Luke 21:34-36—“But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man” (Weymouth New Testament).

A video and an article titled “Are People Getting Full Facts on Covid Vaccine Risks?” were posted at totalhealth.co.uk on June 28, 2021 (updated on Jan. 3, 2022). Following are excerpts of the article.

The original inventor of the mRNA vaccine (and DNA vaccine) core platform technology currently used to create the so-called covid vaccines is Dr. Robert W Malone. Dr. Malone has been expressing serious concerns about how therapeutic approaches that are still in the research phase are being imposed on an ill-informed public. He says that public health leadership has, “stepped over the line and is now violating the bedrock principles which form the foundation upon which the ethics of clinical research are built.”

Dr. Malone asks why health leaders seem to be so afraid of sharing the adverse event data. He says, “Why is it necessary to suppress discussion and full disclosure of information concerning mRNA reactogenicity and safety risks?”

He goes on to say that we should be analysing the safety data and risks vigorously. Again he asks, “Is there information or patterns that can be found, such as the recent finding of the cardiomyopathy signals, or the latent virus reactivation signals? We should be enlisting the best biostatistics and machine learning experts to examine these data, and the results should—no, must—be made available to the public promptly.”

For any drug it has always been important to have systems in place for monitoring adverse events. However, for an experimental, genetic modifying approach that has not been fully tested, and where the public are effectively the guinea pigs, this information should be immediately and readily available. As previously reported in Total Health, the fact that it is so difficult to access and make sense of the US VAERS, and UK Yellow Card reporting systems—along with low reporting simply raises further concern about what is actually happening.

See also “serious scientific concerns” over UK Yellow Card adverse event preliminary reports.

(Update July 23, 2021—Review of latest VAERS reports.)

Risk of harm should have been prominently and independently disclosed

According to a paper published in PubMed, “The specific and significant covid-19 risk of ADE should have been and should be prominently and independently disclosed to research subjects currently in vaccine trials, as well as those being recruited for the trials and future patients after vaccine approval, in order to meet the medical ethics standard of patient comprehension for informed consent.”

The paper explains the lack of informed consent especially with regard to known concerns for the potential of ADE (antibody dependent enhancement), and that covid-19 vaccines could “worsen disease upon exposure to challenge or circulating virus.”

Is the mRNA vaccine effective against covid?

■ What does the latest mortality data tell us?

There is some evidence that the mRNA vaccine possibly reduces disease severity in some patients, but a) does not prevent infection, and b) does not prevent transmission. Indeed, there is increasing evidence that areas with the highest vaccination rates, also have the highest case rates, for example when comparing Maine with California.

Professor Norman Fenton in a presentation to the World Council for Health—General Assembly, very clearly points out concerns over the misclassification of data and how vaccine effectiveness has been badly assessed by Pfizer and subsequently by UK authorities (Office for National Statistics).

He concludes his report making the following points.

1. Vaccine effectiveness studies are generally flawed.
2. The anomalies in the ONS report most easily explained by misclassification of some unvaccinated deaths as vaccinated.
3. After adjusting it appears that shortly after vaccination people may be exposed to an increased mortality risk.
4. The ONS data is both unreliable and misleading.
5. The ONS data provide no reliable evidence that the vaccines reduce all-cause mortality.

See—“Evidence for vaccine efficacy questionable.”

■ Double jabbed—double case rates

According to the latest government official UK reports, case rates per 100,000 are now double in the double vaccinated population compared to the unvaccinated for people aged 40 to 79.

Many people are starting to ask why this is? There are a number of fundamental immunological reasons—listed and explained here . Sound biological reasons range from the fact that a shot in the arm is not effective against mucosal (lung) infections, the pressure on variant shift, the need for a good T-cell response—that is absent with this form of inoculation—and the immune principle of ‘original antigenic sin’.

Work conducted by The Robert Koch Institute and Institute for Environmental Medicine, Germany and published in The Lancet in November 2021 states, “Many decision-makers assume that the vaccinated can be excluded as a source of transmission. It appears to be grossly negligent to ignore the vaccinated population as a possible and relevant source of transmission when deciding about public health control measures.”

Whistleblower reports falsified data

According to The BMJ it now also appears that there were fundamental problems with the quality of the data produced by one of the contract research organisations hired by Pfizer to conduct the covid-19 clinical trial. Reports include “falsified data, unblinded patients, employed inadequately trained vaccinators.”

Tampering with medical evidence

Following the publication of this article in The BMJ and sharing on Facebook, readers started finding Facebook comments when attempting to share, such as, “false information.” As a result, the editors of the BMJ felt compelled to have to write an open letter to Mark Zuckerberg. They point out that the Facebook fact checkers were found, “to be inaccurate, incompetent and irresponsible.”

The editors go on to say that it is not just The BMJ that gets subjected to this form of incompetence. “We are aware that The BMJ is not the only high quality information provider to have been affected by the incompetence of Meta’s fact checking regime. To give one other example, we would highlight the treatment by Instagram (also owned by Meta) of Cochrane, the international provider of high quality systematic reviews of the medical evidence.

Global analysis

According to the official summary yellow card reporting website, “Vaccination is the single most effective way to reduce deaths and severe illness from covid-19. A national immunisation campaign has been underway since early December 2020.” However, as widely reported in 2020 and following a meta-analysis of work performed by doctors around the world treating covid patients, the drug Ivermectin could well have been a more effective and safer alternative to experimental genetic modification.

In podcasts with Lex Fridman and with Joe Rogan, research biologist Bret Weinstein clearly explains the situation with regard to research, biology and censorship—Truth, Science, and Censorship in the Time of a Pandemic.

Truth is always the first victim

Bret Weinstein points out that, “Public Health has a self-assigned ‘right to lie,’” and goes on to highlight how the, “WHO and CDC over-simplify stories in order to ensure game theory, and there is a predictable tragedy of the commons.” He states, “Once the right to lie exists it serves the purposes of the pharmaceutical companies.

Emergency authorizations that do not require the treatment to be safe. This means they get immunity from liability for harms caused by their product. That’s a recipe for disaster.” He goes on to make the point that it is to even greater benefit to the pharmaceutical companies if other products (such as Ivermectin) happen to fail to be noticed.

(Update July 29, 2021—Two day emergency “lifestream” summit organized by Doctors for Covid Ethics presenting international scientists, lawyers and economists who are “calling for immediate interventions in the current crisis.”)

Covid-19 Interdisciplinary Symposium calling for an immediate intervention: July 29th and 30th, 17.00pm—22.00pm BST

Topics for discussion during the livestream include: “The propaganda matrix—the complicit role of the media” and “Pharmacokinetics and toxicity of mRNA vaccines.”

Block on information on treatments

Dr Peter McCullough testifying to a Texas Senate Committee asks why covid patients are not being offered information on—or standard treatments that can prevent hospitalization and death. He says, not a single paper tells doctors how to treat patients. “Not a single one. When does that happen?”

He goes on to point out that the reason why there had to be senate testimony is because there was, “a near total block on any information on treatment for patients.”

Selective under-reporting, re-defining and excessive exaggeration with amplification

The UK government Coronavirus vaccine—weekly summary of Yellow Card reporting (to 16th June) starts the report with the following sentence: “At the time of this report, over 127,954 people across the UK have died within 28 days of a positive test for coronavirus (covid-19).” This opening statement is probably an example of the nature of the difficulty that Dr Weinstein refers to. The problem with this statement is that you are lead to believe that 127,954 people have died of covid, but this is simply not true.

The reality is that these people have died with a positive test for covid-19, which is a very different thing, and may well have died of other natural causes. We know that the PCR tests have suffered high levels of false positives and a test positive does not mean you have active disease or are a ‘case’.

(Update July 29, 2021—PCR tests to be withdrawn CDC issue 'lab alert' on PCR tests.

What is the false positive rate?

By re-defining the medical term 'case', the daily public health messages became excessively exaggerated and this along with other methodologies (including excessive PCR Ct amplification), ramped up levels of public concern. Official public petitions requesting that the government release the data on the levels of false positive reporting were simply not adequately responded to the big questions remain unanswered.

- How many people actually died from covid the disease?
- How many people are being harmed by the vaccines?

Dr Malone says: "What is being done by suppressing open disclosure and debate concerning the profile of adverse events associated with these vaccines violates fundamental bioethical principles for clinical research."

With regard to the use and abuse of misinformation, the inventor of these vaccines says that the public have to be given accurate information to allow informed consent.

He says: "The suppression of information, discussion, and outright censorship concerning these current covid vaccines which are based on gene therapy technologies cast a bad light on the entire vaccine enterprise. It is my opinion that the adult public can handle information and open discussion. Furthermore, we must fully disclose any and all risks associated with these experimental research products."

In short, it is simply not possible to arrive at a position of informed consent unless you have access to the full facts around your options and the associated risks and benefits.

In a paper published in aacc.org, Professor Stanley Levinson et al summarize some of the evidence concerning the false positive testing rates with PCR.

- At an individual patient level he points out why some people "seem" to get the disease twice, but the second infection was actually caused by the initial false positive result.
- He indicates that as many as 5 in100 test results are false positives.
- This may not seem like a big number, but when you are testing 100,000 people a day this would give a number of 5,000 so-called "cases" a day.

Sound familiar?

False positive tests cause hospitalization and infection

Prof Levinson points out that there are negative psychological implications of thinking you are infected when you are not. Therefore some people with illness other than covid-19 who test false positive might be hospitalized along with actual covid-19 patients and become infected.

"This may explain why some persons seem to have been infected twice: the first time being a false positive. It seems to me it is important for practicing medical professionals to be aware of these issues so that they can appropriately advise and direct suspect patients for additional testing."

Natural immunity may over-rule need for vaccine anyway

According to a recent peer-reviewed paper in the journal Nature: "Findings suggest that SARS-CoV-2 reactive T-cells are likely to be present in many individuals because of prior exposure to flu and CMV viruses."

This probably explains why covid primarily affects the elderly and patients with comorbidities, and is either asymptomatic or has mild symptoms for the rest of us.

The authors state: "Healthy humans not exposed to covid-19 show pre-existing CD4 and CD8 T-cell immunity to SARS-CoV-2." This cross-immunity is possibly not too surprising as the common cold is caused by a coronavirus."

Even the BBC now seems to be changing their tune.

A recent BBC article that asks: "Is catching covid now better than more vaccine?"

The article points out that now we are no longer starting with low immunity: "As the overwhelming majority of people have either been vaccinated or have already caught the virus."

The BBC article says: "Each time you're exposed, the immune system gets a little bit stronger, and this continues until old age, when the immune system starts to fail and the infections become a problem again."

The article goes on to quote Professor Adam Finn (a government vaccine adviser): "It could be a lot cheaper and simpler to let that happen than spend the whole time immunizing people."

Prof Finn also points out that the argument in children had "already been won" as "40-50% have already been infected and most weren't ill or particularly ill."

(Update Sept. 15, 2021—What is the reason for increased SARS-CoV-2 infection rates in the vaccinated compared to unvaccinated?)

See reasons why the vaccines may not work.

In summary: There are a number of reasons as to why mRNA vaccination could potentially cause an increased risk of covid infection. Some of the main causes include.

1. The well reported drop in white cell count (neutrophils) immediately following vaccination.
2. Immune focus on a single antigen (spike protein) and associated variant selection.
3. Antibody dependent enhancement; anti-SARS-CoV-2 antibodies could actually exacerbate covid-19 through antibody-dependent enhancement (ADE). ADE is a reminder that not all antibody responses are helpful and some can be harmful.
4. According to the Journal of Immunology Original Antigenic Sin, or OAS.

5. The antibodies raised by mRNA treatment can mimic the virus itself. In an article published in The New England Journal of Medicine, the UC Davis Vice Chair of Research and Distinguished Professor of Dermatology and Internal Medicine William Murphy and Professor of Medicine at Harvard Medical School Dan Longo present a possible explanation to the diverse immune responses to the virus and the vaccines.

In a well documented immunological process known as 'Jerne's hypothesis'—The immune system initially launches protective antibody responses. However, these same protective antibodies can later trigger a new antibody response toward themselves, leading to their disappearance over time.

Long term harm

Dr Murphy specifically talking about the target ACE receptors that are found on numerous cell types throughout the body, explains: "A fascinating aspect of the newly formed anti-idiotypic antibodies is that some of their structures can be a mirror image of the original antigen and act like it in binding to the same receptors that the viral antigen binds. This binding can potentially lead to unwanted actions and pathology, particularly in the long term."

Anti-idiotypic antibodies

These secondary antibodies, called anti-idiotypic antibodies, can bind to and deplete the initial protective antibody responses. They have the potential to mirror or act like the original antigen itself. This may result in adverse effects.

(Update July 16, 2021—Are vaccinated more likely to drive variant evolution?)

The HART group are informing us that several media outlets in the UK have simultaneously released a story alleging that, "unvaccinated people are risking their own health and will become potential factories of coronavirus variants."

Commenting on these news items, Dr Gerry Quinn who is a post-doctoral Researcher in Microbiology and Immunology (and therefore appropriately qualified to comment), points out that the reverse is more likely to be true. He says: "There is the as yet unproven (but not discounted) theoretical possibility that vaccination may be making the situation of 'mutant variants' worse."

The reason for this is that natural immunity, which is now estimated to be at over 80% provides a far broader protection as it is not narrowed to a reaction to just the spike protein.

Providing the relevant references, Dr. Quinn highlights a recent study of people who developed natural immunity during the first wave of SARS-CoV-2 showing that their plasma contains four antibodies that are extremely potent against 23 variants of SARS including variants of concern. To add to this protection, it is even thought that the innate immune system which is the first line of defense against disease can be trained to have a decreased activation threshold to new pathogens that are structurally similar to those that have been encountered previously.

Dr. Quinn then explains how unfortunately many of the novel covid vaccines are designed to evade most of the innate immune system so they will not prime this process. The importance of the innate immune system can be seen in people who have deficiencies in the production of interferon, an important signaling compound in the innate immune system. People with this deficiency have higher rates of severe illness and death.

“Natural immunity is superior to vaccination-induced immunity because it includes the innate immune defenses as well as specific immunity which is directed at multiple parts of the virus and not just the spike protein targeted by vaccine-induced immunity.”

How can the vaccine cause herpes?

One of the post-vaccination reported side effects has been ‘herpes infection’. A recent paper from a group of Oxford researchers published in the journal Rheumatology explains how this could happen. Varicella zoster virus (VZV) is the virus responsible for shingles and is a type of herpes virus. These viruses are known to lurk in our nerve cells awaiting an opportunistic moment to reactivate. Sunburn is a well known cause of herpes virus reactivation, and is often associated with cold sores.

Cell-mediated immunity plays an important role in the prevention of VZV reactivation, and so any interferences (such as mRNA vaccines) with this process could trigger the reactivation of other viral infections. However, as the authors state: “While the causality between both events cannot be proved based on a small number of cases, further vigilance and safety monitoring of covid-19 vaccination side effects is warranted.”

Summary of vaccine safety data

In a summary of the vaccine safety update, Dr. Tess Lawrie recently wrote an open letter to Dr. June Raine, head of the MHRA, arguing that: “The MHRA now has more than enough evidence on the Yellow Card system to declare the covid-19 vaccines unsafe for use in humans”—a claim that has been “fact checked” here.)

Only via the provision and publication of these reviews can readers reach their own conclusions about what is best for them (informed consent), based on the available data.

According to the European Medicines Agency’s “EudraVigilance” report (which is a “system for managing and analyzing information on suspected adverse reactions to medicines which have been authorized or being studied in clinical trials in the European Economic Area or EEA), there are extremely high numbers of deaths and serious injuries caused by the four “vaccine” types.

Commenting on the reports, Technocracy News say that based on this evidence the use of these gene-based “vaccines” should be terminated immediately.

They state: “It is inconceivable that all of these gene therapy ‘vaccines’ are not summarily terminated by every nation on earth. The EU counterpart to the U.S. VAERS database reports deaths and injuries that are likely understated because not all cases are reported. Even still, the actually reported numbers are staggering.”

Reported numbers of serious adverse events are staggering

They point out that; “The EudraVigilance database reports that through June 19, 2021 there are 15,472 deaths and 1,509,266 injuries reported following injections of four experimental covid-19 shots: From the total of injuries recorded, half of them (753,657) are serious injuries.”

Senior international microbiologists urge caution

One of the most cited international microbiologists, Professor Bhakdi has issued a video explaining the good news—as reported in the latest scientific publications—that there are already very high levels of population immunity to coronaviruses. This is largely due to the broad cross-reactivity of our immune systems to different strains (with shared antigenic sites), and also thanks to natural immune memory. However, he also has major concerns about the dangers of vaccine-induced blood clotting and he explains why.

As with any medicine, vaccine or gene therapy, there is always a balance between the potential benefit and risk. It should never be forgotten that iatrogenic illness is one of the biggest causes of hospital admissions and fatalities.

(Update July 29, 2021—New guidance issued on post-covid vaccine blood clots)

The medical term for these new form of blood clots is VITT, which stands for vaccine-induced immune thrombocytopenia and thrombosis, or sometimes also called vaccine-induced prothrombotic immune thrombocytopenia (VIPIT) or thrombotic thrombocytopenic syndrome (TTS).

The National Institute of Clinical Excellence (NICE) say, “Because VITT is a new condition, there is limited evidence available to inform clinical management, identification and management of the condition is evolving quickly as the case definition becomes clearer. This guideline was produced to support clinicians to diagnose and manage this newly recognized syndrome.”

The new guidance recommends that people with suspected VITT are referred to the emergency department immediately.

Children—parental consent not needed

(Update August 4, 2021—Extension of covid vaccination to children.)

Following an announcement by the JCVI and as reported by the BBC, Pfizer jabs will be extended to healthy 16 to 17 year olds. They will not need parental consent. The Chairman of the JCVI (who is also a contractor for Pfizer), Dr Wei Shen Lim admits that the, “intention is for all the evidence to be published, but the evidence isn’t necessarily in the hands of JCVI...so wherever possible we encourage the evidence is published, but the timing is not in our hands.”

So, where is the evidence? How can decisions be made without the evidence?

(Update August 12, 2021—Reports of myocarditis secondary to mRNA vaccine.)

According to a paper published in JAMA—Cardiology—Association of Myocarditis With BNT162b2 Messenger RNA Covid-19 Vaccine in a Case Series of Children; Fifteen children who were hospitalized with myocarditis after receipt of the mRNA covid-19 vaccine for 1 to 5 days, boys were most often affected after the second vaccine dose, 3 patients had ventricular systolic dysfunction, and 12 patients had late gadolinium enhancement on cardiac magnetic resonance imaging. There was no mortality, and all but 1 patient had normal echocardiogram results on follow-up 1 to 13 days after discharge.

The paper goes on to summarize the “Meaning”—“covid-19 vaccine-associated myocarditis may have a benign short-term course in children; however, the long-term risks remain unknown.”

The paper concludes stating: “Myocarditis may be a rare complication after covid-19 vaccination in patients aged less than 19 years. In this case series study, the short-term clinical course was mild in most patients; however, the long-term risks remain unknown. Risks and benefits of covid-19 vaccination must be considered to guide recommendations for vaccination in this population.”

An article by Peter Caddle titled “Always Watching: New Car Models Sold in the EU Will Soon Record Driving Data” was posted at breitbart.com on Dec. 31, 2021. Following is the article.

New car models sold in the EU from mid-2022 will be required by law to record driving data that can be viewed in the event of an accident.

New car models, as well as any other road vehicle, sold in the EU from mid-2022 will be required to record technical data, such as the direction of the steering wheel and vehicle speed, so that it can be used in the event of a crash.

The new rule will coincide with the forced introduction of Intelligent Speed Assistance (ISA) systems for new vehicle models next year.

According to a report by Der Spiegel, a so-called “Event Data Recorder”—also referred to as a “black box,” similar to those already found in aircraft—will possibly enable police to understand if an accident was caused by driver error, depending on the incident.

However, an AFP report claims that, although law enforcement will indeed have access in the event of an accident, insurance companies will not be permitted access to any data recorded.

All data gathered by black boxes will also be anonymised, and—unlike a black box on an aircraft—conversations going on in the car will not be recorded by the device.

Meanwhile, newly mandatory ISA systems, which will warn drivers should they breach the speed limit, are expected to prevent up to 25,000 deaths and over 100,000 injuries every year due to accidents.

However, the EU has clarified on the Commission’s official website that any implemented system must not be able to actually prevent a driver from breaking the speed limit.

A large part of the European Union's work has been placing itself into the lives of Europeans by producing legislation and imposing its vision on industries. Sometimes, this has caused conflict.

The EU clashed with tech giant Apple after indicating that rules regarding electronic chargers may soon be changing in the bloc.

In an attempt to reduce e-waste, the EU has announced earlier in the year that it will implement a universal charger for smartphones.

While the majority of new devices already use the EU's favoured USB-C connector, Apple has opted to design its devices to use its own proprietary Lightning connector, first introduced in 2012.

"We remain concerned that strict regulation mandating just one type of connector stifles innovation rather than encouraging it, which in turn will harm consumers in Europe and around the world," Apple said in a statement regarding the proposal.

The EU has also announced plans to end the sale of petrol cars by 2035, despite complaints from the European Automobile Manufacturer's Association, who said that "banning a single technology is not a rational way forward at this stage."

An article by Ben Shapiro titled “The Democrats’ Exploitation of January 6 Gives Away Their Game” was posted at creators.com on Jan. 5, 2022. Following is the article.

This year, Jan. 6 will be commemorated with all the ballyhoo and rigamarole Democrats and their media allies can muster. CNN plans an entire special around the anniversary, titled “Live from the Capitol: January 6th, One Year Later”; the show will feature the “heroes who protected our democracy in the face of an insurrection,” and will include interviews with such luminaries as House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., and January 6 Committee Chair Bennie Thompson, D-Miss. President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris are also expected to commemorate Jan. 6 with special remarks, and Pelosi has organized a bevy of events in memory of the riot.

Now, you might ask yourself just why Jan. 6 merits such outsized attention. One need not downplay the events—the horrifying image of rioters bashing police officers with metal poles, storming through the halls of Congress shouting for Mike Pence—in order to recognize Jan. 6 for what it was: an ugly but not pivotal moment in American history. The event resulted in one direct death—rioter Ashli Babbitt was shot by a Capitol police officer—and some $1.5 million in property damage to the Capitol building; the Capitol was cleared within hours of the riot, and Vice President Mike Pence and Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell promptly presided over the certification of the 2020 election. Those who broke into the Capitol or even trespassed have ended up in jail.

Meanwhile, by contrast, the Black Lives Matter riots of 2020 resulted in some $2 billion in insured property damage (and likely billions more in uninsured property damage), two dozen people died, and the resultant political movement against the police led to an unprecedented nationwide spike in homicides in major cities. To date, there have been no commemorations from CNN, speeches from Biden or Harris, or a day honoring the police officers who held rioters in check.

So, what lies behind the Democratic-media obsession with Jan. 6? Political opportunism. Democrats aren't even hiding the ball. Facing the ever-likelier prospect of a 2022 midterm wipeout, Democrats have hit on a strategy: they have to rig the electoral rules and overthrow traditional democratic institutions in order to stop Republicans from rigging the electoral rules and overthrowing traditional democratic institutions. Jan. 6, to opportunistic Democrats, is the all-purpose excuse to use the entire weight of their party to push for a radical revision of Senate rules and federal elections. As Politico reported this week, "Democrats are hoping that Thursday will be more than just a day of remembrance. In the Senate, we hear from well-positioned sources, there's a desire to take the opportunity to supercharge the party's long-stalled voting rights legislation—possibly even using the anniversary to try to get Sens. Krysten Sinema, D-Ariz., and Joe Manchin, D-W.Va, to go nuclear on the filibuster or embrace rules changes."

Yes, the electoral village must be burned in order to stop future events similar to Jan. 6. As The New York Times editorialized, "Every Day Is January 6 Now," arguing, "the Capitol riot continues in statehouses across the country, in a bloodless, legalized form that no police officer can arrest and that no prosecutor can try in court." The only plausible response is to federalize election procedures constitutionally given to the states, to mandate the corrupt practice of ballot harvesting, to mandate long periods of early voting and universal absentee ballots, to loosen voter verification, and much more.

All because of Jan. 6.

Or, perhaps, because Democrats can read the writing on the wall. They know that November 2022 cometh, and that right soon. And they hope that if they invoke the specter of Jan. 6 repeatedly, Americans will shrug and allow them to usurp authority, violate rules, and rewrite voting procedure. It won't work. But it should reveal to Americans just who Democrats are, and how little they actually care about Jan. 6 in the first place.

An article by Victor Davis Hanson titled "Who Are the Real Insurrectionists?" was posted at townhall.com on Jan. 6, 2022. Following is the article.

Recently, Democrats have been despondent over President Joe Biden's sinking poll numbers. His policies on the economy, energy, foreign policy, the border, and covid-19 all have lost majority support.

As a result, the Left now variously alleges that either in 2022, when they expect to lose the Congress, or in 2024, when they fear losing the presidency, Republicans will “destroy democracy” or stage a coup.

A cynic might suggest that they praise democracy when they get elected, only to claim it is broken when they lose. Or they hope to avoid their defeat by trying to terrify the electorate. Or they mask their own revolutionary propensities by projecting them onto their opponents.

- After all, who is trying to federalize election laws in national elections contrary to the spirit of the Constitution?

- Who wishes to repeal or circumvent the Electoral College?

- Who wishes to destroy the more than 180-year-old Senate filibuster, the over 150-year-old nine-justice Supreme Court, and the more than 60-year-old, 50-state union?

- Who is attacking the founding constitutional idea of two senators per state?

The Constitution also clearly states that “When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside.” Who slammed through the impeachment of former president Donald Trump without a presiding chief justice?

Never had a president been either impeached twice or tried in the Senate as a private citizen. Who did both?

The Left further broke prior precedent by impeaching Trump without a special counsel’s report, formal hearings, witnesses, and cross-examinations.

Who exactly is violating federal civil rights legislation?

New York City’s Department of Health and Mental Hygiene in December decided to ration potentially lifesaving new covid-19 medicines, partially on the basis of race, in the name of “equity.”

The agency also allegedly used racial preferences to determine who would be first tested for covid-19. Yet such racial discrimination seems in direct violation of various title clauses of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

That law makes it clear that no public agency can use race to deny “equal utilization of any public facility which is owned, operated, or managed by or on behalf of any State or subdivision thereof.” Who is behind the new racial discrimination?

In summer 2020, many local and state-mandated quarantines and bans on public assemblies were simply ignored with impunity—if demonstrators were associated with Black Lives Matter or protesting the police.

Currently, the Biden Administration is also flagrantly embracing the neo-Confederate idea of nullifying federal law.

The Biden Administration has allowed nearly 2 million foreign nationals to enter the United States illegally across the southern border—in hopes they will soon be loyal constituents.

The administration has not asked illegal entrants either to be tested for or vaccinated against covid-19. Yet all U.S. citizens in the military and employed by the federal government are threatened with dismissal if they fail to become vaccinated.

Such selective exemption of lawbreaking non-U.S. citizens, but not millions of U.S. citizens, seems in conflict with the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

After entering the United States illegally, millions of immigrants are protected by some 550 “sanctuary city” jurisdictions. These revolutionary areas all brazenly nullify immigration law by refusing to allow federal immigration authorities to deport illegal immigrant lawbreakers.

At various times in our nation’s history—1832, 1861-65, and 1961-63—America was either racked by internal violence or fought a civil war over similar state nullification of federal laws.

In the last five years, we have indeed seen many internal threats to democracy.

Hillary Clinton hired a foreign national to concoct a dossier of dirt against her presidential opponent. She disguised her own role by projecting her efforts to use Russian sources onto Trump. She used her contacts in government and media to seed the dossier to create a national hysteria about “Russian collusion.” Clinton urged Biden not to accept the 2020 result if he lost, and herself claimed Trump was not a legitimately elected president.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has violated laws governing the chain of command. Some retired officers violated Article 88 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice by slandering their commander-in-chief. Others publicly were on record calling for the military to intervene to remove an elected president.

Some of the nation’s top officials in the FBI and intelligence committee have misled or lied under oath either to federal investigators or the U.S. Congress, again, mostly with impunity.

All these sustained revolutionary activities were justified as necessary to achieve the supposedly noble ends of removing Trump.

The result is Third World-like jurisprudence in America aimed at rewarding friends and punishing enemies, masked by service to social justice.

We are in a dangerous revolutionary cycle. But the threat is not so much from loud, buffoonish one-day rioters on January 6. Such clownish characters did not for 120 days loot, burn, attack courthouses and police precincts, cause over 30 deaths, injure 2,000 policemen, and destroy at least $2 billion in property—all under the banner of revolutionary justice.

Even more ominously, stone-cold sober elites are systematically waging an insidious revolution in the shadows that seeks to dismantle America’s institutions and the rule of law as we have known them.

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the LORD while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the LORD, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word be that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
