Luke 21:34-36—“But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man” (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Staff titled “Chinese Scientists Develop Simulations of Covid-19 Infection to Assist Therapy and Vaccine Research” was posted at global-times.cn on Dec. 9, 2021. Following is the article.

Chinese scientists developed two simulations of a human body infected with covid-19 to assist future research on precision therapy and the testing of efficacy and safety of vaccines and drugs.

The Institute of Microbiology of the Chinese Academy of Sciences (IMCAS) announced the progress made in research models of covid-19 infection on Wednesday.

Research teams from the IMCAS, Tsinghua University and China Agricultural University developed two new models for covid-19 infection: the human distal lung organoids (hDLO) and the humanized pig model.

The existing cell lines and animal models on guinea pigs and some primates used for simulation of covid-19 infection cannot capture the key characteristics of human physiology and therefore limit the accuracy of test on efficacy of vaccines and drugs.

The two new models can show clinical features similar to actual covid-19 patients. The better simulation of a human body has made the two models more reliable on in-depth study of how covid-19 infects and develops in the human body.

As a result, precision therapy and testing of vaccines and drugs can be promoted and improved, the IMCAS said in the announcement.

Supported by several national funds, including China's National Key R&D Programs and National Natural Science Foundation, the research findings have been published on Cell Discovery magazine.

It may sound harmless, but the Canadian Senate's decision to fast track and pass a bill prohibiting "Conversion Therapy" is terribly dangerous and, to date, without precedent worldwide. How on earth did this happen?

An article on Canada's CTV news referred to "the harmful practice" of conversion therapy, noting that this will now be banned for people of all ages, part of a promise made to "the LGBTQ2S+ community" by the current government.

As to why the bill was fast-tracked, Sen. Leo Housakos, a member of Canada's Conservative (?!) Party, explained, "I think we have to get to the reflex in this institution, that when something is in the universal interest, public interest, that we should not create unnecessary duplication and engage into unnecessary debates."

In other words, when there is such widespread agreement that something is so evil and dangerous, we must ask quickly and decisively, without debate and discussion. Let's get this thing done!

How does CTV News define "conversion therapy" (a name created by the critics, not the practitioners)?

It states, "Conversion "therapy," as it has been called, seeks to change a person's sexual orientation to heterosexual or gender identity to cisgender. It can include seeking to repress someone's non-heterosexual attraction, or repressing a person's gender expression or non-cisgender identity.

"These practices can take various forms, including counselling and behavioural modification, and they have been opposed by numerous health and human rights groups."

So, we're not just talking about trying to force gays to try to become straight. Or kidnapping children and subjecting them to torture in a secret reprogramming camp. God forbid.

There is not a genuine Christian I know on the planet who would agree to such practices, nor is there a counselor I know who would engage in them.

If that is what was meant by "conversion therapy," then of course, we should all oppose it.

But that's only the tip of the iceberg.

The reality is that this new bill actually prohibits Christians from practicing their faith when it comes to homosexuality and bisexuality and transgenderism. It also prohibits people who want to get help to pursue change, whatever their age, from pursuing that change—as long as it is changed away from being gay or bi or trans.

Not only so, but the bill prohibits any attempt at “behavioral modification,” meaning, simply wanting to lessen one’s same-sex attractions or actions. This is now forbidden by law.

As expressed by Jose Ruba, communications director of Free to Care, “This means heterosexual Canadians could get support to reduce their unwanted sexual behaviour but non-heterosexuals could not. That is a violation of our Charter rights.”

Talk about dangerous government overreach. Talk about yet another step towards banning the Bible.

This bill is actually the worst thing of its kind that has ever been passed—and it was passed unanimously, with the help of “Conservative” senators. Did we not tell you this was coming?

What happens to a 30-year-old married man with children who secretly struggles with same-sex attraction? Under the new law, could he receive professional counseling to help him deal with these attractions? Not a chance.

He could, however, get counseling to help him embrace his homosexual desires, even if it destroyed his marriage.

What about a 19-year-old woman who feels tormented within her own skin, as if she’s a man trapped in a female body? If she wanted to find wholeness from the inside out, rather than getting on hormones for life and having radical sex-change surgery, could she receive professional counseling? Absolutely not.

But if you’re a 10-year-old child who identifies as trans, you can get a doctor to prescribe puberty blockers for you. And you can start to plan for the first of several sex-change operations when you reach 18.

How utterly perverse.

The opening text of the bill reads:

This enactment amends the Criminal Code to, among other things, create the following offenses.

- Causing another person to undergo conversion therapy.
- Doing anything for the purpose of removing a child from Canada with the intention that the child undergo conversion therapy outside Canada.
- Promoting or advertising conversion therapy.
- Receiving a financial or other material benefits from the provision of conversion therapy.

So, based on provisions c and d, if you are a professional counselor who has helped people with unwanted same-sex attractions or gender-identity confusion for years, you can neither advertise such services nor receive payment for them. Talk about discrimination under the law.

You might say, "You're getting this all wrong. The issue is dangerous conversion therapy. There's no problem with a counselor or a pastor helping someone deal with unwanted same-sex attractions or the like. That's where you're mistaken."

Quite the contrary.

Instead, all positive attempts to help the countless LGBTQ individuals who want to change for personal or religious reasons are branded "conversion therapy." And any belief that homosexual practice is wrong or that God created only two sexes, male and female is now labeled as bigoted.

But don't take my word for it. Listen to the bill's Preamble: "Whereas conversion therapy causes harm to the persons who are subjected to it; Whereas conversion therapy causes harm to society because, among other things, it is based on and propagates myths and stereotypes about sexual orientation, gender identity and gender expression, including the myth that heterosexuality, cisgender gender identity, and gender expression that conforms to the sex assigned to a person at birth are to be preferred over other sexual orientations, gender identities and gender expressions; And whereas, in light of those harms, it is important to discourage and denounce the provision of conversion therapy in order to protect the human dignity and equality of all Canadians; Now, therefore, Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows. . . ."

So, under Canadian law, you are believing in "myths" and "stereotypes" if you affirm what the Bible teaches, namely the following.

- Marriage is the union of one man and one woman.
- Homosexual practice is always sinful in God's sight
- Heterosexuality is God's intended norm for the human race
- There are only two sexes, male and female.
- It is better to be at home in your biological body than to pursue sex change
- With God's help, all people can change
- There are many ex-gay and ex-trans individuals.

As expressed by a Canadian pastor, the LGBT movement, which "fought for tolerance, equality and acceptance . . . now denies these rights for others and demand[s] those with deeply rooted religious convictions deny who they are and conform to a society that hates them."

And what happens to the professional counselor or pastor who offers help to someone struggling? They could be fined or, worse still, go to jail.

When California almost passed a similar bill in 2018, also banning professional help for people of all ages, I dubbed it the "Must Stay Gay" bill, asking if California would ban the Bible and religious books next.

But Canada has long been ahead of America in this regard, to the point that decades back, when Dr. James Dobson would address these issues on his Focus on the Family radio broadcast, the shows could not be aired in Canada.

Now, the nation has taken a very dangerous plunge, awaiting the official signature on the bill from the Governor-General or her designate.

The only solution is for Christian leaders to refuse to comply, preaching the Word openly and saying that change is possible, and for counselors and therapists to do the same, continuing to serve those who willingly come for help.

As for America, wake up! Otherwise, what happened in Canada won't stay in Canada.

An article by Michael Applebaum M.D. titled "Comparing Vaccines" was posted at americanthinker.com on Dec. 7, 2021. Following are excerpts of the article.

So, how do the covid vaccines (grouped together for this piece) compare to other vaccines?

I will tell you. But first, I want to make a few disclaimers.

1. Yes. I am a medical doctor.
2. No. I am not your doctor.
3. No. I am not providing you with medical advice.
4. Yes. I do not know you.
5. What you choose to do re: the covid vaccine is a choice made among (you) + (your physician) + (whomever else you decide to include) +/- (government/employer mandates). I am completely out of it as far as your health care choices are concerned.

As always, it is important to define our terms. For example, when I say "chair," you may conjure an image very different from the one I do.

When it comes to vaccines, vaccinations, and immunity/immunization the definitions depend on the year.

According to the CDC:

■ In 2012

Immunization: The process by which a person or animal becomes protected against a disease. This term is often used interchangeably with vaccination or inoculation.

Vaccination: Injection of a killed or weakened infectious organism in order to prevent the disease.

Vaccine: A product that produces immunity therefore protecting the body from the disease. Vaccines are administered through needle injections, by mouth and by aerosol.

■ In 2015

Immunity: Protection from an infectious disease. If you are immune to a disease, you can be exposed to it without becoming infected.

Vaccine: A product that stimulates a person's immune system to produce immunity to a specific disease, protecting the person from that disease. Vaccines are usually administered through needle injections, but can also be administered by mouth or sprayed into the nose.

Vaccination: The act of introducing a vaccine into the body to produce immunity to a specific disease.

Immunization: A process by which a person becomes protected against a disease through vaccination. This term is often used interchangeably with vaccination or inoculation.

■ In August 2021

Immunity: Protection from an infectious disease. If you are immune to a disease, you can be exposed to it without becoming infected.

Vaccine: A product that stimulates a person's immune system to produce immunity to a specific disease, protecting the person from that disease. Vaccines are usually administered through needle injections, but can also be administered by mouth or sprayed into the nose.

Vaccination: The act of introducing a vaccine into the body to produce immunity to a specific disease.

Immunization: A process by which a person becomes protected against a disease through vaccination. This term is often used interchangeably with vaccination or inoculation.

■ In September 2021

Immunity: Protection from an infectious disease. If you are immune to a disease, you can be exposed to it without becoming infected.

Vaccine: A preparation that is used to stimulate the body's immune response against diseases. Vaccines are usually administered through needle injections, but some can be administered by mouth or sprayed into the nose.

Vaccination: The act of introducing a vaccine into the body to produce protection from a specific disease.

Immunization: A process by which a person becomes protected against a disease through vaccination. This term is often used interchangeably with vaccination or inoculation.

Over time, about 9 years, a vaccine has gone from preventing illness to protecting from illness to producing immunity to stimulating the body's immune response against diseases.

The definition of vaccine seems, arguably, on the same trajectory as a meritocracy. Next up—vaccines will get participation trophies.

Some of you may be aware, the powers-that-be are suggesting boosters and/or an additional dose. The two are not the same.

- A covid-19 booster is given when a person has completed their vaccine series, and protection against the virus has decreased over time.

- An additional dose is administered to people with moderately to severely compromised immune systems. This additional dose is intended to improve immunocompromised people's response to their initial vaccine series.

This issue of protection against the virus decreasing over time, though not a unique characteristic of the covid vaccines, is distinguishable in some ways from other vaccines.

As examples, tetanus and diphtheria vaccines take "over 40 years for protective immunity to be lost," while immunity to measles and rubella has a decay rate of "only 1% to 2% of the population losing protective immunity per decade." "For vaccinia, just over 60% of the population have protective levels of antibodies at the outset (year 0), and this has dropped to 40% after 100 years—which corresponds to about 3% of the population losing protective immunity per decade."

The period of protection conferred by the covid vaccine is of a hugely shorter duration than other vaccines.

Other vaccines?

- Hepatitis A—"The vaccine to prevent it is about 95% effective in healthy adults and can work for more than 20 years. In children, it's about 85% effective and can last 15 to 20 years."
- Hepatitis B—"Studies indicate that immunologic memory remains intact for at least 30 years among healthy people who initiated hepatitis B vaccination at >6 months of age (16). The vaccine confers long-term protection against clinical illness and chronic hepatitis B virus infection. Cellular immunity appears to persist even though antibody levels might become low or decline below detectable levels."
- MMR (Measles, Mumps, Rubella)—"People who receive MMR vaccination according to the U.S. vaccination schedule are usually considered protected for life against measles and rubella. While MMR provides effective protection against mumps for most people, immunity against mumps may decrease over time and some people may no longer be protected against mumps later in life. An additional dose may be needed if you are at risk because of a mumps outbreak."
- Tdap (Tetanus, diphtheria and pertussis)—"[A]dults should receive a booster dose of either Tdap or Td (a different vaccine that protects against tetanus and diphtheria but not pertussis) every 10 years, or after 5 years in the case of a severe or dirty wound or burn." (emphasis in the original)

As can be seen, the covid vaccine protection is toward, if not at, the low end of the vaccine protection spectrum.

[At this point in the article, Dr. Applebaum quoted excerpts from an article by Staff titled "Moderna CEO: 'Booster Shots Forever' " that was posted at teamtuckercarlson.com on Sept. 23, 2021. Instead of merely listing the excerpts, the entire article that Dr. Applebaum used as his source is posted immediately after this one.]

As far as vaccines go, it looks as if an argument can be made that the covid vaccine has benefitted from low expectations.

Looking back to September 2021, an article by Staff titled "Moderna CEO [Stephane Bancel]: 'Booster Shots Forever' " was posted at teamtuckercarlson.com on Sept. 23, 2021. Following is the article.

The CEO of pharmaceutical giant Moderna says that even younger people will have to get vaccine booster shots at least once every three years, meaning that a two-tier society which punishes the unvaccinated could remain in place indefinitely.

According to Stephane Bancel, the pandemic will continue for at least another year, at which point there will be enough vaccine doses "so that everyone on this Earth can be vaccinated."

This includes jabs for infants and booster shots for those who require them.

"Those who don't get vaccinated will immunize themselves naturally because the Delta variant is so contagious," said Bancel, although he went on to assert that such people would still get ill.

"You can either get vaccinated and have a good winter. Or you don't do it and risk getting sick and possibly even ending up in hospital," said the Moderna CEO.

Bancel says life will return to normal "in a year," but that this will be dependent on people continuing to receive regular covid-19 booster jabs.

The CEO said older and vulnerable people would "undoubtedly" need refresher shots at least once a year, while even younger people who face an infinitesimal chance of dying from the virus will need booster shots every three years.

As data shows that covid-19 vaccines do not provide long-lasting immune protection, countries such as Israel and Austria are canceling "expired" vaccination cards and requiring citizens and visitors to receive booster shots to 'refresh' their vaccination status so they can continue to "live as part of society."

These countries are possibly writing a new chapter in human history. Citizens are only allowed to participate in society if they regularly have a liquid injected into their bodies. The average person does not know what is inside the liquid, and may never know.

This is happening at the same time as highly vaccinated country Iceland say that vaccination cannot achieve herd immunity, claiming that can only be obtained through controlled contagions. A scientific study from Israel also shows that natural immunity is superior to some covid-19 vaccines against the Delta variant.

At this point, skeptics question whether vaccination is really still about protecting the population or much more about profits, kickbacks, and commission payments to willing helpers, as well as control of citizens through fear so that profits continue to flow.

Israeli data show that the effectiveness of Pfizer's covid-19 vaccine has dropped from 95% relative risk reduction during the initial trials to only 39% by the end of July, so the Israeli government is now putting pressure on citizens to take a third "booster dose" by declaring that the vaccination passports of those who have received only two experimental injections will expire after six months.

Israel's "green passport," which proves receipt of two doses of Pfizer's vaccine and allows citizens to participate in ordinary activities such as visiting restaurants, going to gyms, conferences, and entertainment, will now be linked to the date of the last vaccine dose.

"We are updating what it means to be vaccinated," Israeli coronavirus head Salman Zarka told reporters at a press conference Sunday, August 29.

"This is simply because the vaccine is only valid for five to six months in terms of its effectiveness. After about half a year, you need to get a third dose. Otherwise, the vaccine loses its effectiveness," Health Minister Nitzan Horowitz said as he indicated that his government was considering revoking citizens' Green Passports if they did not receive a third dose of the vaccine.

"The Green Passport certifies that a person is safe in a certain way. The moment we know that the vaccine loses its effectiveness after a certain amount of time, there is no longer any justification for giving a Green Passport to someone who has not received another dose," Horowitz said.

In August, Austria and Croatia were the first countries to announce that they would set expiration dates for older vaccine shots.

They will accept covid passports from travelers who have received their second dose no more than 270 days before arriving at their borders.

Fully vaccinated individuals have the privilege of entering the country without the mandatory 10-day quarantine and PCR testing, while unvaccinated individuals are not considered fully vaccinated unless vaccination occurs within the nine-month period.

The move is not unthinkable for the U.S. either, as Joe Biden said last week that he and covid White House adviser Anthony Fauci would discuss the possibility of a booster shot of the covid vaccine every five months.

"The question that comes up is whether it should be less than eight months or even just five months. That's being discussed right now. I talked to Dr. Fauci about it this morning,” Biden said last Friday during an Oval Office visit with Israeli Prime Minister Naftali Bennett after congratulating him on his country’s aggressive vaccination campaign, despite a recent spike in covid-19 cases.

Canada’s Liberal government under Justin Trudeau began ordering booster doses of surplus vaccines in April and has now ordered up to 293 million doses for Canada’s 37 million citizens.

The United Kingdom, France, Germany, Belgium, Ireland, Luxembourg, Lithuania, and Malta have announced plans to offer booster vaccines to “at-risk” populations beginning in the fall.

This means that those hoping to ride out the pandemic while remaining unvaccinated, with all freedoms returned next year, may actually face a permanent bio-security police state which keeps them under de facto lockdown forever.

Those who for whatever reason refuse to take their booster jabs will also face discrimination when it comes to travel and basic lifestyle activities in many countries.

Despite Bancel’s insistence that the entire planet will have been offered a vaccine within a year, according to Amnesty International, “Moderna has not yet delivered a single vaccine dose to a low-income country.”

Amid these developments, vaccine maker Pfizer raises its 2021 revenue forecast to US$33.5 billion, making the covid-19 vaccine its most profitable drug ever.

“Eye on the World” comment: The following article was written by a columnist who does not have a high opinion about the companies involved with the covid vaccine passport. Many people hope that her perspective is not true.

The profit-maximizing corporations that covet your “digital health” data hide behind nonprofit umbrella groups that pose as public interest do-gooders. These vaccine passport profiteers are turning millions of human beings into walking QR codes in the name of fighting covid-19 and under the guise of bringing “normalcy” back. It’s an unprecedented worldwide racket that rewards compliant sheep and punishes free-thinking, autonomy-seeking citizens.

Let’s name them.

Here in my adopted home of Colorado, the state government is pimping the Smart Health Card “allowing users to verify and share their vaccination status.” Who’s behind Smart Health Card technology, which is now being used in Canada, Puerto Rico, the Cayman Islands, Australia and a total of 12 states, including California, Washington state, Virginia, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Oregon—as well as CVS and Rite Aid pharmacies, Kaiser Permanente, UC Health, Walgreens, Walmart, Express Scripts and United Healthcare Services?

The Commons Project Foundation (known as “TCP”) is the massive nonprofit entity responsible for Smart Health’s dominance of the vaccine passport market. It says it “builds and operates digital platforms and services for the common good.” TCP oversees the Common Trust Network (which operates a global registry of organizations that issue vaccine passports). You will notice on every vaccine passport system’s website and in their public relations statements an emphasis on how these intrusive tracking measures are meant “to empower individuals with digital access to their vaccination records,” as Paul Meyer, CEO of The Commons Project, put it, to allow people “to safely return to travel, work, school and life while protecting their data privacy.”

TCP also created and collaborates with VCI, the Vaccination Credential Initiative.

Who is behind VCI? The nonprofit calls itself a “voluntary coalition of public and private organizations” committed to “empowering individuals to gain access to their verifiable clinical information,” including “a trustworthy and verifiable copy of their vaccination records in digital or paper form using open, interoperable standards.” Its steering group is a who’s who of for-profit Big Tech and Big Health corporations looking for ways to profit off personal data, including Apple, Microsoft, Cerner, Amazon Web Services, Google, Epic, the Mayo Clinic, Oracle, Salesforce, Evernorth (Cigna’s health services business) and something called the Mitre Corporation.

What is Mitre? It’s a nonprofit, Cold War-era conglomerate headquartered near the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and near the Deep State in McLean, Virginia, which oversees billions of dollars of federally funded research in the military, homeland security, cybersecurity and now, of course, the explosively lucrative health data market. According to Forbes, Mitre raked in $1.8 billion in revenue in 2019 and boasts a $2 billion budget funded by American taxpayers. One of its many government gigs includes a $16.3 million contract with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to help build “an enduring national capability to contain covid-19,” plus a $20 million joint partnership with the CDC on disease surveillance technology and services.

As Forbes reported, the secretive military-industrial alliance brags ominously in its promotional material: “You may not know it, but Mitre touches your life most every day.”

They’re everywhere.

Clear Secure Inc., the for-private biometric tech company that makes the touchless fast passes for airline travelers, jumped into the burgeoning vaccine passport industry this past year and filed to go public after announcing partnerships with Walmart; the NBA; and dozens of sports, entertainment, theater, casino and restaurant venues. According to one business reporter, “over 70,000 of Clear’s Health Passes are being used for venue admission weekly.”

In New York, 1.1 million residents have dutifully submitted to the Excelsior Pass regime. IBM Watson Works is behind the Big Apple and Empire State's vaccine credentialing system, which it likened positively to a "credit score" and launched in the fall of 2020 in order for New Yorkers to "return to the activities they love." According to Business Insider, the company generates $1 billion in annual revenue.

What the vaccine passport profiteers' feel-good, do-gooder propaganda won't tell you is how the facade of pandemic philanthropy obscures the insatiable appetite of tech oligarchs collecting vast amounts of intimate health data by giving away "free" apps and software to control freak bureaucrats worldwide. They're not doing you a favor. They're using you to construct a totalitarian regime of vax-partheid that discriminates against anyone who dares follow the money to find the truth.

This isn't about covid-19 control. It's about mind control. Know your enemies, and for the sake of what's left of the land of the brave, do not comply.

An article by Oliver North and David Goetsch titled “Lawlessness in America: The ‘Progressive’ Culture of Death” was posted at townhall.com on Dec. 7, 2021. Following is the article.

America, once a nation of laws, is fast becoming a lawless country. Consider recent headlines. Darrell Brooks Jr., who should have been in jail, plowed his speeding SUV into a Christmas parade, killing six and injuring 61 celebrants, including grandmothers, mothers and their children. Well before Brooks weaponized his SUV to perpetrate a massacre, he already had a long record of violent criminal behavior. Nevertheless, progressive officials set him free with minimal bond on the streets of Waukesha, Wisconsin, to kill and maim innocent Americans.

In California, New York, Illinois and Minnesota, four of the most progressive states in the U.S., criminal gangs have been targeting high-end retail outlets for blatant smash-and-grab burglaries. Looters smash glass doors and windows of retail establishments, threaten employees, take what they want and flee with their loot. These criminal mobs have little to fear from law enforcement. The places they target are in states and municipalities governed by progressive politicians who insist on defunding the police, releasing suspects without bail and allowing violent felons out of prison years before their sentences are served.

The rapidly deteriorating state of law and order has people asking, “What is happening to our country?” The answer is simple: We are all reaping what progressives have sewn by devaluing human life. A tragic consequence of the devaluation of human life is the culture of death now pervading American society. When our political leaders legalize the murder of innocent, unborn children, should anyone really be surprised when murder becomes mundane?

American citizens who try to defend themselves and their property from violent looters, arsonists and criminals are immediately labeled “white supremacists,” “vigilantes” or worse by the media. That’s what happened to Mark and Patricia McCloskey in St. Louis last June when they defended their lives and home from a mob.

An even more egregious example is the case of young Kyle Rittenhouse following his acquittal for defending himself against violent lawbreakers trying to kill him. The three people he shot in self-defense were white, yet the mainstream media labeled him a “white supremacist.”

Writing for the Washington Post, Kathleen Parker recently decried a rising tide of “vigilante justice” and asked, “When did we start permitting Americans to take the law into their own hands?”

This inane question indicates how out of touch American leftists really are. We forewarn of this response to lawlessness in our new book, “Tragic Consequences: The Price America is Paying for Rejecting God,” scheduled for release in March 2022. We also describe the tragic consequences when people no longer revere the sanctity of human life: inter alia, mass shootings, violent mobs, killing children, road rage, rampant substance abuse, skyrocketing teen suicide.

Herewith, questions for Parker and her progressive followers: When public officials, elected to protect us, fail to do so and instead side with criminals, when they defund law enforcement, and when prosecutors release criminals to prey on us, what do you expect law-abiding citizens to do?

For Brooks, this query has an easy answer: Lock him up!

What then is the response to last week’s tragic shooting at Oxford High School in Michigan, where a 15-year-old killed four schoolmates and wounded seven before being taken into custody?

The killer, his parents and perhaps some school officials will be held accountable. But the greater question is, why are children killing children? Democrats are sure to blame the firearm and the Second Amendment. But the real problem is the absence of respect for the sanctity of human life—and the progressive culture of death.

An article by Laura Hollis titled “The Left’s Coup Is the Overthrow of Truth” was posted at townhall.com on Dec. 9, 2021. Following is the article.

The left keeps taking larger leaps into lunacy. This week, The Atlantic published a series of articles that tell us how Donald Trump is poised to destroy our democracy (again!). One is titled, "Trump's next coup has already begun."

Did you catch that? If you're sane, you might find yourself asking, "Wait, when was the last one?" After all, a "coup," according to the Oxford Dictionary online, is a "sudden, violent and illegal seizure of power from a government." Merriam-Webster informs the reader that the word comes from the French term "coup d'état," which means a "sudden and violent overthrow of a government" (often, though not always, by the military).

So, when was our government overthrown by Trump? The answer, of course, is that it wasn't—ever.

The hyperventilating author of this piece, Barton Gellman, is referencing the protesters (and others) who got into the Capitol on Jan. 6, an event that he claims "sent members of Congress fleeing for their lives." Calling this a "coup" takes exaggeration to new extremes. Until recently, the most common appellation given to the Jan. 6 event was "insurrection" and even that is hyperbole bordering on hysteria.

The definition of "insurrection" is "a violent attempt to take control of a government." Not only has the FBI admitted that there was no evidence of any kind of "plot" behind the mobs that stormed the Capitol (How do you attempt to overthrow a government without a plan?) but not a single person who entered the Capitol building was armed. Footage shows Capitol Police letting people into the building, and scores of people calmly strolling through it like they were in a museum. New evidence has come to light suggesting that it was the feds themselves instigating the violence that did take place.

Gellman segues smoothly from exaggeration to gaslighting. "Technically," he demurs in his first paragraph, "the next attempt to overthrow an election . . . will rely more on subversion than on violence, though each will have its place. If the plot succeeds, the ballots cast by American voters will not decide the presidency in 2024. Thousands of votes will be thrown away, or millions, to produce the required effect. The winner will be declared the loser. The loser will be certified president-elect." Gellman then accuses "state Republican operatives" of achieving this malevolent feat by "building an apparatus of election theft."

Gee, Mr. Gellman—project much?

The Atlantic articles manage to ignore Democrats' manipulation of the 2020 election, including hundreds of millions of dollars left-leaning organizations pumped into states to change election laws, often illegally, as well as the widespread implementation of practices like universal mail-in ballots, drop boxes and ballot harvesting that render ballots unverifiable and easily exploited for election fraud.

See how this works? When Democrats game the system or cheat, it's "saving democracy." But when Republicans and conservatives vote in large numbers and pass laws to protect the integrity of the system, it's a "coup."

Propaganda this baldfaced would be laughable were it not so dangerous.

Conservatives have long complained that leftists see themselves as not merely correct on the issues but morally superior to those who disagree. Now, anyone who pushes back against Democrats' disastrous political and economic policies is a racist, a white supremacist, an insurrectionist, a criminal, a terrorist.

These inflammatory accusations aren't just being leveled at conservative candidates in political campaigns. They are being used against ordinary Americans to justify deprivation of First Amendment rights, illegal surveillance, unconstitutional searches and seizures of property, even arrests and incarceration without due process protections. This, unlike Gellman's manic jeremiads, isn't speculation; it's fact. Ask Jews in New York City who were prevented from worshipping, even in their own homes, during covid lockdowns last year. Ask the New York Post, whose truthful reporting on the contents of Hunter Biden's laptop was shut down by leftist-run social media companies Facebook and Twitter. Ask James O'Keefe and other Project Veritas reporters who were recently subjected to pre-dawn raids of their homes by the FBI because they reported Ashley Biden's stolen diary to the police. Ask the irate parents protesting pornography and policies that protect sexual predators at their children's schools—parents the Justice Department labeled "domestic terrorists."

Ask the dozens of Jan. 6 defendants who have been sitting in the D.C. Metropolitan gulag for months, in squalid third-world conditions, denied bail, Communion and even basic medical care.

Democrats continue to tell themselves that Trump is the source, the mother lode, the lynchpin of Americans' opposition to their leftward lurch, apparently believing that if they can neutralize Trump, that opposition will dissolve.

I've got bad news for them. Ain't gonna happen.

Here's the truth: Trump didn't create anything. He didn't cause anything. Trump only tapped the public sentiment that had preexisted his entry into the political sphere for years. Americans—Black, white, Hispanic, native-born and immigrant, working class and wealthy, business owners, farmers and the military—were sick to death of being ignored, insulted and lied to by D.C. swamp dwellers (of both parties), the news media and other self-appointed elites. They supported Trump because he amplified their voices; he understood their concerns.

Those newly unified voices are not going away; in fact, they are growing in number. The 74 million people who voted for Trump in 2020 have had their worst fears confirmed with each passing day of Biden's dementia-addled administration. Millions more who actually voted for Biden realize they were sold a bill of goods, whether they admit it publicly or not.

Democrats must know this. The party has been yanked so far to the left that their policies don't even appeal to a majority of the American public. That's why they lie.

The real "coup" isn't conservatives' efforts to preserve election integrity; it's the left's attempt to overthrow the truth in their quest for power.

They must be defeated.

μAn article by Ben Shapiro titled “The Left’s War With Biological Reality” was posted at creators.com on Dec. 8, 2021. Following is the article.

As the Supreme Court determines whether to preserve the Court-created “right to abortion” under Roe v. Wade, those on the feminist Left have gone into full-blown panic mode. Women’s rights, they insist, will implode without granting women the ability to abort their children; only that ability can equalize the natural inequalities of biology, by which women are saddled with the burden of childbearing and child rearing.

This war with biology is central to the Left’s definition of autonomy itself. In the pages of The New York Times, Democratic activist Elizabeth Spiers made this perfectly clear in arguing that abortion ought to be considered the moral alternative to adoption. “When I awoke,” she writes, “my son would wake up shortly after and I’d feel him turning and stretching, or less pleasantly, jamming his precious little foot into what felt like my cervix. This is one of the paradoxes of pregnancy: something alien is usurping your body and sapping you of nutrition and energy, but you’re programmed to gleefully enable it and you become desperately protective of it. It’s a kind of biological brainwashing.”

Biological brainwashing.

The same people who maintain that your biology dictates that you can be a man in a woman’s body and that this represents not gender dysphoria—truly, a form of biological brainwashing—but an objective reality to which all of society should conform also argue that biology creates morally unjust connections between mother and child. As Spiers says, “biological brainwashing . . . occurs during pregnancy”; mothers cannot “simply choose not to bond with a child she’s gestating solely on the basis that she is not ready to be a mother or believes that she is unable to provide for the child.” This means that women should consider killing the child rather than putting it up for adoption.

The language of “biological brainwashing” doesn’t stop with the bond between mother and child. This week, Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, D-N.Y., the spectacularly dull Instagram star, characterized opposition to abortion as the legalization of “forced birth.” In her view, biology itself is an imposition on women (the Left conveniently drops its Orwellian “birthing people” lingo when abortion is at stake); ending a pregnancy by killing an unborn child is a restoration of the natural order.

Precisely the opposite is true, of course. A predictable result of sex—in fact, the evolutionary biological purpose of sex—is procreation. The process by which conception results in birth is continuous and natural. Interfering in that process by forced killing of an unborn human life is definitionally unnatural.

But so is the entire Leftist worldview by which true autonomy represents an opposition between spirit and flesh. According to the Left, any check on our ambitions—even a check provided by the reality of biology—must be overcome in order to establish true equality of opportunity. Women are different than men in biology; therefore, biology must be opposed.

The results of this madness are obvious: men and women alienated from themselves, angry at the realities of life, willing to forgo perhaps the greatest joy of existence—the perpetuation of the human species through the birth of children. But other civilizations are not so suicidal. While we amuse ourselves to death, solipsistically focused on our own subjective sense of autonomy, other civilizations recognize, at the very least, that biology is an inescapable reality. Those civilizations that best conform to the beauty of that reality will thrive. Those that do not will destroy themselves.

An article by James Agresti titled “Facts of Science Prove That Each Human Life Begins at Fertilization” was posted at cnsnews.com on Dec. 6, 2021. Following is the article.

On Wednesday Dec. 1, the U.S. Supreme Court heard oral arguments in Dobbs v. Jackson. This case involves a Mississippi law that limits abortion to 15 “weeks’ gestation except in medical emergency and in cases of severe fetal abnormality.”

■ During the hearing, Mississippi Solicitor General Scott G. Stewart defended the law by asserting that the State of Mississippi has an interest in preventing “the purposeful termination of a human life.”

■ But Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor challenged him and declared: “How is your interest anything but a religious view? The issue of when life begins has been hotly debated by philosophers since the beginning of time. It’s still debated in religions. So, when you say this is the only right that takes away from the state the ability to protect a life, that’s a religious view.”

Contrary to Sotomayor and regardless of what any philosopher or religious leader may think, the facts of science are clear that each human life begins at fertilization. As documented below, these facts are from credible science publications that don’t argue for or against abortion. In other words, they are not polemics from people with science degrees but facts from neutral scientific authorities.

The “American Heritage Dictionary of Science”—which was written by nine highly credentialed scientists under a “precise editorial review” to maintain “a standard of excellence”—defines “life” as “the form of existence that organisms like animals and plants have and that inorganic objects or organic dead bodies lack; animate existence, characterized by growth, reproduction, metabolism, and response to stimuli.”

Those four defining characteristics of life are all present during or soon after fertilization, which occurs when a sperm and egg unite to form a zygote, or the earliest stage of a human embryo.

1. Growth: Per the textbook "Essentials of Human Development: A Life-Span View," "fertilization begins the period of the zygote" and "the zygote grows rapidly through cell division."

2. Reproduction: Per a paper in the Biochemical Journal, "sexual reproduction in mammals results in the formation of a zygote, a single cell which contains all the necessary information to produce an entire organism comprised of billions of cells grouped into multitudinous cell types."

3. Metabolism: Per the medical text "Human Gametes and Preimplantation Embryos: Assessment and Diagnosis," "at the zygote stage," the human embryo metabolizes "carboxylic acids pyruvate and lactate as its preferred energy substrates."

4. Response to stimuli: The "Oxford Dictionary of Biochemistry and Molecular Biology" defines a "stimulus" as "any event or phenomenon, such as radiation, electrical potential, or addition of molecules that leads to excitation of a tissue or cell." Experiments have found that human zygotes respond to such stimulants. For example, a paper in the journal Human Reproduction Update documents that a compound called platelet-activating factor "acts upon the zygote" by stimulating "metabolism," "cell-cycle progression," and "viability."

Nor is a zygote just a form of human life like a skin cell. It is an actual human life. As explained in "Van Nostrand's Scientific Encyclopedia," "at the moment the sperm cell of the human male meets the ovum of the female and the union results in a fertilized ovum (zygote), a new life has begun."

In keeping with the facts above, clinical literature is explicit that each new human life begins at fertilization.

- The "Encyclopedia & Dictionary of Medicine, Nursing & Allied Health" states that "human reproduction" is "the process by which the male's sperm unites with the female's oocyte, creating a new life."

- The embryology textbook "Before We Are Born: Essentials of Embryology and Birth Defects" states that "the zygote and early embryo are living human organisms."

- The medical textbook "The Developing Human: Clinically Oriented Embryology" states that "fertilization" creates "a new combination of chromosomes that is different from that in the cells of either of the parents," and this "is the beginning of a new human being."

- The clinical book "An Atlas of the Human Embryo and Fetus: A Photographic Review of Human Prenatal Development" states, "A human being originates from two living cells: the oocyte (female germ cell) and the spermatozoon (male germ cell), transmitting the torch of life to the next generation."

Although controversial from a political perspective, the scientific facts of embryology, genetics, and molecular biology leave no doubt as to when each human life begins—fertilization.

An article by Bill Hutchinson titled “ ‘It’s Just Crazy’: 12 Major Cities Hit All-Time Homicide Records” was posted at abcnews.com on Dec. 8, 2021. Following are excerpts of the article.

Here are two significant statistics.

- Chicago (the nation’s third-largest city) leads the nation with 739 homicides as of the end of November—up 3% from 2020. Chicago’s deadliest year remains 1970 when there were 974 homicides.
- Philadelphia (a city of roughly 1.5 million people) has had more homicides this year (521 as of Dec. 6) than the nation’s two largest cities—New York had 443 as of Dec. 5 and Los Angeles has 352 as of Nov. 27.

Here are the 12 cities that have broken their record.

- Albuquerque, New Mexico
- Austin, Texas
- Baton Rouge, Louisiana
- Columbus, Ohio
- Indianapolis, Indiana
- Louisville, Kentucky
- Portland, Oregon
- Rochester, New York
- Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
- St. Paul, Minnesota
- Toledo, Ohio

Isaiah 55:6-11—"Seek you the LORD while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the LORD, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. 'For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,' says the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word be that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it."
