When nations die, they do so with surprising speed. Ernest Hemingway made a similar observation when a person in his novel was asked how he went bankrupt, and his reply was: “Gradually, then suddenly.”

Nations are built upon classical values – perseverance, self-reliance and honor. In its latter days, the nation becomes hollowed out and burdened with a costly, top-heavy government. The middle class is expected to provide generosity to the masses. Over time, traditional values fade away, and everyone seeks to live off everyone else.

The United States shows aspects of a once great power past its prime. It is socially and politically divided, aware of the necessity for changes, unable or unwilling to make them, and losing the conviction in the shared goals that earlier invigorated it.

The decay that started gradually decades ago is now metastasizing at warp speed. The United States, ripped apart internally, has become ever less willing and able to lead internationally.

The doctrines that built the United States and Western civilization, assimilated from ancient cultures over thousands of years, are being methodically dissolved. The foundation of American life (abundant food, energy autonomy, a sound economy, sound education at all levels and enforceable and equal application of the law) are eroding.

Our society is “fundamentally changing” and these changes are not for the better.

Prosperity and leisure have misled a complacent society into thinking the modern age no longer needs to worry about law and order. We recoil from spontaneous street violence and looting. Criminals walk out with stolen merchandise without fear of the law or even the outrage of witnesses.

- Defunding the police has discharged a torrent of criminals into the streets.
- Downgrading felonies, no cash bail and no jail time are spiking violent crime.
- At the border, millions of people enter our country illegally. Our leaders are shamefully welcoming an unvetted population into our country to dilute and displace native-born Americans. No country can exist without a border, much less allow foreign crime cartels to control the border.
- Thousands of Chinese sleeper agents are crossing our open southern border to cause mayhem when called upon to do so.
- The FBI is more likely to go after parents at school board meetings than those threatening the homes of Supreme Court justices.
- CIA and FBI directors lie under oath without consequence.

The decay that began slowly long ago is now upon us in full force.

To save the nation, all constitutionally minded Americans must see the danger and gird themselves for what lies ahead.

Environmentally Harmful” was posted at townhall.com on May 13, 2023.

1. America’s electric grid already “faces a capacity shortfall.”
2. During electric capacity shortfalls or blackouts, EVs can’t be charged.

4. The large battery packs are 33 percent heavier.
5. “Thermal runaway” can cause intense and unpredictable battery fires.

8. Battery packs may not be repairable if they are damaged during an accident.
9. EV battery ranges vary, but are generally inconveniently short.
10. Travel ranges drop significantly in winter – possible stranded in cold.
11. Travel ranges are shorter in summer (when temperatures climb above 86 degrees).

13. EV batteries are expected to last 10-20 years in a perfect climate.
14. Travel ranges drop as much as 70 percent to tow a trailer.
15. It takes 7 to 10 hours to fully charge many EVs – (and shortage of charging stations).
16. 75 percent of Americans are hesitant – and 18 percent have already switched back.
17. 78 percent of EV owners have a second gas-powered vehicle.
18. China dominates the supply chains of many critical minerals.
19. Worldwide supplies of critical minerals are currently insufficient.
20. Child labor and hazardous working conditions plague countries that mine.
21. Production of lithium for EV batteries has substantial environmental impact.
22. Recycling options are still limited and expensive for EV batteries.
23. Purchasing a carbon trading system is more economical.
24. Even with lavish subsidies, EVs are not cost-effective.
25. Will they reduce CO2 emissions? – China builds 2 new coal plants per week.
