Luke 21:34-36—“But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man” (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Ken Blackwell titled "Claiming State Voting Reforms Are Racist Is Ridiculous. I Should Know" was posted at usatoday.com on April 8, 2021. Following is the article.

Outrage from Democrats, corporations and Major League Baseball about voter identification requirements and Georgia's "Election Integrity Act of 2021" feels like leftovers reheated for the third time. Whenever Republicans propose commonsense voter ID measures to help safeguard our elections, liberals react by shouting that it is voter suppression and Jim Crow 2.0.

These claims are false, and they distract from the real issues of promoting election integrity and preventing fraud.

Hans von Spakovsky, a senior fellow at the Heritage Foundation, notes, "Virtually every person of voting age already has such IDs, and those who do not can easily get them. Every state with an ID requirement issues a free ID to anyone who doesn't already have one. Despite the empty howls of 'repression,' states that have implemented ID requirements have seen turnout go up, not down."

Just muddling the debate

Arguing voter ID is a form of voter suppression is a smokescreen designed to muddle the debate. Instead of lecturing us with false arguments, Democrats should listen to Black and Latino voters who support ID requirements because they understand we need to take simple steps to protect the sanctity of the ballot box.

Instead of debating the merits of voter ID and election regulations, liberals label them—and anyone supporting them—as racist in attempts to shut down any debate. For example, Stacey Abrams calls Georgia’s law “a redux of Jim Crow in a suit and tie.”

This is ridiculous. Abrams herself praised New Jersey’s new voting procedures, where voters get up to 10 days to vote early. Under Georgia’s new law, they get 17 days.

The data doesn’t matter, the views of African Americans and Latinos don’t matter, the actual text of the new law doesn’t matter. The hyperbolic rhetoric ignores the truth.

Liberals are now pushing a federal elections bill, H.R. 1, which they claim will eliminate “racist” state laws. This legislation sabotages state voter ID requirements by forcing states to allow anyone to vote, with or without an ID, if they sign an unverifiable statement attesting to their eligibility. Plainly stated the bill would eliminate voter ID in 35 states. What could go wrong?

If H.R. 1 is enacted, our elections will be vulnerable as decades of good governance will be thrown out and replaced with half-baked left-wing talking points. For example, states would be required to implement technology that doesn’t exist, couldn’t remove ineligible voters from voter rolls and would have to allow paid political operatives to collect absentee ballots.

Listen to the voters who largely support voter ID laws

Thankfully, the American people strongly disagree with a ban on voter ID, as an Associated Press poll found that 72% of respondents support it. Likewise, an Atlanta Journal-Constitution poll found 74% of Georgians supporting voter ID.

Digging deeper, the Rasmussen Reports found that wide margins of minority voters support voter ID as well: 69% of African Americans and 82% of other nonwhite minorities.

It never ceases to amaze me that Democrats believe African Americans don’t have, and aren’t capable of obtaining, an ID. Especially since you need an ID to do routine things such as open a bank account, drive a car, board a flight or pick up tickets at the will-call window at Yankee Stadium or Fenway Park. Most Americans have identification, and those who don’t can quickly get one, as states such as Georgia provide free IDs to anyone who needs one.

Voter ID is the best election reform that states have adopted; hopefully all 50 will do so. If there was any hint of racism associated with it then I’d be the first to lead the charge against it. Likewise, the reforms in Georgia make it easier to vote and harder to cheat.

An article by Kyle Morris titled “Black Conservative Pastors Expose 5 Lies by Joe Biden, Stacey Abrams About Georgia Election Bill” was posted at breitbart.com on April 12, 2021. Following is the article.

The Conservative Clergy of Color, a group of Black ministers and pastors, announced Monday it published a full-page ad in the Atlanta Journal-Constitution to address the “lies” being told by President Joe Biden and Stacey Abrams (D) about the Georgia Election Integrity Act of 2021.

The advertisement, which features a photo of both of the prominent Democrats, specifically calls out Biden and Abrams for their messaging about the new law, describing their agenda as “devastating” to minority-owned small businesses in Atlanta, amid Major League Baseball’s decision to pull out of the city due to Georgia Gov. Brian Kemp’s signing the election integrity bill into law.

“Biden and Abrams keep saying the Election Integrity Act is worse than Jim Crow, which is an insult to the millions of Black Americans,” Bishop Aubrey Shines, founder of Glory to God Ministries and a founding member of Conservative Clergy of Color, said.

“The truth is that this law actually expands access to the ballot box, while also taking common-sense steps to protect the sanctity of every legal vote,” Shines added. “We believe that it should be easy to vote and hard to cheat and the Georgia Integrity Act makes that possible for all voters.”

The advertisement features two columns, one of “lies” and one of “truth,” with the truth column dispelling Biden and Abrams’ claims:

- LIE: The new law restricts early voting. TRUTH: The law expands early voting hours and additional weekend voting opportunities, including Sundays.
- LIE: Voter ID requirements are racially discriminatory. TRUTH: IDs are necessary for numerous everyday activities, and the law even lets voters use documents like utility bills instead of state-issued IDs.
- LIE: Restrictions on distributing food and water to voters are intended to make voting more uncomfortable for minority voters. TRUTH: The law only prohibits using free food and beverages as a form of electioneering.
- LIE: The new law eliminates absentee ballot drop boxes. TRUTH: Drop boxes never existed before the pandemic. The new law creates rules to keep them—and the ballots inside—secure.
- LIE: The new law allows “takeovers” of local election administration. TRUTH: The law protects voters when local officials fail to prevent excessive lines or struggle to process absentee ballots.

“There’s nothing ‘racist’ about the Election Integrity Act, and it’s certainly not ‘Jim Crow 2.0,’” the ad stated. “Your lies are now devastating minority small businesses in Atlanta following the MLB’s decision to move its All-Star Game to Denver, resulting in a loss of $100 million in business. Enough is enough.”

“Easy to vote. Hard to cheat,” the ad read boldly along the bottom.

“As our ad points out, the lies that Biden and Abrams are telling about this law aren’t just another example of political theater,” said Shines. “Like elections, lies have consequences.”

“The MLB’s decision to relocate the All-Star Game in response to the left’s irresponsible and baseless assertions will deprive hard working Georgians—including countless Black-owned businesses and their employees—of a much-needed economic boost that would have helped them recover from the pandemic-induced economic downturn,” Shines added.

An article by Kevin Grieve titled “Fascism 2.0” was posted at townhall.com on April 9, 2021. Following is the article.

The Left and the Democrats have become a secular trinity of evil. The final addition has been their hijacking of corporate America to do their bidding and represents the merging of three strains of evil that we thought had been left to the ash heap of history in the 20th century: Fascism, Nazism, and communism.

The combined market capitalization of the Fortune 500 is over $32 trillion, represents two-thirds of GDP, and employs over 25 million people. Instead of remaining neutral, these companies are openly attacking half of the country and our founding principles. Elite and privileged CEOs, instead of serving to their broad-based, pluralistic, and diverse customer base, incoherently and ignorantly pontificate about their customers’ racism, sexism, and “deplorableness.”

MLB, Coke, Delta, and Home Depot CEOs all decided it was going to help their bottom line profits to virtue signal their fake indignation and disapproval of Georgia’s democratically elected legislator and Governor that passed new voter integrity laws. In protest, NYC-based Baseball commissioner Bob Manfred, who is paid $11 million per year, moved the All-Star game from predominately black Atlanta to predominately white Denver. Newsflash, in polarized American politics, nearly 80% of the US population support voter ID laws. Did these CEOs forget that an ID is required to board a Delta flight, check into a hotel, pick up your will-call baseball tickets, and buy beer at baseball stadium? Manfred will not be impacted by the move but the small businesses in Atlanta will lose $100 million in revenue. Odds are against Manfred relinquishing his exclusive membership at August National Golf Club that hosts the Masters golf tournament in protest; because that would require a personal sacrifice.

We saw how Amazon, Google and Apple conspired to “de-platform” a direct competitor, Parler. At the time, free speech social media company Parler had surged to be the #1 downloaded app. Amazon, Facebook, and Twitter have decided to become the arbiters of free speech: Amazon engages in digital book burning of conservative authors, Facebook shadow bans conservative posts, while Twitter bans conservative influencers including President Trump who had 80 million followers and earned 75 million votes in the 2020 election, the most of any Republican president.

In January, over 60 companies, including Bank of America, Mastercard, and Goldman Sachs announced their adoption of Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) sustainability metrics in partnership with the World Economic Forum. Part of the collectivist “global reset” to push radical Left-wing agendas which will destroy capitalism, kill free markets, and eliminate our freedom and sovereignty.

Yesterday, in a likely violation of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, United Airlines announced that 50% of its new pilot hires in the next five years will be women or people of color; all done under the moniker of diversity, equity, and inclusion which is really another way of saying inequality, discrimination, and mediocrity. In uber-liberal California, Proposition 16 (institutionalizing racial quotas and preferences) was defeated by voters this past November by 57% to 43%. Having flown over two million miles during my business career and having been in United’s top tier Global Services loyalty and rewards program, I can “safely” speak on behalf of my fellow passengers and say to United’s CEO that we prefer their pilots to be selected and trained based upon aptitude and not a superficial and immutable physical characteristic. Woke corporations like Coke train their employees to be “less white.” Cigna, one of the nation’s largest health insurers, used critical race theory in its training and told employees to not consider white men in hiring decisions.

Nazism was obsessed with race as are the Democrats. Hitler adopted Democrat’s Jim Crow laws, his brown shirts emulated the Democrat founded KKK, and his Final Solution was an extension of Margaret Sanger’s racial purity ideology. Joseph Goebbels’ propaganda-machine is emulated by today’s Corporate media which serves as the megaphone for the Democrat party. Corporate media is partisan, activist, and lacks any modicum of objectivity. The Corrupt corporate media recklessly divides the “melting pot” that is America into divisive racial and gender identities. By June of last year, American corporations had pledged over $1.7 billion to Marxist and racist BLM. BLM, Antifa and the “mostly peaceful” George Floyd protesters engaged in vandalism that was the worst in US history with $2 billion in property damage.

Biden’s $2.6 trillion infrastructure plan is corporate cronyism on steroids. Janet Yellen’s proposed minimum global corporate tax is anti-competitive and would lead to global stagnation. Corporations’ endorsement of the $15 minimum wage would lead to higher unemployment and disadvantage small businesses. Big Tech CEOs endorse universal income right off the pages of the communist playbook to create more dependency on the government, destroy the middle class and upward mobility, remove market incentives, and crush America’s entrepreneurial spirit.

The co-opting of corporations to enforce the totalitarian and un-American agenda of Democrats and the global elite should be a wake-up call to the GOP. Time for Republicans to realize that Big corporations are the enemy and should be treated as such. No more subsidies for companies that outsource American jobs and support open borders. Severe penalties for companies that discriminate by race, gender, or sexual orientation. No more favorable regulatory treatment of social media companies that engage in censorship.

An article by Tristan Justice titled “A Nation Primed to See Racism in Everything Will Think Only About Race” was posted at thefederalist.com on April 9, 2021. Following is the article.

One high school in Oregon postponed a vote last week on whether to change its mascot from the Trojan to the Evergreens over concerns the imagery of lush timber was racist.

Ida B. Wells-Barnett High School, named after the prominent black activist and journalist who documented lynching in the post-Civil War era, was considering a mascot change to adopt a symbol more representative of its connection to the community. Board members complained, however, that evergreen trees would conjure up imagery invoking the brutal execution of African-Americans.

"I think everyone comes with blind spots and I think that might've been a really big blind spot," said Director Michelle DePass at the school board meeting.

The episode is emblematic of how the country has come to see race, viewing minorities deemed oppressed by the woke left as fragile special-interest groups that Americans must hold a religious commitment to buttress in the moral righteousness of "antiracism." Everywhere, Americans are explicitly reminded of the racial inequities among minority groups as evidence of their inherent racism and the nation's irredeemably racist past—and present.

Starting at an early age, Americans are barraged with statistics and anecdotes, about everything from income to health status, that are always broken down by race to highlight disparities that victimize minorities and define their destiny as one determined by racist circumstance over personal responsibility. This ideology of abject victimhood taught in classrooms, newsrooms, and boardrooms after being bred for an entire generation on left-wing university campuses has now produced a nation dangerously constrained by a toxic obsession with race.

Under this doctrine, anything and everything must be vetted by 21st-century standards of cultural acceptance to root out the poisonous racism. This obsession, however, is the root of American demise. A nation primed to think only about race will only think about race.

Americans are now trained to see racism in everything, even where it doesn't exist. Trees are racist. Hiking is racist. Your cereal box is racist. Your depictions of Santa Claus and Jesus are racist. Claiming otherwise to any of it is also racist.

Minorities are trained to see themselves as hopelessly oppressed and facing endless aggressions at every turn. Every slightest impolite infraction can earn the morally indignant condemnation as racist, wrecking the perpetrator as a villain responsible for deep personal trauma. The so-called trauma, however, is merely a preconception inculcated by years of woke indoctrination.

None of this is to say racism doesn't exist. Americans can and should recognize there are racial tensions that need to be addressed. The radical obsession with defining every aspect of the modern culture through the exhaustive lens of "antiracism," however, has only led tensions to new heights while deceiving millions of well-meaning Americans who are terrified of the racist label and roping them into the effort. And "antiracism," weaponized by the political left to pursue political ends through intimidation of their opponents, has stifled debate, driven division, and merely created a different kind of racism.

The debate over voter ID requirements included in the recent Republican-passed Georgia voting bill provides a perfect illustration of today's racism infecting woke corporatists and the Democratic Party, which claim—in the name of antiracism of course—that mandated identification requirements for ballot access are too difficult for minorities to comply with.

And then there's affirmative action and the push for reparations, endorsed by the Democratic Party, which claims minorities aren't capable of achieving of the American dream without white saviors and billions in special assistance.

Race relations under the mandated lens of antiracism aren't getting any better. On that, nearly all Americans agree. According to Gallup, in 2008, the year Americans elected their first black president, 70 percent of white adults and 61 percent of black adults said race relations were either "very" or "somewhat good." Only 46 percent of white adults and 36 percent of black adults said the same in 2020.

If last year's radical acceleration of antiracism in the culture war has taught us nothing else, it's that the colorblind approach was likely the right one. The opposite has shown to be an aggressive form of racism featuring the bigotry of low expectations cloaked in the moral righteousness of social justice.

An article by Brian C. Joondeph titled "Fixing Racism by Being Racist?" was posted at americanthinker.com on April 12, 2021. Following is the article.

Racism is, by one definition, "A belief that race is a fundamental determinant of human traits and capacities and that racial differences produce an inherent superiority of a particular race."

History is replete with societies and cultures signing on to such thinking. Hitler was obsessed with "racial purity" and the superiority of the Germanic or Aryan "master race" and sought to exterminate those who were not blond, blue-eyed, and tall.

In contrast, Martin Luther King, Jr dreamed of a colorblind society, "I look to a day when people will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character."

President Joe Biden praised MLK as one his "only two political heroes," the other being Robert F Kennedy. Rather than praising MLK, Vice President Kamala Harris plagiarized a story shared by MLK, in keeping with the long history of plagiarism by her boss.

Yet these two are presiding over and encouraging the exact opposite of MLK's dream, where people are now judged solely by the color of their skin (or gender) rather than the content of their character. Here are several recent examples.

Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, one of America's most prominent teaching hospitals, plans on offering "preferential care based on race" and “race explicit interventions” as part of its new “antiracist agenda for medicine.” Such a program uses a “reparations framework” to allocate medical resources.

Reparations means that those who were never slaveholders are paying money to those who were never slaves, over injustices a century and a half ago, committed by people who may have no connection to the current reparation’s participants. In other words, using racism to combat racism.

How ironic that the vision of the Mass General Brigham health system is dedication to delivering medical care that is, among other things, “equitable.” Nothing promotes equity like a racist concept of “preferential care based on race.”

Princeton University, an elite institution of higher learning, comparable in prestige to the Brigham in the hospital world, offered admission to about 1500 applicants to its class of 2025, according to Powerline Blog. Only 28 percent were white Americans, compared to 68 percent who identified as “persons of color.” This is less than half of the 61 percent figure of white students enrolled in US public schools. So much for a class of students that “looks like America.”

Last year, Princeton University president Christopher Eisgruber all but admitted that his school was racist, that “racist assumptions from the past” remain “imbedded in structures of the university itself.” Now Princeton has embraced a new form of racism to fix their past racism.

This admission that Princeton is a racist institution prompted then-President Trump’s Department of Education to open an investigation into Princeton for violating the Civil Rights Act, which will undoubtedly go nowhere under the Biden administration. Once again, Princeton is an example of a woke institution embracing racism to fix racism.

United Airlines, joining the trio of woke airlines, is not protesting Georgia election law, but their own hiring practices. Aside from wanting to fly the friendly skies, United passengers want competent pilots, those who can safely land a plane when one of two engines explodes as occurred recently on a flight out of Denver. Or Captain Sully’s emergency landing on the Hudson River.

United’s new woke goal states, “Our flight deck should reflect the diverse group of people on board our planes every day.” Contrast this to Princeton University, which doesn’t want their student body to reflect the American population. Why not simply reflect the best suited for the cockpit or classroom?

United has its own plan to fix racism, structural, institutional, or whatever, “That’s why we plan for 50% of the 5,000 pilots we train in the next decade to be women or people of color.”

United passengers will be comforted knowing that the pilots they are entrusting their lives to were selected based on gender or skin color, rather than competence. As Tucker Carlson observed, “Safety is no longer that airline’s top concern—identity politics is.”

Tucker went on, “The way people look is totally irrelevant. How they perform is all you should care about. Once you forget that, airplanes tend to crash . . . Hiring on the basis of irrelevant criteria will, over time, get people killed, and it will.”

Most airline passengers never see the pilots, safely ensconced behind an armor-plated cockpit door, and likely don't care what the pilots look like, only wanting confidence that their life is in capable hands. Much as how a patient might view their surgeon.

United can be proud of their wokeness, prioritizing race and gender over qualifications and competence, fighting racism by being racist. From "get woke, go broke" to "get woke and you might croak." Whether at the hands of a pilot chosen based on skin color or a hospital allocating life-saving medical care based on ethnicity.

Those who scream the loudest about racism and sexism often are the guiltiest. CNN anchor Brooke Baldwin is leaving the woke network, citing "grievances with lack of women in key roles at liberal network."

CNN's parent company, AT&T, has a predominantly white and male board of directors. CNN boss Jeff Zucker is another old white guy. Why isn't CNN practicing what they preach?

If diversity is such a good thing at Princeton or United, how about professional sports? 59 percent of NFL players are Black, compared to only 13 percent of the US population. And no women play in the NFL. If professional sports leagues are to be sufficiently woke, reflecting the diversity of America, then half of all players should be women, and only 13 percent black, 18 percent Hispanic, 6 percent Asian, and so on.

Why are woke news networks, Ivy League universities, and professional sports leagues not practicing the diversity that they preach?

Major League Baseball thinks the new Georgia voting laws are racist. They should look in the mirror at their owners, managers, and players and see how they compare to American diversity and admit their own racism and sexism.

Perhaps following Martin Luther King Jr's admonition for a colorblind society would be the best way forward. Whether in the halls of academia, on the athletic field, in the airplane cockpit, or on corporate boards, how about hiring the most qualified, the most competent, rather than playing identity politics?

Virtue signaling opposition to racism by practicing racist hiring practices, is itself racist and does nothing to solve the purported problem, instead only making it worse. Do they not understand, or is this deliberate, using identity politics to destroy America from within, part of the great reset?

An article by black conservative Will Alexander titled "Black Crime: Facing Down the Elephant in the Room" was posted at townhall.com on April 12, 2021. Following is the article.

I recently wrote about the mysterious killings of endangered white rhinos in South Africa's Pilanesberg Park years ago. The killers turned out to be gangs of aggressive teen elephants who, raised without fathers or role models to “curb their youthful exuberance,” grew up to be troublemakers. The delinquents fell in line after park staff relocated adult male elephants to the park who “kicked butt” with the compassion of a father and established a new hierarchy.

The violence and killings of white rhinos stopped.

I compared the young elephants to young blacks in urban cities who were raised without fathers or healthy role models and have grown up extremely violent and extremely dysfunctional. That dysfunction is passed down to succeeding generations because rather than making the hard decisions to accurately define and solve the problem, leaders and activists excuse the bad behavior by blaming all the mayhem on slavery and Jim Crow. The message? “It’s not your fault.”

How’s that working?

Blacks are a third of the population in Chicago but commit 80 percent of all shootings, author Heather Mac Donald told Tucker Carlson on a recent show. In Los Angeles, blacks commit 44 percent of all violent crime but make up 9 percent of the population. In St. Louis, blacks are less than a third of the population but commit 90 percent of all homicides. In New York City, blacks commit about three quarters of all shootings although they’re 23 percent of the population.

On Monday alone, 16 people were shot and two killed in Chicago, a city led by blacks. Two teenage black girls killed an Uber Eats driver in D.C. during a foiled carjacking. A knife-wielding black man, 25, was shot dead after he rammed his car into a barricade at the Capitol, killing one policeman. A deranged black man who had been released from prison after killing his mother was caught on camera kicking, stomping, and beating a random 65-year-old Asian woman, while others, including a security guard, watched.

With all the talk of structural racism, equity, and white supremacy, violence has not only gotten more brash, but it’s becoming institutionalized. Yet, if the woke crowd were successful in transforming the country into an “anti-racist” paradise, we would still be light years away from fixing the dysfunction and disparities in urban cities.

Blaming black crime on slavery and Jim Crow completely ignores the elephant in the room.

“We need to be courageous and come up with alternative explanations that are difficult to articulate but they must be said,” McDonald told Tucker.

Corey Brooks, pastor of New Beginnings Church of Chicago, has spent the past few years getting his hands dirty with an “alternative explanation” that is slowly transforming one of the most violent neighborhoods in Chicago. Rather than blaming cops, he’s laser-focused on tackling urban crime at its root: broken families.

In the new documentary “What Killed Michael Brown?” Shelby Steele and his son, Eli, spoke with Pastor Brooks, who set up his church in 2000 in the heart of Woodlawn, Illinois. It’s now a congregation of 2,500.

“I believe the church is the hope of the world,” said Brooks. “What greater place that needs that hope than a place that’s experiencing high levels of crime [and] broken families? We’ve seen a lot of young guys in the neighborhood who don’t value their lives. A lot of it is a result of not having someone to encourage them that 'You can do better,' . . . But if you don't have those messages going forward, it's hard for you to value life when everybody is shooting and killing."

That was true for ex-Black Disciples gang leader Varney Voker who, as a child, watched his mother smoke weed and deal drugs. He wanted to be like her. But he did better. Voker grew up to build a crack-heroin business that brought in $60,000 a day.

Legendary in Chicago as one of "The Bentley Twins" (he and his twin brother drove Bentleys), Voker told Steele about how he returned from an 11-year prison sentence to find his old neighborhood under new leadership. While looking for old connections to rebuild his empire, Voker's friend told him he had to go to the church.

"I'm like, who am I meeting?" he said, recounting the story. "Guy (said), 'You meeting the pastor.' I said, 'I don't want to talk to no pastor, bro, I just came home. He goes, 'No, you have to talk to him because he runs the neighborhood now.'"

When they finally met, the pastor said to the ex-gang leader: "OK, um, I know who you are; I heard a lot about you—glad to see you home, but I'm the new sheriff in town."

By making himself the "biggest elephant in the room," Brooks established a new hierarchy in Woodlawn where young blacks saw him as a father figure. Over the years, Brooks has created an environment where young people can learn a trade, become self-sufficient, and be role models for others. It is this painstaking cycle of creating and reproducing role models that Brooks believes will transform the neighborhood. In fact, he wants Woodlawn to be the petri dish that will offer proof that urban areas nationwide can grow themselves out of dysfunction and close crippling disparities.

"It's easy to say, 'the white man, the white man' when in reality we need to take a closer look at ourselves," he told Steele. "We're telling them educationally—you've got to get it together. Economically, you've got to get it together. Family and spiritually, you have to get it together. And you have to take responsibility."

It is the Corey Brooks of the world—not the Cory Bookers—who will do for troubled urban cities what trillions of government dollars, angry protesters, and pampered TV pundits have failed to do. They ignore the elephant in the room, then make books and monuments to themselves about the problems they created and pretended to solve.

But men like Pastor Brooks stare the elephant in the eye, hammer stakes in the ground, and commit to the dirty, back-breaking labor of changing the destiny of generations of broken human beings.

If America is lucky, Brooks and people like him, just may be replicating an army of men and women in their own images.

An article by Tim Graham titled " 'Green Fraud' and the Climate Lockdown" was posted at creators.com on April 9, 2021. Following is the article.

Beware arrogant liberal journalists besmirching the supposedly disgusting concept of bothsidesism, insisting truth and falsehood should never be aired together. The American people are too dim to figure out which side is which. The “false” side must be shunned.

The most fervent topic of this arrogance is global warming, and the so-called “true” side never has to be held accountable for its dire predictions, ever.

Take biologist Paul Ehrlich, who wrote the epic 1968 manifesto of error “The Population Bomb,” in which he predicted that “In the 1970s the world will undergo famines—hundreds of millions are going to start to death” from over-population. Wrong.

The liberal media always cooperate in this propaganda. I’ve never forgotten the very one-sided reports NBC’s “Today” show allowed Ehrlich to narrate in 1989 and 1990.

On May 4, 1989, Ehrlich warned of “rapid” climate change, that “we could expect to lose all of Florida, Washington D.C., and much of the Los Angeles Basin . . . We’ll be in rising waters with no ark in sight.”

They repeated this disaster-movie routine on Jan. 11, 1990. Ehrlich claimed that when the ice sheet melts in Antarctica, the sea level would rise “not . . . 1 to 3 feet in a century but . . . 10 or 20 feet in a much shorter time.” He added: The Supreme Court would be flooded. You could tie your boat to the Washington Monument. And storm surges would make the Capitol unusable.”

Did any of this turn out to be true over the last 30 years? Ehrlich’s predictions aired without a second of a skeptical opinion. Was “truth” served and “falsehood” denied?

From Oct. 7-11 in 1990, PBS aired a 10-part documentary series called “Race to Save the Planet.” It was such an urgent “race” that it required 10 hours of radical leftists without any rebuttal. Narrator Meryl Streep warned: “By the year 2000—that’s less than 10 years away—the Earth’s climate will be warmer than it’s been in over 100,000 years. If we don’t do something, there’ll be enormous calamities in a very short time.”

Does anyone remember the “enormous calamities” experienced by the human race since then?

This point is hammered again in a new book by Marc Morano titled “Green Fraud: Why the Green New Deal Is Even Worse Than You Think.”

These days, the hype machine celebrates radicals such as Swedish teenager Greta Thunberg, who said: “We are in the beginning of a mass extinction, and all you can talk about is money and fairy tales of economic growth. How dare you!”

If you’re a “denier” of this prediction, then you’ll be mocked by Time magazine, who made this teen its person of the year in 2019, oozing that she “repeats the unassailable science” and “in summoning the courage to speak truth to power, became the icon of a generation.”

Morano concludes his book by warning that Republicans can't try to meet this media freight train by trying to compromise. "If they don't go after the scientific premises, the GOP is left arguing the Green New Deal is too expensive," he says. And if we're risking "mass extinction," how will that sound?

The "Green New Deal" is more of the same radical agenda to lock down (if not abolish) capitalism, like a never-ending covid-19 scare. The left never really relies on the scientific method on this subject. It only intimidates its opponents into silence and crushes any whisper of televised debate. It relies on the same media that always found creeping authoritarianism under former President Trump. It should look in the mirror.

An article by Oliver L. North and David L. Goetsch titled "Semantic Subterfuge: Democrats, Deception and Distortion" was posted at creators.com on April 13, 2021. Following is the article.

Democrats have a little problem with the truth. For example, they called H.R. 1319 their "covid-19 relief bill," yet only 9% of the funding it provides goes to covid-19 relief. They are calling their next initiative—which is a $3 trillion boondoggle—an "infrastructure bill," yet only 6% of the funds it would provide go to infrastructure projects. When you cannot call something what it really is, it is time to look in a mirror and ask yourself why—an act long overdue for Democrats.

Because its far-left agenda is abhorrent to at least half of the American people, the Democratic Party tries to minimize pushback by engaging in what we call "semantic subterfuge." Rather than tell the truth about their policies, Democrats twist words and their meanings to fit their false narrative. They use words to obfuscate rather than communicate and blur rather than clarify. The appealing names they give to unappealing concepts are aimed at distorting the truth and deceiving the American people.

How words are used matters. Consider the examples of Winston Churchill and Adolf Hitler. Both used words with great imagination and skill, but there was an important difference between the two. Churchill used words to inspire, comfort and reassure the British people. Hitler, on the other hand, used words to deceive the German people—and everyone else. Democrats, sad to say, are following the latter example.

Semantic subterfuge has been developed into an art form by the leftist ideologues controlling the Democratic Party. There are too many examples of their semantic subterfuge to cover in just one column, or even a tome. Therefore, in the interest of brevity, we present just a few representative examples. Topping the list of Democratic distortions are the terms "progressive," "choice," "tolerance," "inclusion" and "equality."

Democrats call themselves "progressives," but there is nothing progressive about transforming able-bodied Americans into helpless dependents of the government or subjecting our country to crime, covid-19 and corruption by opening the borders to anyone and everyone.

In an even more deceptive example, so-called progressives use the word "choice" to avoid using the word "abortion." Advocates of this heinous practice use the softer-sounding term, "choice," to distract the public from what they really support: killing innocent unborn babies.

"Tolerance" is supposed to mean remaining open to opinions and ideas one disagrees with while respecting the right of others to hold differing views. But this is not what it means to Democrats. To supposedly "tolerant" Democrats, tolerance means buying into leftist orthodoxy, hook, line and sinker. People who reject the left's false narrative are not tolerated. In fact, they are attacked, vilified, excluded and even canceled.

"Inclusion" means spreading a big tent of equal opportunity over people who might otherwise be left out or marginalized, but this is hardly how Democrats use the term. To leftist ideologues, inclusion is not about equal opportunity; it's about equal results—something they call "equity." Further, Democrats believe the federal government has the right to achieve equal results by coercion, provided, of course, they control the federal government. Expecting equal results while disregarding unequal talent, motivation and effort is not just acceptable to Democrats; it is policy.

"Equality" is about providing all people with the same rights and opportunities, but this is not what it means to Democrats. For example, in their Equality Act of 2021, the term actually means legalized discrimination against biological women and special treatment for transgendered men. The act, if passed, will undermine decades of legislative work aimed at ensuring equal opportunity in sports for female athletes. It will institutionalize discrimination in the name of equality.

It's hard even to imagine how the founders of Merriam-Webster and their fellow lexicographers might be reacting if they were alive today. Democrats purposefully distort the definitions of words such as "progressive," "choice," "tolerance," "inclusion" and "equality." Imagine what lexicographers would say if they could see how leftist ideologues have distorted the meaning of the word "racist."

An article by Rob Jenkins titled "Is the Science on Masks Settled? Let's Take a Look" was posted at townhall.com on April 12, 2021. Following is the article.

Leftists love to lecture us about "settled" science. Unfortunately for them, most of the "science" they seem to regard as "settled" is anything but—like catastrophic, anthropogenic global warming, which is still hotly debated among climate scientists. Even if a majority have bought in, a sizable minority aren't fully persuaded. That's hardly a consensus.

At the same time, leftists refuse to acknowledge any scientific consensus that does not conform to their narrative or advance their socialist agenda. Case in point: cloth facemasks as a preventative measure against covid-19. As Dr. Andrew Bostom points out in an interview with noted liberal feminist Naomi Wolf, multiple randomized controlled tests—the “gold standard” of scientific evidence—performed prior to the pandemic found that masks have no impact on the transmission of respiratory viruses. The only RCT conducted since the pandemic began, the so-called “Danmask study,” reached the same conclusion.

The World Health Organization grudgingly concedes as much. A WHO report issued this past December, while (oddly) advising people to continue wearing masks in public, contained this little nugget near the end: “A large randomized community-based trial in which 4862 healthy participants were divided into a group wearing medical/surgical masks and a control group found no difference in infection with SARS-CoV-2. A recent systematic review found nine trials (of which eight were cluster-randomized controlled trials in which clusters of people, versus individuals, were randomized) comparing medical/surgical masks versus no masks to prevent the spread of viral respiratory illness. Two trials were with healthcare workers and seven in the community. The review concluded that wearing a mask may make little or no difference to the prevention of influenza-like illness.”

Did you get that? “No difference with infection . . . little or no difference.” I’m pretty sure, in science-speak, that means masks don’t do anything.

The health sciences bureaucracy of the United States government tacitly agrees. I say “tacitly” because even though they acknowledge the truth, I suppose because they still have some honest scientists—though not apparently in leadership positions—they do so in a way most of us are not supposed to see. To uncover any of this information, you have to follow people on social media like Dr. Bostom and Jennifer Cabrera of RationalGround.com, who are constantly sorting through the chaff to get to the wheat. In journalism, that sort of intentional obfuscation is known as “burying the lede.” In politics, it’s called “propaganda.”

But I digress. I was about to cite the following passage, currently residing on the U.S. Food and Drug Administration’s website: “While a surgical mask may be effective in blocking splashes and large-particle droplets, a face mask, by design, does not filter or block very small particles in the air that may be transmitted by coughs, sneezes, or certain medical procedures.” Coronavirus particles measure between .06 and .14 microns, which certainly qualifies as “very small.” So small, in fact, that wearing a cloth or paper mask as a “barrier” is kind of like putting a chain link fence around your yard to keep out the mosquitoes.

Then there’s a November 2020 article published by the National Institutes of Health (NIH), titled “Facemasks in the Covid-10 era: A health hypothesis.” I would encourage you to read the entire piece, but the money sentence—half-sentence, really—comes in the second paragraph: “Although non-medical cloth or fabric facemasks are neither a medical device nor personal protective equipment . . .” Wait. What? If masks are not actual medical devices, and they don’t provide personal protection, what are they and why should we wear them?

Indeed, as this author goes on to point out—saying the silent part out loud—there are many reasons not to wear them. Besides being useless against respiratory viruses, facemasks can have many negative effects, especially for children and the elderly, including shortness of breath (duh), fear, insomnia, cancer, and diabetes. And that's just for starters. There's quite a long list in the article itself. Go ahead and take a look, but only if you're prepared to be infuriated.

In other words, the WHO, the FDA, and the NIH are all in agreement: The type of masks the populace is being encourage to wear doesn't help, and may even hurt. Virtually all high-level scientific evidence amassed over the last 20 years supports that conclusion.

And yet we still have self-anointed mask nazis accosting the bold, maskless few in grocery stores, accusing us of trying to kill them. We still have leftist shrews shrieking maniacally in their car videos, "Wear your mask!" Worst of all, we still have government officials admonishing us to "follow the science," while admitting masks accomplish nothing, often in the very next breath. In many places, they are forcing us to do so, through unconstitutional mandates, despite the fact that states without such mandates have consistently fared better than those with them.

Why? If the verdict on masks is in—and it is, and has been for a while—why are we still being subjected to this anti-scientific nonsense? Actually, that's a trick question, because I'm pretty sure I know the answer, and so do you. But that's a topic for another day. A more important question for now is, what are we going to do about it? And I would say the answer is to actually follow the science—the real science, not the junk science, which largely consists of measuring how far spit droplets can travel and spraying water at masked mannequins, neither of which has anything to do with how coronavirus is spread.

If we truly follow the science, we will ditch the masks anytime we possibly can, while we still can. Because if the government can make us put a piece of cloth over our nose and mouth, for no valid reason, what can't they make us do?

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the LORD while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the LORD, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word be that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
