Luke 21:34-36—"But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man" (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Stephen Moore titled "Fossil Fuels Are Back—Everywhere Except in the USA" was posted at townhall.com on Oct. 5, 2021. Following is the article.

While the greens in America, including their champion zealot, President Joe Biden, howl their primal screams over climate change, the rest of the world is turning to coal. The dark stuff. The satanic fuel. But it's back big-time across the globe.

So is old-fashioned petroleum.

Bloomberg reported last week that because of high natural gas prices due to a reduced supply from the United States, Europe is "snapping up coal." It's cheaper now, and compared to wind and solar it's a much more reliable source of power.

Euroland is also starting to give up on the green energy dreams that are still alive and well in the minds of American pols in Washington, D.C. Great Britain and Germany have experienced soaring energy prices at the gas pump and in electric utility costs for homes, factories and businesses. Some relief will come from natural gas that will eventually be supplied to Europe via a gas pipeline from Siberia. Don't forget, Biden greenlighted that pipeline just a few weeks after killing the Keystone XL pipeline and thousands of jobs here at home.

Meanwhile, the nation with three times the population of the U.S. and the world's largest energy consumer, China, is all-in on coal. The Daily Mail reported that China's 1,000 coal plants "make a mockery" of any promises by Beijing that China will move to renewable energy. Coal is by far the largest source of energy in China, and new plants are being built every week. This is, as the Telegraph put it, "Beijing's dirtiest little secret."

Despite those solemn pledges for China to clean up its air, the Chinese emit three to four times more greenhouse gases into the atmosphere each year than does the U.S.

Then there is the situation with oil. The price has been rising as demand remains steady. The Wall Street Journal reported that OPEC nations predict that demand for their oil will at least double over the coming decades. That doesn't sound like a fuel source that is going out of fashion.

This is all happening just at the very moment that Democrats in Congress are about to pass green energy bills that will cripple our fossil fuel industry. These fuels could make America the energy powerhouse of the 21st century. It's hard to see how dismantling U.S. oil, gas and coal will stop the rise of the oceans when the rest of the world's addiction seems incurable.

Last month, Biden went to the United Nations and lectured the world about an international partnership to combat climate change. You could almost hear the snickering in the audience of foreign diplomats.

It is a foreign and economic policy driven not by realism, but by fantasy. Biden sees the world as he wants it to be, not as it is. He reminds me of Britain's Neville Chamberlain circa 1939, who believed Hitler's promises of "peace in our time," up to the moment the bombs started falling like rain on London.

The shame of all this is that when Trump left office, America was all but energy self-sufficient and even an energy exporter. Thanks to the shale oil and gas revolution, the U.S. has access to more oil and gas (and coal) than any other nation. We have many hundreds of years of energy supply.

Now that the rest of the world is thirsting for U.S. oil, gas and coal, the Left wants to shut down all domestic production by 2035, even though our fossil fuels are the cleanest.

So, instead of the world's energy coming from the U.S., it will come from Russia, Saudi Arabia and the OPEC nations.

To borrow a Trumpism: Those nations are now laughing behind our backs.

Looking back to April, an article by Lily Tang Williams titled "A Chinese Immigrant's Warning on Critical Race Theory" was posted at unionleader.com on April 15, 2021. Following is the article.

MY NAME is Lily Tang Williams and I grew up in Communist China under the reign of Mao Zedong during a painful era called the Cultural Revolution. The origins of the Cultural Revolution preceded my birth, when a Western ideology, Marxism, was injected into China by Mao.

Marxism would later evolve into Maoism. Like all forms of Marxism, Maoism epitomized the worst in humanity: division, hatred, envy, and vengeance. Unlike most revolutions, the Cultural Revolution was not a war against a regime, but a regime-inspired holy war against its own people, society, and culture. Mao's Cultural Revolution sought to destroy the "Four Olds": traditional ideas, culture, habits, and customs. Through it, he led a campaign to silence dissident opinions, purge his political enemies, and, in the process, destroy age-old social institutions and gain absolute power.

Identity politics was a hallmark of Maoism, dividing people into five "red classes" and five "black classes." The "red classes" were identified as poor and lower-middle-class peasants, workers, revolutionary soldiers, cadres, and revolutionary martyrs. The "black classes" were landlords, rich farmers, counter-revolutionaries, bad-influencers, and rightists. Mao shut down the schools and universities, urged the Red Guard (urban youth) to hate and hold "Struggle Sessions" to shame the black classes publicly by forcing them to self-criticize, confess their "crimes" and denounce themselves. The consequences for defiance were assault, torture, or imprisonment at a "re-education" camp. Some children were so brainwashed they would even change their surnames, cut ties with their families, and publicly denounce and betray their families.

Mao's Cultural Revolution was a top to bottom orchestrated social justice movement like no other. An estimated 20 million Chinese died during the Cultural Revolution due to Mao's toxic ideas and murderous policies. Today in China, no memorials or museums to those of this forgotten holocaust exist; even the phrase "Cultural Revolution" is banned on the Internet by the Chinese government.

In today's populist, racially-charged "social justice" movement in America, I see the shadows of the Cultural Revolution in Critical Race Theory (CRT), and in the ideology that inspired this movement. For those unfamiliar with CRT, it is the idea that American law, society, and institutions are inherently racist. Whites are born racist because of the cultural domination by White people in furthering their own economic and political power at the expense of "people of color."

After I left China for America at the age of 23, arriving in Austin with nothing more than a suitcase, I discovered Texas to be filled with the kindest and most generous people I have ever encountered. There I was, a stranger in a strange land, being invited into American homes and offered help. Now, 33 years later, I am living the American Dream. This is not something one would expect to happen to a non-White, non-English speaking foreigner in a country that is "systemically racist." My experience is certainly not unique. Many people of color agree with me that America has made huge progress since the Civil Rights Movement.

While CRT and Maoism are not identical ideologies, they share five features in common. The first is the development of a quasi-religious following of zealous youth devoted to unrestrained destruction of what is old to advance that which is new. Whereas Mao called for traditional Chinese culture to be destroyed, CRT calls for "dismantling systems of oppression," which, like Mao's definition of “the old,” is subjectively dependent on what they define as oppressive. The second feature is that both ideologies reduce complex problems to the classical Marxist dichotomy: society is constituted of those who “oppress” and those who are oppressed. CRT divides society into oppressor class (White) and oppressed class (people of color). Third, the processes in CRT training are similar to those in Struggle Sessions: writing self-criticizing letters, apologizing for being born White, public shaming, instilling guilt and hatred. Fourth, both ideologies are taught to school-age children without parental consent. The students are made to feel ashamed and guilty about their family history going back generations. Children are taught and trained to be “social justice warriors” by advocating for racial equity, which is about wealth redistribution. Fifth, the chaos, violence, identity politics and social division conjured up by both ideologies open the way for political factions to systematically divide and conquer until usurpation of the existing political system is one check-mate away.

I genuinely believed that the spirit of American individualism would resist the Siren’s song of Marxism that I left behind. I was naïve. It once again returns under a different name—as it always does—and now threatens to poison America, my refuge. This time, however, I have nowhere to run. I plead with you, learn from this immigrant’s story and the lessons of history—fight back.

An article by Staff titled “Massive ‘Pandora Papers’ Probe Finds Leaders, Ex-Leaders Hiding Trillion in U.S., Worldwide” was posted at justthenews.com on Oct. 4, 2021. Following is the article.

Hundreds of world leaders and powerful politicians—including Jordan’s King Abdullah II and former U.K. Prime Minister Tony Blair—have been hiding investments in mansions, yachts and other assets for the past quarter-century, according to a review of nearly 12 million files obtained from 14 firms worldwide.

The report was released Sunday by the International Consortium of Investigative Journalists and also uncovered information on billionaires, celebrities, religious leaders and drug dealers.

Compiling the so-called “Pandora Papers” report involved 600 journalists from 150 media outlets in 117 countries, according to the Associated Press.

The roughly 330 current and former politicians identified as beneficiaries of the secret, offshore accounts to shield assets collectively worth trillions of dollars also includes Czech Republic Prime Minister Andrej Babis, Kenyan President Uhuru Kenyatta, Ecuador’s President Guillermo Lasso, and associates of Pakistani Prime Minister Imran Khan and Russian President Vladimir Putin.

The billionaires identified in the report include Robert T. Brockman, the former CEO of software maker Reynolds & Reynolds, the wire service also reports.

The investigation looked into accounts registered in such familiar offshore havens as Belize, Hong Kong and the British Virgin Islands but also found them in trusts established in the U.S., including 81 in South Dakota and 37 in Florida.

The investigation found advisers helped King Abdullah set up at least three dozen shell companies from 1995 to 2017, helping the monarch buy 14 homes worth more than $106 million in the U.S. and the U.K. One was a $23 million California ocean-view property bought in 2017 through a British Virgin Islands company.

There was no immediate comment from Jordan's Royal Palace, also according to the Associated Press.

An article by Emilia Diaz-Struck, Delphine Reuter, Agustin Armendariz, Jelena Cosic, Jesus Escudero, Miguel Fiandor Gutierrez, Mago Torres, Karrie Kehoe, Margot Williams, Denise Hassanzade Ajiri and Sean McGoey titled "Pandora Papers: An Offshore Data Tsunami" was posted at icij.org (International Consortium of Investigative Journalists) on Oct. 3, 2021. Following are excerpts of the article.

A 2.94 terabyte data trove exposes the offshore secrets of wealthy elites from more than 200 countries and territories. These are people who use tax and secrecy havens to buy property and hide assets; many avoid taxes and worse. They include more than 330 politicians and 130 Forbes billionaires, as well as celebrities, fraudsters, drug dealers, royal family members and leaders of religious groups around the world.

The International Consortium of Investigative Journalists spent more than a year structuring, researching and analyzing the more than 11.9 million records in the Pandora Papers leak. The task involved three main elements: journalists, technology and time.

What form did the data come in?

The 11.9 million-plus records were largely unstructured. More than half of the files (6.4 million) were text documents, including more than 4 million PDFs, some of which ran to more than 10,000-pages. The documents included passports, bank statements, tax declarations, company incorporation records, real estate contracts and due diligence questionnaires. There were also more than 4.1 million images and emails in the leak.

Spreadsheets made up 4% of the documents, or more than 467,000. The records also included slide shows and audio and video files.

- Documents—6,406,119 files
- Images—2,937,513 files
- Emails—1,205,716 files
- Spreadsheets—467,405 files
- Presentations—8,511 files
- Audios—3,497 files
- Videos—1,421 files
- Others—873,494 files

How many politicians did each firm in the Pandora Papers serve?

A dozen different offshore firms provided services to 336 politicians identified in the investigation.

- Alcogal—161
- Trident Trust—97
- Asiacti Trust—25
- OMC Group—21
- SFM—18
- DADLAW—17
- Alpha—11
- Fidelity—10
- AABOL—8
- Commerce BVI—4
- Cititrust—3
- GDG—2

An article by Michael Brown titled “Political Hypocrisy, the War on Churches and Covid” was posted at townhall.com on Sept. 19, 2021. Following is the article.

At no time in memory have we seen more glaring examples of double standards, blatant hypocrisy, and attacks on religious freedoms than we have during the last two years with the covid outbreak.

It started last year during the lockdowns when liquor stores and abortion clinics were allowed to operate, seeing that they provided “essential services,” while church gatherings were banned and shut down.

Then, when crowds of thousands flooded our streets during major race protests and riots, over 1,200 medical professionals signed an open letter supporting the protests. Their argument was that racism was more deadly than covid. Consequently, protesting racism, even at the risk of getting and spreading covid, was a healthy thing to do.

To quote their letter directly, “as public health advocates, we do not condemn these gatherings as risky for covid-19 transmission. We support them as vital to the national public health and to the threatened health specifically of Black people in the United States. We can show that support by facilitating safest protesting practices without detracting from demonstrators’ ability to gather and demand change. This should not be confused with a permissive stance on all gatherings, particularly protests against stay-home orders.”

So, go ahead and protest—as long as it’s against racism—and risk spreading death and disease to many. After all, it’s for a good cause! As for everyone else, stay home and stay locked down.

The most recent example of mind-blowing hypocrisy goes one step further, as the very same week that the Biden administration announced a massive vaccine mandate, press secretary Jen Psaki acknowledged that immigrants pouring through our borders did not need to be vaccinated. Can anyone possibly explain the rationale behind this? Anyone?

Fox News reporter Peter Doocy had asked, "It [meaning, the vaccine] is a requirement for people at a business with more than 100 people. It is not a requirement for migrants at the southern border. Why?"

Psaki replied curtly, "That's correct," without further explanation.

What an insult to all other Americans being put under forced vaccine pressure, and what a display of the political bias behind some of these decisions. (I do not write this an anti-vaxxer. I'm simply talking about blatant hypocrisy and double standards.)

In July 2020, the Supreme Court, quite inexplicably (in fact, without explanation), declined to hear the case of a Las Vegas church protesting the state's unfair and uneven covid regulations. These regulations allowed casinos to operate at 50 percent capacity but churches, regardless of their building capacity, were limited to 50 people.

What a ridiculous, indefensible example of anti-religious double standards. (I guess the casinos brought in a lot more taxable revenue than the churches.) Yet Justice John Roberts joined the four liberal justices in deciding not to hear the case.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice Samuel Alito wrote, "that while synagogues, mosques and churches were arbitrarily limited to 50 people in attendance for any religious services regardless of the capacity of their buildings, 'certain other favored facilities may admit 50% of their maximum occupancy, and in the case of gigantic Las Vegas casinos, this means that thousands of patrons are allowed.'"

To add insult to injury, when one congregation decided to get around these restrictions by holding a pro-Trump prayer gathering in a casino, the casino was fined as a result, even though the attendees followed all safety protocols. You can gamble here to your heart's content. You cannot worship God or pray here.

Last month, the ACLJ filed a lawsuit in federal court in Virginia on behalf Alive Church of the Nazarene. (If you thought these previous examples were crazy, this one might just take the cake.)

Because of Covid restrictions, the congregation could no longer meet in the public school it had been using, so it sought permission to meet on property located in Prince William County. The county said it would grant them permission, as long as they obtained a liquor license. (Seriously.)

But based on their denominational convictions (they don't even serve wine at communion), they said they could not do so. As a result, the county banned them from meeting on their property. So, unless the church operates like a bar, it cannot meet on certain properties owned by the country.

As explained by Jordan Sekulow, “In so many words, our client asked the county, ‘How do we get treated as favorably as breweries and wineries?’ The county’s response, ‘Go get a liquor license.’”

He continued, “Wineries and breweries can host weddings. They can host live music. They can host community-engaging events and gatherings. They can even rent their facilities to churches to use. All while enjoying the beneficial treatment of the county’s favor and avoiding cumbersome and expensive zoning and permit requirements. But not churches.

“The bottom line is the county is treating our client, the church, differently and worse—because it’s a church and has these religious beliefs about alcohol.”

So, there you have it.

Casinos can meet at 50 percent capacity but churches, even with buildings that seat thousands, can only accommodate 50 people.

If you kill babies in the womb and sell liquor to the public, you provide essential services. If you open your building to minister to struggling families, suicidal teens, drug addicts and others, providing Christian care and support, your services are not essential.

And if a church wants to operate on some properties in Prince William County, it must get a liquor license.

What’s more, if you gather to worship God and pray on the city streets, you are self-centered, reckless, superspreaders. But if you gather to protest racism, you are contributing to public health.

As for companies with at least 100 employees, vaccines are a must. As for tens of thousands of immigrants, legal or otherwise, who cares about vaccines?

Enough said.

An article by Michelle Malkin titled “Comply or Die: Vax-Partheid in the Operating Room” was posted at creators.com on Oct. 5, 2021. Following is the article.

For nearly 20 years, I’ve reported on America’s medical welcome mat for chronically sick illegal aliens. Under a 1986 federal law, “unauthorized immigrants” with conditions such as kidney disease and cancer cannot be denied emergency room care, regardless of their immigration status or inability to pay. Open-borders politicians insist health care is a “right” that every last border-jumper is entitled to—and that every last American taxpayer must subsidize.

According to estimates from 2019 cited in a recent study published by the American Journal of Kidney Disease, there are between 5,500 and nearly 9,000 illegals with kidney failure in the U.S. There’s now a Covid-era push to provide them not only with emergency-room dialysis (at an estimated cost of $400,000 per illegal alien per year) but also with outpatient dialysis under Medicaid. Conveniently, the United Network for Organ Sharing and Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network do not document immigration status, so there are no reliable estimates of exactly how many illegal aliens have received organ transplants in the U.S. At least one scientific journal article identified 400 illegal aliens who had received kidney transplants since 2005—most in California at taxpayer expense.

Keep all this government-backed generosity for illegal alien patients in mind as I tell you about the plight of Leilani Lutali, a law-abiding American citizen and Colorado Springs executive recruiter diagnosed with stage 4 kidney disease last November. Her condition worsened over the summer, leading her to medical providers at UHealth in Denver to begin discussion of an organ transplant. Blessed with a close-knit network of friends through her local Bible study, Leilani found a living donor in Jaimee Fougner, a former Air Force medic, triathlete and medical assistant who has spent more than two decades in the health care field.

“It was an easy decision to make,” Jaimee reflected. “Why would I not want to save my friend’s life?”

Everything was moving along smoothly until last week, when Jaimee’s donor coordinator at UHealth asked about her vaccination status. Jaimee is unvaccinated and won a religious exemption from her employer’s job-or-job mandate. Leilani has already had Covid-19 and told me she recently tested positive for antibodies. Like Jaimee, Leilani has religious objections to the Covid-19 vaccine manufacturers’ use of aborted fetal cells.

Moreover, Leilani told me, “I’m not ‘anti-vax.’ I got my shots as a kid and for business travel. It’s specifically about the Covid shots, which have not been out long enough. There’s no comprehensive data.”

No matter. “Trust the science,” stop asking questions, and comply or die.

Leilani and Jaimee told me they were informed by one of the transplant coordinators that if they didn’t submit to the Covid-19 jab, their transplant “journey would come to an end.” Leilani says they were “told flat-out that there would be no exemptions,” even though UHealth does allow its own staff to apply for medical and religious waivers. Leilani pushed for alternatives such as a negative Covid-19 test. No go.

Leilani has now been placed on the “inactive” list—a death sentence.

I reached out to UHealth, whose communications vice president Dan Weaver confirmed in a statement to me that, “In almost all situations, transplant recipients and living donors at UHealth are now required to be vaccinated against Covid-19 in addition to meeting other health requirements and receiving additional vaccinations.”

Welcome to vax-partheid in the operating room. In their discussions with Leilani and public relations materials sent to me, UHealth officials have imperiously compared exercising the choice to decline the Covid-19 vaccine to irresponsible behavior such as smoking or drinking before or after an organ transplant.

Ridiculous. As Leilani told friends and family in a Facebook post about her plight: "I have done the research on transplant patients and there isn't substantive evidence that the Covid shot can even provide antibodies to fight off the Delta variant post transplant."

Jaimee adds that the Covid-19 vaccine clinical trials excluded severely immunocompromised patients and a peer-reviewed study in the Journal of Hepatology published in August found "poor antibody response" after Covid-19 vaccination among 61% of liver transplant patients and 24% of patients with chronic liver disease.

Colorado state Republican Rep. Tim Geitner heard about Leilani's case and blasted UHealth's decision as "disgusting" in a Facebook livestream video (which, of course, has already been appended with the Narrative Control Freaks' pro-Covid vaccine disclaimers). Leilani's case "brings great concern for many of us ... where based on your vaccination status with Covid, you would actually be denied care."

Indeed. "Where does this stop?" Jaimee asks. "If it's OK to deny life-saving transplants to the unvaxed, are cancer patients next?"

Yes, my fellow citizens, we have now arrived at the insane point in America where unlawful immigration status provides more protection than unvaccinated status—and where health care is a taxpayer-subsidized right for indigent illegal aliens, but not faithful, pro-life Christians who stand up against medical tyranny.

"I didn't want to be the poster child," Leilani told me Monday. But after much thought and prayer, she came forward to "be a voice for those who have no voice." All it takes is one to become hundreds, thousands and millions in such a time as this. Who in power will speak for Leilani? Please stand up. The clock is ticking.

An article by Ann Coulter titled "Gray Lives Matter" was posted at anncoulter.com on Sept. 15, 2021. Following is the article.

My ancestors were Presbyterian abolitionists who fought on the Union side, but I get really ticked off when imbeciles take a sledgehammer to my country's history.

Last week [September 8], with self-satisfied glee, savages tore down the 14-foot statue of Robert E. Lee designed by the French sculptor Antonin Mercié and installed in 1890 on land deeded to the state—in return for a promise that the Commonwealth of Virginia "will hold said Statue and pedestal and Circle of ground perpetually sacred to the Monumental purpose to which they have been devoted and that she will faithfully guard it and affectionately protect it."

But Virginia's supreme court ruled that the state had a "free speech" right to violate the deed. On that theory, no contract can ever be enforced. I have a free speech right to say that I will NOT deliver 20 pounds of bananas!

It's not just "Southerners" who revere Lee, as his Wikipedia page implies. Franklin Delano Roosevelt called Lee "one of our greatest American Christians and one of our greatest American gentlemen." Dwight Eisenhower said Lee was "noble as a leader and as a man, and unsullied as I read the pages of our history." Even Ulysses S. Grant called him "the acknowledged ablest general in the Confederate army."

The son—not grandson—of a hero of the American Revolution, Lee graduated second in his class at West Point, then distinguished himself in the Mexican-American War. Lee's reputation was so great that President Lincoln asked him to take command of the Union forces against the South. But Lee was a Virginian and felt compelled to take Virginia's side, so he resigned from the U.S. Army.

(For my illiterate readers and anyone who gets his news from MSNBC: That makes Lee the opposite of a "traitor." A traitor is someone who pretends to be on your side, while secretly working with the enemy, not someone who loudly announces, I quit. My friends and I are leaving.)

Among his accomplishments, there's also the minor fact that Lee saved the country. Immediately after a bitter, bloody civil war, pitting brother against brother—four of Mary Lincoln's five brothers fought for the Confederacy—the landscape littered with the dead, Lee ensured that the South would accept defeat.

When Lee surrendered at Appomattox, he was at the height of his powers, idolized throughout the South. The president of the Confederacy, Jefferson Davis, wanted to fight on, telling his officers, "I think we can whip the enemy yet, if our people will turn out."

But Lee, not Davis, held the hearts of his countrymen. When one of Lee's own officers urged him to lead a guerilla war against the North, Lee remonstrated, "as a Christian people, there is now but one course to pursue. We must accept the situation; these men must go home and plant a crop, and we must proceed to build up our country on a new basis."

He could easily have pulled a Trump and told his supporters, We got screwed! Take to the hills! They would have followed. Hundreds of thousands more lives would have been lost. The country might never have recovered.

But Lee said no, it ends now.

In his biography of Grant, Ron Chernow says the Union general believed that "had Lee resisted surrender and encouraged his army to wage guerrilla warfare, it would have spawned infinite trouble. ... Such was Lee's unrivaled stature that his acceptance of defeat reconciled many diehard rebels to follow his example."

Thanks to Lee, we became a functioning country again within about 15 years, instead of becoming Serbia, Afghanistan, Korea, Vietnam, Rwanda and on and on and on.

After Lee's surrender, Union soldiers saluted their defeated foes. Erstwhile warring officers embraced one another. One Confederate officer said: "Great God, thought I to myself, how my heart swells out to such a magnanimous touch of humanity! Why do men fight who were born to be brothers?" When told of Lee's surrender, Lincoln ordered the Union band to play "Dixie." Years later, Grant spoke of his deep affection for Lee's army, second only to that for his own men.

Never has a civil war ended with such love between the former enemies. That's our history, our country, our war—North and South, black and white.

The vandalizing of American history has absolutely nothing to do with black people or slavery. Lots of historical figures had slaves. Not only American heroes like Washington and Jefferson, but Kamala Harris' ancestors—according to her own father. Barack Obama is the only president who might be descended from slave traders, a particularly repellent group, inasmuch as Kenya was a major player in the slave trade.

How about these white saviors demand a box on their Ivy League admission forms: "If admitted to Harvard, would you be willing to give up your place to a black person?" That will NEVER happen. Instead, we get: I went out and courageously defaced a Confederate statue! Because some things are more important than my personal comfort.

No, the moving force behind this frenzied destruction of American history isn't black people suddenly offended by monuments that have been around for a century; it's pushy newcomers, bitter that their ancestors had nothing to do with the creation of this country. After other people's ancestors carved a nation out of the wilderness, they just kind of showed up. Now they go around obliterating anything that reminds them that this country was up and running long before they got here.

America's leading hate group, the Southern Poverty Law Center, titles its report on Confederate symbols "Whose Heritage? Public Symbols of the Confederacy." Yes, exactly, it's not their heritage, so it must be destroyed. My ancestors fought on the Union side, but they were involved, and it matters to me.

MSNBC's smirking Chris Hayes can get weepy about some ancient Roman ruin, and Rachel Maddow about a building in Warsaw, but I care about my history. These savages are smashing and graffitiing my antiquities.

An article by Pat Buchanan titled "Who Is Killing 10,000 Black Americans Every Year?" was posted at townhall.com on Oct. 1, 2021. Following is the article.

"Unfortunately, Jan. 6 was not an isolated event," warned FBI Director Christopher Wray last winter: "The problem of domestic terrorism has been metastasizing across the country for a long time now, and it's not going away anytime soon."

Since he became director in 2017, said Wray, FBI domestic terrorism investigations had doubled in number to more than 2,000, and FBI investigations of white supremacists had tripled.

Listening to Wray, one came away with the impression that right-wing terrorism was our foremost internal security issue, that the Jan. 6 riot was a manifestation of that terrorism, and that white supremacists top the list of dangerous enemies inside our own country.

The vast turnout of police and press for the Sept. 18 protest on the Mall to demand fairness for the Jan. 6 “patriots” suggested that our elites shared Wray’s alarm.

All seemed disappointed when the brownshirts failed to show up.

Yet, with this week’s release of FBI statistics on violent crime in America, showing a record 30% surge in homicides in 2020 over 2019, questions arise.

What caused the number of U.S. victims of murder and manslaughter to explode by almost 5,000 last year to reach a total of 21,500? Why are homicides rising another 10% this year? Why are murders and manslaughters rising so dramatically in the USA?

For that number of killings, 21,500 in 2021, is three times the number of U.S. soldiers dead in 20 years of fighting in Afghanistan and Iraq.

The New York Times and Washington Post both made the FBI figures front-page news. And the Times gave some insight as to who the victims of homicide in this country were and are.

Here is the relevant passage in the Times story: “The (FBI) report ... breaks down last year’s homicide victims by race, ethnicity and sex, although not all law enforcement agencies provided such data. Of the people killed in 2020, at least 9,913 were Black, 7,029 were white, 497 were from other races and 315 were of unknown race. There were at least 14,146 men killed and 3,573 women.”

The startling number here: There were nearly 3,000 more Black victims who wound up dead in America from criminal violence than there were white victims, though Blacks, at 12-13% of the U.S. population, are only one-fifth the size of the white population.

Translation: Black Americans are being shot, stabbed and beaten to death at a rate six to seven times that of whites. And by the end of this year, well over 10,000 Blacks will have been made the victims of homicide in America.

That figure breaks down to roughly 200 Black folks dead every single week in this country from gunshot wounds and other criminal violence—a weekly death toll that rivals U.S. losses in Vietnam at the height of the war.

The question unanswered and unasked in the Times’ and Post’s stories is: Who is doing this? Who is killing all these Black people?

If, as the slogan proclaims, “Black lives matter,” why is there not greater public alarm at BLM in who is killing so many Black people?

About the number of dead in the infamous Tulsa Race Massacre of 1921, histories and historians differ. Some say the number of Black victims was no more than 30. Others say it was as high as 300.

But, again, in one year, the number of Blacks killed in violent crimes in America, 3-in-4 by gunshots, will exceed 10,000.

Who is doing this? How many of these Black folks are victims of the right-wing extremists and white supremacists that Wray sees as our greatest domestic security threat?

How many Blacks in 2021 and this year were victims of the Proud Boys or Oath Keepers or 3 Percenters or neo-Nazis or the Klan?

If rogue white cops are the scourge of Black America, as we have been instructed to believe, how many killings of unarmed Blacks were done by white cops this year and last?

In 2020, homicides in Washington, D.C., rose for the third straight year, reaching almost 200, the deadliest year in the city since 2004. More than 920 people were shot in 2020, a 64% increase from three years ago. Again, how many of these Washington shootings, averaging three a day, were the lethal work of Washington white supremacists?

Within the Post and Times there were explanations offered for the 30% surge in homicides. Among them were the proliferation of guns and gun ownership, and the "police legitimacy crisis."

In the wake of George Floyd's death, "Defund the Police!" became the chant of 100 leftist protests.

Police funds were cut. Elites turned hostile to cops they once hailed as "first responders." Demoralized, many police ceased to be proactive. Police resignations and retirements came in record numbers.

When the peace forces in our society were morally disarmed, their natural enemies, the criminal element, seized the opportunity.

An article by Trent Baker titled "Nikki Haley Hits Back at CNN—'Liberal Media Can't Stand It' When Black, Brown People Tout America" was posted at breitbart.com on Oct. 7, 2021. Following is the article.

Thursday on Fox News Channel's "The Faulkner Focus, former U.N. Ambassador and South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley (R) reacted to the backlash she received from CNN "New Day" host Brianna Keilar for declaring the United States is not a racist nation.

Keilar accused Haley, the daughter of Indian immigrants, of whitewashing the United States' history when it comes to race relations in an effort to appease the GOP base.

Haley said that the "liberal media can't stand it" when a black or brown Republican praises America and says the country isn't racist.

"Well, it sounds like I hit a nerve," Haley said of Keilar's criticism. "Secondly, it's amazing to me how the liberal media can't stand it when someone ... black or brown happens to talk about the fact that America is the best country in the world—the fact we’re blessed to be free and blessed to live in America. I’m going to keep saying it. We should all talk about the blessings of America. We’re not a perfect country, but every day our focus is to make today better than yesterday, and that’s how I was raised. I was raised to have hope. I was raised that America did have challenges as we were going, but also was raised to live and see that me, a brown family in a small southern rural town, the people when they used to whisper about us or used to exclude us, I saw something very American happen because they started to smile at us. They started to talk to us, and they welcomed us in. And that’s the part of America that I was raised in.”

She continued, “That’s the part of America I’m proud of. And that same state elected me as the first female and first minority governor, and you can’t say that we’re a racist country. You just can’t. And they can’t stand it when a brown Republican says that.”

An article by Joe Connor titled “Insurrection Insanity” was posted at townhall.com on Oct. 1, 2021. Following is the article.

Democrats comparing the Capitol Protests to the horrors of 9/11/01 and accusing patriotic Americans of being threats and terrorists is pathetic, dangerous and belies their long patronage to terrorist enemies of our county. They conveniently forget that the Capitol was attacked by the Marxist Weather Underground in 1971 and in 1954 by a Puerto Rican Revolutionary group, pre-cursor to the Armed Forces for National Liberation (“FALN”).

I was an eye witness to the carnage of 9/11, the murder of cousin Steve Schlag and 3,000 other innocent souls. January 6 was nothing like those meticulously planned attacks on civilians when hundreds jumped or fell from 1,000 feet rather than burning alive. Not even close.

Those visions are seared in my mind and in our national memory. These leftist politicians and so called journalists believe we have forgotten. Well we have not!

Our father, Frank Connor, Steve’s godfather was murdered by the FALN, who were connected to the Weather Underground a generation before at Fraunces Tavern only blocks from the World Trade Center.

Our family has twice been hit by terrorism and the Democrats’ use of our loved one’s murders for their perceived political gain. These Democrats pushed for and celebrated the Clinton/Gore and then Obama/Biden clemencies to Oscar Lopez Rivera and his terrorist comrades who murdered our father. Many on the Left successfully released or traded terrorists from Guantanamo Bay and still push for its closing.

On January 24, 1975 the Marxist, Cuban inspired terrorists of the “FALN attacked historic Fraunces Tavern with a vicious, powerful and deadly lunchtime bomb designed to kill, as was written in their communique, “reactionary corporate executives.” Our family was to celebrate my brother’s recent 11th and my 9th birthdays that very evening. Instead, the FALN appointed themselves as our father's judge, jury and executioner, sentencing his young family to face the agony of losing our precious dad and suffer his loss emotionally, physically and financially.

I have fought most of my life to bring justice to our father's murderers and more recently, to expose their next generation. From the Clintons to Obama and Biden, many of today's modern Democrat politicians and members of congress have direct ties to these Marxist radicals.

Frank Connor and other victims of 1960s, '70s and '80s radicals were murdered on the front lines of the Cold War; a war that we assumed was won with the fall of the Soviet Union. However this war continues today, not with violence but in politics, media, entertainment and academia.

On August 11, 1999, in an obvious attempt to curry favor for Hillary Clinton with New York's Hispanic Community for her 2000 New York Senate run, President Bill Clinton offered executive clemency to 16 violent, unrepentant FALN terrorists. The FALN, one of the most prolific terror groups in American history waged a bloody war against the United States, conducting over 115 bombings and six murders from 1974 -1983 including the Fraunces bombing that murdered our father.

A FALN missive explaining the attack read, "Our attack on January 24, 1975 was not in any way directed against working class people or innocent North Americans. The targets of our attack were bankers, stock brokers and important corporate executives of monopolies and multi-national corporations." As unjustified as that profile is, Frank Connor was a first generation American from working class Washington Heights, NYC. His mother Margaret was a night shift facilities worker and got him the job at the Morgan Bank out of high school, going to college at night and raising his young family.

How different are the FALN's words from a quote from Senator and former Democrat Presidential candidate Bernie Sanders? "Let us wage a moral and political war against the billionaires and corporate leaders, on Wall Street and elsewhere, whose policies and greed are destroying the middle class of America."

By 1983, the FALN terrorists were arrested, tried, convicted and sentenced in Chicago and New York to 30 to 99 year prison terms for crimes including seditious conspiracy, bomb making, conspiracy to commit armed robbery, illegal possession of weapons including explosives; large quantities of C4 plastic explosive, dynamite and huge caches of ammunition.

At the Chicago sentencing, remorseless FALN member Ricardo Jimenez told Judge McMillen, "You can give me the death penalty, you can kill me now." "You say we have no remorse. You're right," FALN member Ida Rodriguez told the judge. "Your jails and your long sentences will not frighten us."

The judge agreed that the defendants showed no remorse. "I'm convinced you're going to continue (terrorism) as long as you live. If there was a death penalty, I'd impose the penalty on you without hesitation."

Contrary to the standard clemency process, the terrorists never requested clemency. Incredibly a "support committee" petitioned for clemency on their behalf. The Justice Department led by then Deputy Attorney General Eric Holder conducted the standard investigation which resulted in Pardon Attorney Margaret Love refusing to recommend the terrorists' release. However, Holder fired Love and compelled her replacement, Roger Adams, (who also would not recommend clemency) to draft a neutral "options" memo which provided President Clinton the rationale he needed to offer their releases. As I wrote in my testimony at Holder's 2009 AG Confirmation hearing, Holder played "Russian Roulette", with the American people he was sworn to protect.

Never recognizing the US's legal jurisdiction, the terrorists at first refused clemency but astonishingly were given 30 days and inter-prison conference calls by the Clinton DoJ to decide on freedom! Finally on September 10, 1999 all but one terrorist, FALN leader Oscar Lopez Rivera, accepted clemency and walked out of prison as a political firestorm led by Congressional hearings hit the Clintons.

Lopez Rivera was so dedicated and unrepentant that he refused to renounce violence, refused the Clintons' clemency offer, choosing rather to stay in prison. Lopez Rivera was quoted as saying, "I cannot undo what's done. The whole thing of contrition, atonement, I have problems with that."

But there was more to the clemencies than Hillary Clinton's political ambitions. The clemencies helped expose the connection between today's Democrat political elite and their violent pre-cursors. At Lopez-Rivera's January 2011 Federal Parole hearing in Terre Haute Indiana the terror leader told a small group of us victims' family members that when he began his leadership in the FALN, like Mr. Obama, he was a "community organizer" from Chicago. Shortly after Lopez's 2017 release, this convicted Marxist terrorist was named a "Freedom Hero" by Democrat organizer of the Puerto Rican Day Parade. Fortunately, a group of friends and supporters convinced sponsors like Goya Foods, Coca-Cola and others to pull their support for the parade if Lopez was being honored.

President Obama trusted Eric Holder as his Attorney General for the first 6 years of his administration despite, or perhaps because of Holder's leftist sympathies. Obama began his political career in the home of Weather Underground terror leaders, Bill Ayers and Bernardine Dohrn. In addition to retired FBI agent Rick Hahn's confirmation that Weather Underground members Claude Marks and Jean Willmott were indicted for attempting to secure C4 plastic explosives for FALN leader Oscar Lopez Rivera's escape attempt from Leavenworth Prison, author Bryan Burrough in Days of Rage, further connects Ayer's Weather Underground to the FALN. Weather Underground bomb maker Ron Fliegelman confirmed that FALN bomb design came directly from the Weather Underground. "We gave them the training. We did that, sure."

Today our government continues to show its bent for terrorists by its capitulation to Cuba who for decades has provided training to terrorists and safe harbor to convicted terrorist William Morales and Black Liberation Army cop killer Joanne Chesimard among some 70 U.S. fugitives currently in Cuba.

Morales was the chief bomb-maker and one of the leaders of the FALN who likely learned his craft from Fliegelman and most certainly built the sinister device that killed our father.

Ironically, on what would have been my dad's 37th birthday, July 12, 1978, Morales blew the fingers off both his hands and part of his face when a bomb he was crafting exploded in his bomb factory in Queens.

Morales was captured, tried and convicted in federal and state courts and sentenced in 1979 to up to 99 years in New York State and Federal prison. During the state trial Morales, like his FALN comrades in Chicago, boasted, "No jail is going to hold me forever. They can put 1,000 of us in jail. They are not going to hold us forever. That's what I have to say."

The severely disfigured Morales escaped from Bellevue prison hospital with the assistance of white radicals who called themselves the Revolutionary Armed Task Force. Through a FALN investigation run by the Chicago Terrorist Task Force, Morales was eventually located in Puebla, Mexico, in 1983. When the Mexican police closed in, he and an accomplice killed a Mexican police officer. Morales was arrested and charged with being an accessory to murder. Despite the Reagan administration's request for extradition, the sympathetic Mexican government sent him to Cuba in 1988 where he and other convicted terrorist fugitives enjoy Safe Harbor from US jurisdiction.

Ironically while Barack Obama announced his 2016 Cuba trip to pay homage to the Castros, I was in Guantanamo Bay Cuba, at the pretrial hearings of KSM and other high value detainees. A group of 9/11 family members and I saw the best in America while the facility, service members and prosecution teams were attacked by the left as scheme to shut down GTMO.. Again, is their allegiance to the terrorists or the American people? So they release terrorists from Guantanamo Bay Cuba but don't push for convicted terrorists to be brought from Cuba to face justice.

The protest on Jan 6 may have been more of a perceived threat to those in power because it affected them directly, not the "regular" Americans they are sworn to represent and protect but so despise. I felt this first hand when testifying before the Senate Judiciary Committee at Eric Holder's AG confirmation hearing. Senators Leahy, Whitehouse and others were so condescending and/or dismissive to our family's plight while they sat literally and figuratively above us.

Can you imagine how painful it is to victims' families for real terrorists to be lauded, released and honored while my dad's life, cousin Steve's life and the lives and deaths of other proud Americans like them are marginalized, disparaged and exploited?

Our country will defeat every enemy on the battlefield, but the enemy we face today is not on the battlefield. This enemy comes from within, with a familiar look and disarming smile yet is more dangerous and more insidious than any outside foe.

This enemy has exposed who they are and must be defeated. Not only is this a quest for justice for our loved ones but it is a battle for the future of our Republic. Our families and our country are worth the fight.

As President Abraham Lincoln warned, “America will never be destroyed from the outside. If we falter and lose our freedom, it will be because we destroyed ourselves.”

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the LORD while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the LORD, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word be that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
