Turkey-Pakistan deal and the new Qatar-Indonesia-Turkey-Pakistan deal, the Turkish-Libya maritime deal is merely one more stepping stone for countries seeking to invest in a new regional order.

This comes amid concerns about the US role in the region in the future. With reports that the US and Israel are preparing a new round of strikes on Iran and the US potentially withdrawing some diplomatic staff and moving around military assets, many things are in motion.

For instance, NBC noted that the "US military has quietly been scaling back its troop presence at bases across the Middle East in recent days." This appears to affect troops stationed in Jordan, Qatar, and Kuwait.

What happens next in the Eastern Mediterranean is anyone's guess. The last decade has shown that despite many agreements and even talk of new energy corridors and pipelines, it takes time for any new initiative to take shape.

- As long as Israel and Turkey have tensions, and also Greece, Libya, Egypt, Turkey, and Cyprus do not agree, there can't be a lot of energy development or new pipelines in these areas where conflicting overlapping claims take place.
- No one is going to invest in expensive pipelines when they could end up being attacked, for instance.
- The Iranian attacks in the Strait of Hormuz and also the Iranian-backed militias attacking the East-West pipeline in Saudi Arabia already show how vulnerable energy trade routes are to cheap drones.

The countries of the Eastern Mediterranean know this.

An article by Kamai Sultan titled “US Radicals Who Traveled to France to Join Cop-Bashing Protests Reveal Plans to ‘Raise Hell’ on Our Shores” was posted at nypost.com on Oct. 20, 2026.

A Minnesota rapper who traveled to France to join escalating riots has urged white people to “raise hell” and “f–k s–t up” as part of a revolution on American soil, The Post discovered. And communist-linked groups in the US may be working to bring that hell to the nation’s capital.

Artist Tufawon, whose real name is Rafael Gonzalez Jr., joined Swedish activist Greta Thunberg outside Paul Éluard, the high school at the heart of the leftist protests marred by violence, looting and arson.

He addressed balaclava-clad protesters before performing his song “No One Is Illegal,” and riling up the crowd with chants of “f–k ICE” and “ICE out.”

“All power to the people,” the 40-year-old from Minneapolis boasted to his fans on Facebook. “After returning home from France I can clearly see how we need to become far more radicalized in the states. We have to be more enraged. Our comfort is hindering our progress. It really and truly needs to be white people that go outside and raise hell if we want to see revolution. There are far too many neoliberals that are just as bad as the fascists. The French have figured this out a while ago. Now it’s time to take it to the next level. Go f–k s–t up white people. It’s your time.”

“They said they were going to globalize the intifada and now they have,” foreign policy expert at the Heritage Foundation Mike Gonzalez told The Post. “What you are seeing here is the red-green alliance, the marriage of convenience between leftists and Marxists. They have a common enemy which is the Judeo-Christian democratic West. They want to dismantle it.”

Tufawon, who is part Native American and has appeared on the popular radio show The Breakfast Club, claimed that the perceived underfunding of schools and declining public services in France is similar in the US.

“I’m incredibly inspired by what’s going on with the student activists and organizers,” the rapper said. “The most marginalized students, the brown and the black students are the ones that are feeling the implications the worst.”

Tufawon urged fellow protesters in the US to “take influence from the French” so that they can defeat the “same common enemy”.

“It is dangerous rhetoric,” Gonzalez told The Post. “If people listen to him and act upon what he is recommending it is very dangerous.”

Tufawon told The Post his trip to Saint-Denis was unplanned and “very spontaneous”. He said he was in Paris on vacation and left before last weekend’s violent protests.

He added that his Facebook posts “fall under figurative speech and in no way, shape or form did I use them with the intent to incite violence of any kind”.

The rioters have targeted France’s cultural heritage, with thugs torching the 140-year-old city hall in the southern city of Limoges, and some have hit stores including Louis Vuitton, Hermes, and Apple as French authorities appeared to lose control of the streets.

Meanwhile, CCP-linked nonprofit Code Pink, backed by Neville Singham, has wasted no time using the unrest in France to plan similar protests in America, with a “taxpayer uprising” planned in Washington, DC, between November 10 and 12.

The feminist anti-American group has called on protestors to flood the halls of Congress in what it calls “three days of peaceful resistance.”

But its leader Jodie Evans, 72, a radical Hollywood filmmaker and wife of Shanghai-based tech millionaire Singham, called on “people to look at France” as she urged Americans to take to the streets.

CodePink has been accused of radicalizing a new generation of activists by spending millions of dollars to teach anti-American rhetoric.

Elsewhere, the Singham-linked Party for Socialism and Liberation, based in the US, has committed to joining French protesters in their “struggle for a socialist future”.

“We in the United States stand with you in your struggle against capitalist austerity,” the group proudly wrote on Instagram. “We stand with you, because we too demand money for housing and education, instead of war and occupation. Vive la commune! Vive la révolution!”

Gonzalez, who fled communist Cuba in the 1970s, insists that China, Cuba and Iran are directing these protests. “These activists are taught to despise their own society,” he told The Post. “The groups involved in elevating the French protests, a lot are in the Singham network.”

Police made 2,500 arrests across France, while nearly 1,000 officers were injured over the weekend. French President Macron said that “nothing justifies” the riots his country has seen and blamed the “unrestrained violence” on “insurrectionist elements from radical far-left groups, joined by numerous criminals.”

His comments came after Vice President JD Vance blamed mass immigration for the violent scenes in France.

“Western liberals imported the Third World into France and other countries in the name of diversity and compassion. They ignored fundamental questions of assimilation and compatibility. They were told it would lead to this, and they didn’t listen,” he wrote on X.

“I pray that France, a beautiful country of amazing people, will stop this madness before more of its landmarks burn,” Vance added.

An article by Emily Kopp titled “Covid Was Just a Warm-Up for Biden’s ‘Censorship-Industrial Complex’ ” was posted at dailycaller.com on Oct. 19, 2026. Following are excerpts of the article.

The Biden administration’s “Censorship-Industrial Complex” had grander ambitions than controlling just what Americans said about COVID-19, new documents obtained by the Daily Caller News Foundation show.

U.S. Surgeon General Vivek Murthy — who served as the “nation’s doctor” shoulder-to-shoulder with Anthony Fauci during the COVID pandemic — sought to apply “maximum pressure” on social media companies like Meta and to broadly manage “health and medical misinformation” across American society.

In May 2026, the Trump administration announced a settlement agreement in its lawsuit over the suppression of conservatives’ First Amendment rights, championing it as “an important milestone in the battle for free speech in our country.”

The documents draw from the summer of 2021, when the Censorship-Industrial Complex was at the height of its powers.

Murthy did not reply to requests for comment.

Elon Musk’s collaboration with journalists to reveal the “Twitter Files” and a congressional investigation into Meta, the owner of Facebook, revealed internal company communications about the censorship regime. The new documents reveal more about the government’s side of the pressure campaign.

Protect the Public’s Trust, a nonpartisan good governance group, obtained the documents through the Freedom of Information Act and shared them exclusively with the DCNF.

“These documents show an administration consumed by its campaign against what it termed ‘misinformation,’ potentially at the expense of other priorities, and intent on controlling what Americans could say,” said Protect the Public’s Trust Communications Director Alexa Moutevelis in a statement to the DCNF.

Many of the documents show Murthy's office preparing to release a formal advisory on misinformation on July 14, 2021.

"They're killing people," Biden said two days later, on July 16, 2021, bringing the weight of the White House down on companies to restrict speech.

In the view of Murthy's team, censoring social media was not a temporary emergency measure, the documents indicate. It was part and parcel of public health. The government censored memes, jokes and even factual information it did not like.

"The Surgeon General wants us to remove true information about side effects," a Meta employee wrote on July 21, 2021, the congressional investigation showed.

The documents show the Biden administration had a "broad" vision for its new censorship tools.

"May be worth emphasizing that you don't just see this as a COVID-related issue (i.e., it's health and medical misinformation, not just COVID-related misinformation)," wrote Murthy's policy adviser Daniel Tartakovsky in May 2021. "More broadly, it gets at the issue of how social media impacts people, especially young people."

Tartakovsky did not respond to a request for comment.

A memo to Murthy's "misinformation tiger team" from the summer of 2021 shows the zeal with which Murthy's office scrubbed the Internet of negative posts about COVID vaccines. They called it the "Nick Clegg approach" after Meta's president of global affairs.

Evidence unearthed by the congressional investigation showed Clegg understood that the government's requests violated the First Amendment. But Clegg said that Meta had "bigger fish we have to fry" with the government and that the company should consider "how we can be responsive to concerns."

Murthy's office expressed a sense of triumph at the temporary suspension of Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene as "momentum" towards booting more accounts, the memo shows.

Facebook and Amazon employees internally said the Biden administration was applying pressure" to censor opinions the government did not like. The new documents show the government internally described it as "pressure" too.

Biden and Murthy had "put tech and stakeholders alike on notice that health misinformation was a significant public health issue," the memo states.

Murthy's office groused that it could not obtain more user data from Facebook.

“FB has insurmountable advantage on data, which means we’ll never know if they are on the level,” the memo states. It proposed “to hold FB and other tech providers accountable with push on more open data.”

Murthy’s office internally admitted in the memo that the misinformation crackdown “politicizes office by further engaging in social media/censorship war.”

Misinformation

While the surgeon general’s office has traditionally focused on providing good health information, Murthy’s office was for at least a two to four week period “unilaterally focused on misinformation” in the lead up to the July 2021 advisory, another email shows.

The documents show Murthy’s talking points that same summer for various media interviews and stakeholder meetings, and they include claims with a dearth of evidence.

“Simply put, vaccine requirements will stop the spread of variants and keep more people safe,” read Murthy’s prepared talking points in August 2021.

His talking points state that “if you are unvaccinated, you present a problem to yourself, family, and those with whom you work.”

After the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) granted the COVID vaccine full approval in August 2021, aides told Murthy to avoid “providing minute details on the specifics of the FDA approval process.”

Murthy’s talking points urged children to wear masks, even if states declined to implement mandates.

“Parents, have your kids wear masks,” the talking points read.

Murthy’s talking points address the social media censorship. Talking points prepared for a “Stakeholder Q&A” stated that scrubbing the Internet of opinions disfavored by the government represented “the opposite” of cancel culture.

“Isn’t this just a part of cancel culture?” reads a question that Murthy prepared for under a headline reading “Tough Q&A.”

“No, it’s the opposite actually,” Murthy’s prepared reply reads.

An article by Richard Crandall titled “Democrats and Muslims: The Doomed Alliance” was posted at americanthinker.com on Oct. 19, 2026.

Democrats hate our country’s Constitution, history, laws, freedoms, prosperity, and success. Because of this hatred, they are planning and working toward America’s destruction. However, because of this extreme position, many traditional supporters are starting to defect, creating the need for Democrats to form alliances with new groups that share their hatred of and desire to destroy America.

One of these alliances is with Muslims. This alliance can be seen in the growing number of Muslims Democrats are running for political office. Some Democrats, such as AOC, Flanagan, Gillibrand, and Hochul, have gone beyond forming an alliance; they have submitted to Islam by wearing the Muslim head covering. Another Democrat who has submitted to Islam is Klobuchar, who is running for governor in Minnesota. In 2017, she addressed her Muslim supporters in Somali while holding an upside-down American flag. And the attorney general of Michigan has endorsed the Muslim running for the U.S. Senate, despite the candidate having nothing but hatred, contempt, and disgust for her being Jewish, a woman, a lesbian, and a woman in power.

This unholy alliance with Muslims is one Democrats will regret, because their party will be destroyed, and Muslims will implement what Democrats claim to hate about this country.

Women

Democrats hate this country because of its treatment of women, which they claim is sexist, misogynistic, and patriarchal. How would it be different under Muslim rule?

Muslims believe that the Islamic god made men superior to women in intelligence and religion. Because of this superiority, men excel over women and are to oversee them. Because of their inferiority, women are described as evil omens, domestic animals, toys, and prisoners of their husbands. Women are seen as so degraded, corrupt, and disgusting that if a woman walks in front of a praying man, his prayers are nullified and must be repeated.

To Muslims, the superiority of men over women is obvious because all the prophets were men, and the legal testimony of women is worth only half that of men. Even a woman who has been raped needs four males to confirm her allegations. If four males fail to confirm the rape, the woman can be charged with slander. Another possible outcome is that if the woman is married, she can be charged with adultery, since she confessed that she had sex outside her marriage. As an adulteress, she can be stoned to death. If she is not married, then she has admitted to fornication and can be killed, whipped, or banished.

Because they are inferior to men, women should never hold political or leadership roles. Women are ordered to cover themselves, leaving only their eyes, or one eye, visible so they can see the way. Female circumcision is mandatory.

Wives are described as “enemies” because they may interfere with a husband’s ability to be obedient to the Islamic god. In fact, wives may exist only to test a husband’s degree of belief.

Within Islam, there is no concept of marital rape. Women exist for a husband to “cultivate” when he desires, and the wife must submit, even while cooking or riding a camel. Consent from the wife does not exist, partly because women are subordinate to men and partly because Islam holds that unreleased sperm causes harm.

It is easy for a Muslim man to divorce his wife. It is possible, though more difficult, for a Muslim woman to divorce her husband. However, Muhammad said that wives who seek a divorce are hypocrites and that hypocrites go to hell.

Girls are married to men. Muhammad, the perfect man whose behavior Muslims must follow to enter paradise, married a six-year-old girl and consummated the marriage when she was nine.

Wives are beaten if they deviate, disobey, ignore, or dislike their husbands. Wives are obligated to obey and please their husbands. If a husband is displeased with his wife, she will not enter paradise, but will go to hell. Muhammad said the majority of those in hell are women, which may reflect the overall status of Muslim marriages.

If a Muslim man captures or subdues a non-Muslim woman, she becomes his right-hand possession and can be raped. If Muslims take control, there will be thousands of Muslim rape gangs operating with impunity, as there have been in England for decades.

Discrimination

Another complaint from Democrats is that we live in a country where people face discrimination based on sex, race, ethnicity, nationality, age, religion, and sexual orientation.

But Islam also discriminates, especially against non-Muslims, who have few rights in Muslim society. Non-Muslims must live as conquered people, with low status and high taxes. And there is no retaliation if a Muslim kills a non-Muslim.

Stolen Land

Another grievance is that we live on stolen land. Islam’s history of conquering and colonizing land through jihad is never mentioned. Islam began as a small sect in Mecca around 610. The number of Muslims remained modest until the Islamic god gave Muslims not just the right, but the duty to loot and rape non-Muslims. This opportunity to loot and rape women appealed to tens of thousands of Arab men whose only other career option was to live in poverty while herding camels. Within decades of Muhammad's death, Islamic armies had looted, raped, and conquered most of the Middle East and northern Africa. The conquest continues, and France and England are about to become stolen land.

Those complaining about living on stolen land are about to live on stolen land with a new thief, who, in speeches, will not offer a land acknowledgment.

Slavery

A major criticism of the country concerns its legacy of slavery, an issue complicated by the fact that Muslims are slaves of the Islamic god. If slavery is bad, then isn't the same true of Islam? However, Democrats claim they are talking about those involuntarily enslaved.

Muhammad, whose behavior Muslims believe is perfect and must be followed, owned, bought, sold, traded, and raped slaves. Additionally, the Koran, which Muhammad said is perfected and can't be changed, legalized slavery.

In Islam, slaves can be bred, raped, beaten, whipped, or killed with impunity by their owners. They cannot marry without their owners' permission and cannot testify in court.

Same-Sex Relationships and the Transgendered

Democrats are critical of the treatment of gay, lesbian, and transgender people.

In Islam, engaging in a same-sex relationship is considered the "worst sin," for which the penalty is death, either by stoning or by being thrown from a high place. Regarding trans people, Muhammad said that effeminate men and masculine women are cursed, meaning they will go to hell.

Isn't This Where We Started?

Under Muslim control, Democrats would hate the country because of how women are treated; the discrimination against certain groups; the fact that they live on stolen land that permits slavery; and the treatment of gays, lesbians, and transgender people. There would be one difference: This time, they would not be able to criticize what they hate because Islam does not tolerate criticism.

An article by John F. DiLeo titled "The Tariff Issue and the Midterms" was posted at americanthinker.com on Oct. 21, 2026.

Democrat activists hope to make the 2026 elections all about President Trump's tariff policy, which is understandable, considering how unpopular the Democrat party's own platform has become in recent years.

But there are a lot of misunderstandings about international trade, so let's take a look at a few of them as Election Day approaches.

Q: What are duties and tariffs?

A: Most countries assess taxes on most goods coming in from other countries. There's a basic import duty, usually a percentage of the overseas vendor's sale price, and then there are sometimes other tariffs on top of that. The two terms are used almost interchangeably; in the USA, the basic duty, which is commodity-based, ranges from zero to about twenty percent, and usually averages around 5 percent. Most of the other taxes on imports are usually just called tariffs.

These are almost all "ad valorem" (percentages of value), based on the price that the USA importer pays to the foreign exporter. Generally, the USA charges lower duties than most other countries. President Trump has not changed our duty rates at all; he has focused on implementing additional tariffs to protect our manufacturing sector, especially against China.

Q: But aren't these 20-percent, and 30-percent, and 50-percent tariffs huge hits to the American consumer?

A: Well, they would be, if the consumer were paying such high rates. But the consumer doesn't pay that kind of money. Let's remember how duties and tariffs are crafted.

Picture an American company that designs a product — like a washing machine or power drill or vacuum cleaner — and then selects a Chinese contract assembler to make it.

If you hear that the tariffs on these Chinese products are 30 or 40 or 50 percent, you're being led to assume that's a third or a half of the price you're paying when you buy the item at Walmart or Home Depot or Best Buy. But it's not. It doesn't work that way.

The American importer is paying that 30, 40, or even 50 percent on his wholesale price to the Chinese vendor. He then brings it to his U.S. warehouse, and resells it to that U.S. big box chain, delivering it to the chain's distribution center. Then the chain ships it to the retail store where you shop.

If your retail purchase price is $200, the Chinese contract manufacturer probably got just $50 for it, and that's the price that the tariffs were assessed upon. So the 30, or 40, or 50 percent is on the $50 wholesale price, not on the $200 retail price in the store.

The press gives us the impression that when we buy something at the store for $200, almost half of that is Trump's tariffs. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The tariffs are usually a sixth, or an eighth, or even a tenth of the retail price you're paying at the store.

The difference between the Chinese cost of the product and the retailer's total sale price to you is all the other things that go into modern commerce — the design engineering, transportation and distribution, advertising, retail service, etc. That's why the tariffs haven't been as inflationary as opponents (who don't understand international trade) had predicted.

Q: But if tariffs are a smaller piece of the consumer good than we've been given to believe, then why bother with them at all?

A: Because the tariffs aren't really in place to alter your purchasing decisions. They're there to alter that first U.S. company's purchasing decision.

For that first company, the importer, it is a substantial amount — substantial enough, hopefully, to change his behavior.

Let's say a company is trying to decide between hiring a U.S. contract assembler to make a product for him and hiring a contract assembler in China. Maybe the Chinese company will do it for $50, but an American company would charge $70.

Well, $50 is cheapest, so the American company is tempted to go with the Chinese vendor at first, tolerating the slow transportation and long lead times of buying from China because of the apparent savings. That's how we lost so much manufacturing over the past 40 years.

But add another 40 percent in tariffs on Chinese goods, and the $50 Chinese product now costs him $70. That 40-percent tariff has made a switch to the American contract manufacturer cost-effective, creating the manufacturing jobs here in the United States instead of creating jobs in China.

This is the primary goal of the Trump tariff policy: to change the cost-benefit analysis for American businesses from being encouraged to outsource purchases to China, and to instead be encouraged to re-source those purchases to fellow American companies.

It does take time to develop new American sources. It took us a century to gradually lose so much of our manufacturing capacity to the Third World. It's not going to all come back in four years.

So there is pain in the meantime, but federal tax and regulatory reforms (such as those in the Big Beautiful Bill of 2025) are making the development of new American manufacturing options possible more quickly. The differences in such growth in red states versus blue ones is significant, as blue states remain hostile to industry and employment.

Q: What about the claim that other countries' tariffs are lower than ours, so the "reciprocity" claim is untrue?

A: Oh, tariff barriers are far from the worst barriers in international trade. Non-tariff barriers are the real enemy.

Try exporting an American-made appliance to Europe, for example. You need to hire a European "Authorized Representative" and submit each model for expensive C.E. or UKCA testing and approval, and mold that mark and code into your product, and reprint your packaging to include the name and contact info of the importer and distributor in each country, and redo the marking every couple of years as they change packaging and recycling declaration requirements — costing tens of thousands of dollars, if not hundreds of thousands — before you make your first sale.

Such regulatory barriers keep American businesses from even trying.

We Americans don't believe in such unfair restraints on trade (outside seriously risky products like some medications and foodstuffs), so we are reciprocating with tariffs that are far more predictable and fair.

Q: Is the difference really worth it? So what if the Chinese are paid relatively little, and we're still making money on engineering, transportation, warehousing, and advertising over here?

A: Well, there's the national security side of it, to start: China is our biggest enemy on Earth, constantly threatening our allies like Taiwan and other neighbors while supplying and supporting Iran, North Korea, and our other enemies. Funding Chinese factories is the same as funding China's war machine. And depending on China instead of being self-sufficient puts us in severe danger when that war inevitably comes.

But there's also the commercial side of it: China manipulates its currency, practices slave labor and child labor, and steals our intellectual property. American companies that hire Chinese assemblers soon discover knockoffs popping up everywhere. Stop outsourcing to China, and you have fewer knockoffs to compete with.

Most important is the employment side of it. The American middle class was built on factory jobs — the foundries, stampers, molders, and assemblers, the companies that transform metal ore and plastic resin into machines, tools, appliances, clothing, housewares, and everything else that completes our standard of living.

Outsourcing manufacturing to the Third World may allow some desk jobs and warehouse jobs to remain here — engineers and call centers, accountants and advertising agencies — but it kills most other routes to a middle-class life. With factories, people lacking college degrees can start on the assembly line as the first rung of a career path, moving up to tool and die maker or engineer, quality control or foreman, or moving from the plant into the office.

Only with the return of the American factory environment can America's employment range — and the broad path to the American dream — become complete again.

That's the real goal of the Republican tariff program. The question voters should be asking is, "Why on earth are Democrats so opposed to this goal?"

Isaiah 55:6-11—"Seek you the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. 'For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,' says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word by that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it."
