Luke 21:34-36—"But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man" (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Oliver North and David Goetsche titled “Biden’s ‘New World Order’ ” was posted at creators.com on April 5, 2022. Following is the article.

On March 21, shortly before leaving for his NATO summit in Europe, President Joe Biden told the Business Roundtable about “a new world order out there, and we’ve got to lead it.” Unlike so many of Biden’s other jaw-dropping comments made before, during and after the summit, nobody raced to “clean up” or “correct” this one. White House, State Department and Pentagon officials and staffers tried to set the record straight about sending the 82nd Airborne into Ukraine, regime change in Russia and an “in-kind” response if Russia used chemical weapons against Ukraine, and other Biden gaffes.

Yet no Washington or media elites tried to “walk back” Biden’s “new world order” comment. Why? Because far-left globalists have been pressing for a new world order since 1940, when prolific British writer H.G. Wells published his nonfiction work, “The New World Order.”

In it, Wells, author of “The War of The Worlds,” advocated a “collectivist,” scientifically planned, global government to protect “human rights.” Today, the phrase “new world order” is code for a planet with no national boundaries, where the Green New Deal is global policy and a utopian, socialist, one-world government controls all.

The world may indeed be moving toward a new world order, but it's not the one Biden and his fellow leftists envision. Because of our president's ineptitude, weakness and feckless leadership, his new world order is one in which the United States is the big loser and our adversaries become the big winners.

By allowing himself to be controlled, manipulated and scripted by the far left, Biden's new world order is one where the U.S. suffers spiraling inflation, undependable, unaffordable energy, second-class status on the world stage, out-of-control crime, increasing racial discord, food shortages, supply chain tie-ups and millions of immigrants illegally flooding our country.

In Biden's new world order, our federal government will dictate whether Americans must foreswear fossil fuels while our "elites" fly around in private jets—without wearing masks. The Bidenistas apparently believe we will allow the left to pack the Supreme Court, federalize voting laws, eliminate the electoral college and—lest we forget—replace traditional energy sources with wind, solar and battery power. Do they really believe the eco-loons can control how hard the wind blows and how long the sun shines?

In the Biden new world order, the Peoples' Republic of China will remain ascendent in economic and military power. Through its global Belt and Road Initiative, the PRC will soon attain control over the world's most precious mineral resources and seize control over Taiwan's invaluable scientific microchip production.

Despite the genocide being perpetrated by Russia in Ukraine, Moscow still intends to use its fossil fuel to control Europe, facilitating a nuclear-armed Iran in threatening Israel, our Euro-allies and our homeland while preventing Ukraine from winning against Vladimir Putin. Biden's pusillanimous vision of a new world order should not be America's future. We can still turn our country around before it goes over the cliff behind our bumbling, cognitively impaired, ethically miasmatic and timorous president. Preventing the Biden administration's dreams of a new world order from coming to fruition is still possible, but it will require a "regime change" in Washington.

Conservative patriots must retake the House of Representatives and Senate in November 2022 and the White House in 2024. But gaining power and exercising it decisively in America's best interests are two different propositions. Control of the House, Senate and White House must be exercised by strong-willed, determined patriots with the courage of Ukraine's freedom fighters—men and women who will stand up to biased media frauds who are lapdogs of the left, Big Tech ideologues and embedded bureaucrats. Can we do it? Stay tuned.

An article by Brownstone Research titled "It's Happening: Global Elites Plotting to Destroy Americans' Personal Wealth" was posted at breitbart.com on April 6, 2022. Following is the article.

As the world's economy emerges from the crisis caused by the pandemic, global elites have pushed for a "Great Reset." Brownstone Research founder Jeff Brown spoke with Breitbart News Editor-in-Chief Alex Marlow about the implications of this globalist vision for ordinary investors and how Brownstone Research's personalized "Great Reset Protection Plan" provides all the tools investors need to protect themselves against these destructive market forces.

Though the pandemic has pushed talk of the Great Reset into broader political discourse, Brown explained that the idea is much older. The phrase originated with Klaus Schwab, the founder and chairman of the World Economic Forum (WEF), in 2014. But, as Brown noted, "Philosophically, this has been going on for thousands of years."

"The powerful and the elites of the world have always tried to impose their will and signal their virtue to society obviously at their own benefit, not the benefit for the general population," Brown said.

However, he noted that the pandemic has only accelerated this globalist push, as governments and corporations have exercised unprecedented power over individuals.

Brown framed the Great Reset as part of the trend of "woke capitalism," which he described as "the corporate version of virtue signaling."

He explained that we can see the Great Reset in action in the corporate world's embrace of ESG investing, which stands for "Environmental, Social, and Governance."

"ESG is one the largest themes in the corporate world right now, as companies try to rebrand themselves," he said. "And it's all about money and perception in the sense that even large institutional funds on Wall Street are trying to reposition themselves as being good, raising trillions of dollars of funds only to be invested in ESG approved companies. And, of course, companies are excited to rebrand themselves so that they have access to that kind of capital and those types of investors."

"From my perspective, a very perverse loop is happening right now that is actually feeding into what those behind the Great Reset are trying to accomplish," Brown added.

"What is their goal? What is the objective for some of these global elites?" Marlow asked.

"Obviously it's almost always about money and power," Brown said. "By imposing controls, they can impose and control the flow of capital into places they see fit, not where we, as taxpayers or citizens, feel is appropriate. If you control the flows of money, obviously you can benefit. They have the added benefit in their eyes of being perceived to be doing good for the world and the perception that they know better about what's good for us and that they're steering things in the right direction."

"But this will absolutely exacerbate the types of inequalities and problems that we see around the world today, rather than solving them," Brown cautioned. "And the Great Reset, of course, always leaves out one key point: How is the world going to pay for all of these grand visions?"

"Do you know the answer?" Marlow asked.

"They're going to print a lot more money," Brown answered. "And what that means is the value of our dollars or our euros or our yen will be quickly devalued and depreciated over shorter periods of time."

"I know that if folks go over to JeffBrownReset.com, you give them a comprehensive plan on how to deal with this in their personal life," Marlow said. "What can we be doing to guard against this on an individual basis?"

"My overarching goal is to help normal investors protect against these types of things," Brown explained. "We try to stack the deck in favor of normal people and give them the same advantages, if not more, than the insiders on Wall Street. And any time we're living in these types of highly inflationary, very radical progressive monetary policy periods, things like fixed assets are important."

"If we outpace inflation, then our real return on investments will be greater than a government's ability to devalue the currency," he added. "So, what I really try to convey to my subscribers are investing in ways that can do exactly that—that can grow their assets at rates that are much faster than inflation."

An article by Kurt Schlichter titled "Destroy Disney" was posted at townhall.com on April 7, 2022. Following is the article.

Nothing personal, but the Mouse must die. Oh wait, it is personal, especially for people with little kids who this giant corporation has targeted at the behest of the minority of blue-haired, nose-ringed strange-os in its employ. That Walt Disney is likely turning over in his cryogenic chamber beneath the Disneyland Castle is irrelevant. The man who created an American institution is gone, as is said American institution. It's now a global institution, and the America part is vastly outweighed by the Chi Com component. We used to trust Disney to take care of our kids, not take them over. Well, it made its choice, and it's time to make ours.

The Republicans must figuratively post Mickey's soon-to-be public domain head on a pike. This is what happens to corporations that cross us.

And cross us Disney did. It did not have to stick Donald's beak into Florida's fight to keep grooming perverts from messing with first graders' heads. But stick it did, mewling and howling about the unfairness of Ron DeSantis taking the bulls-eye off our little ones. It promised to use its power to change the law, not just by advocacy but with contributions and veiled threats to pack up and go.

To which Ron the Avenger replied, "Pack your Schiff."

DeSantis understands the use of power. He's got it. Disney thought it did. But what Disney really has is a vast array of special breaks that helped make it the hulking monopolistic monstrosity that it is today. Look at Disney World in Orlando, a zillion-dollar resort city made possible by a huge spate of special laws that effectively make it a government unto itself. And look at the copyright laws—

Mickey should have fallen out of protection decades ago, but the expiration of the 1920s cartoon rodent IP just kept being pushed back by Congress. It is now going to be open season on Mickey in 2024 unless another extension gets granted.

It better not be.

Once, it was understandable, if a bit cronyish, that Disney got what it wanted from various governmental entities. Disney was, well, Disney. Disney World was a place Republican senators loved to take their grandkids to as much as anyone else. And if expanding copyright periods let them keep Mickey in the cage, sure. Disney was beloved. It was trusted. We all grew up on it.

And then Disney treated decades of trust like Pluto the dog treats a fire hydrant.

Disney used its power not for good but for evil. And, more specifically, to screw with us normal people who don't think sex pests should get free access to school kids. And then threaten us with its power.

No.

Not even.

DeSantis should strip Disney of its special bequests in Florida. It's not like Disney can move its city elsewhere. Congress should laugh Disney's lobbyists out of the Capitol when they come begging for a new copyright dispensation. And we should not be shy about letting Disney know why.

You screwed with us. Now you have to pay.

For too long, conservatives did the bidding of the big corporations. But until recently, the big corporations generally used their political power only to carve out special breaks and deals. That was kind of obnoxious, but we were not the target. Corporations rarely dared turn their power on us on social issues. That was the deal.

Then they broke the deal. They decided to take a side against us. Disney was not alone. Now even Oreo is trying to sell us cookies with creamy woke filling. Unacceptable. Now they must pay.

Some conservatives cry out about the unfairness of the government acting against a company for using its power to affect politics and the culture. But our power is through the government and the politicians we elect. We are not morally obligated to be powerless in order to satisfy ideological stickler's arbitrary dictates. Why does Disney get to use its power, but we cannot? How is that right or fair?

Now, the arrangement before was that we would not use our political power against companies, but also that companies like Disney would not use their power against us. Disney changed the rules. Why are we somehow obligated to pretend that never happened and that the old rules are still in effect?

Well, we aren't. While David French might not like it, we are never going to accept being told, "We are going to use our political and cultural power to promote the sexualization of children, but you are morally foreclosed by using the one tool you have to stop it."

Of course, we certainly encourage Disney to whine about how we are being mean by responding to its attack on our kids, but only so we can laugh at it.

Disney picked this fight, and luckily we had Ron DeSantis instead of a Kristi Noem or an Asa Hutchinson there to defend what is right against the Chamber of Commerce contingent that never met a big corporation it didn't slobber over. The GOP needs to understand that big corporations have thrown in their lot with the enemy and that the old rules that once held us back are canceled, repealed, and kaput.

It is time to use our political power to deny those who side against us the breaks and benefits that used to be available when the corporations were culturally neutral. Let them beg the Democrats—hell, they give Dems all their money nowadays, so they might as well get something for it. And to those reticent about flexing our muscles, here's the thing—the corporations taking aim at our kids are getting off lucky. Ron DeSantis could be passing the "Informed Resort Customer Information Act" requiring that any company cavorting with the Chi Coms disclose in every theater and resort with big signs "XXXXX Company does business with the genocidal communist Chinese regime."

Come to think of it, he should do that too. And other corporations, take note. Next November, the party of people you have been screwing with will have majorities in both houses.

Hey, aren't those old rules looking good right about now?

An article by Marco Rubio titled "Biden Administration Prioritizes Climate Fantasies While Famine Threatens the World" was posted at thefederalist.com on April 8, 2022. ("Joe Biden would seemingly rather virtue signal about climate change than act on the near-term implications of a potential global famine.") Following is the article.

President Joe Biden says he is "working out" how to mitigate global food shortages. But action speaks louder than words—and so does inaction.

Global food supply chain chaos has increased due to Vladimir Putin's invasion of Ukraine. Countries across the globe are scrambling to increase food production. However, America is not one of them, because President Joe Biden would seemingly rather virtue signal about climate change than act on the near-term implications of a global famine.

Ukraine is the breadbasket of Europe, with soil similar to that of the American Midwest. It is one of the largest exporters of wheat and corn in the world. Those exports were a lifeline for millions of people, including many who live in "global crisis zones" and have no reliable agriculture of their own—until now.

The World Food Program warned Ukraine's supply chain is "falling apart." Those problems will worsen if Ukrainians cannot plant crops this spring.

On top of this, Putin threatened to restrict food sales from Russia—also one of the world’s largest exporters—to only “friendly” countries. Understanding the impending crisis, the European Commission has opened up conserved agricultural land for cultivation and distributed $550 million to European farmers to increase production.

Last week, I asked the Biden administration to take similar steps by opening “approximately four million acres of high quality farmland” for production that are currently held under the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP).

President Biden refused. As an explanation, his Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack told the National Grain and Feed Association that re-opening the farm land would have “a significant and detrimental impact on producers’ efforts to mitigate climate change.”

This is not the first time President Biden placed his environmentalist image above common sense and human life. U.S. Climate Envoy John Kerry’s obsession with cutting a Green New Deal with Communist China caused him to overlook slave labor in Xinjiang. Moreover, President Biden refuses to expand domestic energy production because, in the words of Speaker Nancy Pelosi, additional domestic production would be “upending our initiatives to save the planet from the climate crisis.”

At every turn, the Biden administration embraces climate fanaticism as a means to enrich its favorite corporate donors and appeal to a small fringe of the Democratic Party’s base, while empowering monsters like Xi Jinping, Ayatollah Khamenei, and Nicolas Maduro—who have little regard for human life, labor standards, or the environment. Administration insiders may think their “out of sight, out of mind” approach is politically savvy, but their self-delusion has real-world consequences.

Opening up four million acres of CRP lands to cultivation will not destroy the climate, but it may save lives. Now is not the time to “monitor the crisis” in Ukraine—now is the time to harness America’s vast resources to fend off a global famine. Biden needs to rethink his priorities, and fast. There is no time to lose.

An article by Jack Hellner titled “I Agree With Scientists and Journalists That Damaging Cold Weather Is Caused by Climate Change” was posted at americanthinker.com on April 8, 2022. Following is the article.

Scientific data shows that the climate has consistently and naturally changed for billions of years, so yes, when we have late damaging frosts, they are caused by natural climate change. I hope a lot of money and time wasn’t wasted in coming to this logical conclusion.

■ Late frost ices over French vineyards, threatens fruit crops: “French vintners are lighting candles to thaw their grapevines to save them from a late frost following a mild winter. The frost is particularly frustrating after a similar phenomenon hit French vineyards last year, leading to some 2 billion euros ($2.4 billion) in losses. Scientists later found that the damaging 2021 frost was made more likely by climate change.”

What didn't cause late frosts is warming, supposedly caused by fossil fuel usage, rising CO₂, humans, methane, cars and so many other things that the media, scientists, and others say we must stop using. It is a simple concept that fossil fuels and humans can't cause both warming and cooling.

Throughout history, we have had warming periods and cooling periods. We have had floods and droughts. Storm activity has also fluctuated throughout billions of years.

It is easy to determine the root cause of all the illegal and criminal activity at the border. The root cause is clearly the leftist open border policies.

It is much harder to determine the root causes of climate change since the climate has fluctuated with both up and down temperatures the last 150 years while all the variables that supposedly cause warming have all been rising. It appears that the passage of time is the best explanation for climate change.

Why do journalists and others continually lie to the public that the current droughts and floods are worse than ever when that is demonstrably false. It is clearly to indoctrinate people into submitting to government policies which will destroy our quality of life and the economy as a whole.

■ California drought: Past dry periods have lasted more than 200 years, scientists say: “The two most severe megadroughts make the Dust Bowl of the 1930s look tame: a 240-year-long drought that started in 850 and, 50 years after the conclusion of that one, another that stretched at least 180 years.”

Three of the deadliest floods were in the Netherlands in 1212, 1287, and 1530. I believe that is before oil, coal, methane, and other variables could have caused them.

If fossil fuels cause warming, they can't also cause cooling. Maybe five-to-eight-year-olds should be taught that instead of having to listen to anyone, other than their parents, talk about sexual orientation. Maybe they should be taught math, science, English and reading instead of being indoctrinated with so many destructive things. Children and others certainly should not be indoctrinated that the science is settled that humans and fossil fuels are destroying the planet. There is zero scientific data from the last 150 years that directly links temperatures to fossil fuels or the population.

Fossil fuels and humans didn't cause the damaging late frosts in France any more than they caused the record cold in Antarctica in 2021, or the record snows in Sierra Nevada in December of 2021.

The two coldest winters on record in Antarctica are 2004, and 2021, while the UN and others continually tell the public that record warmth is destroying the planet.

■ Antarctica's last 6 months were the coldest on record: “For the polar darkness period, from April through September, the average temperature was

-60.9 degrees Celsius (-77.6 degrees Fahrenheit), a record for those months,' the National Snow and Ice Data Center (NSIDC) said. For the entire Antarctic continent, the winter of 2021 was the second-coldest on record, with the 'temperature for June, July, and August 3.4 degrees Celsius (6.1 degrees Fahrenheit) lower than the 1981 to 2010 average at -62.9 degrees Celsius (-81.2 degrees Fahrenheit),' according to a new report from the NSIDC. 'This is the second-coldest winter (June-July-August months) on record, behind only 2004 in the 60-year weather record at Amundsen-Scott South Pole Station,' the NSIDC said."

■ California's Sierra Nevada Sets All-Time December Snow Record: "Despite claims of drought, they have smashed the previous record of 179 of snow in December set in 1970! This is the announcement from the Sierra Snow Lab on January 1st: 'One last inch fell over the last 24 hours (prior to 4pm yesterday). The record for our snowiest December on record at the lab is now 214' (544 cm)."

Isn't it time that the media did their jobs: asked questions, and did research instead of spending so much time indoctrinating the public with destructive leftist policies which are clearly destroying America?

The indoctrination is endless whether on climate change, systemic racism, Russian collusion, crime, the border or pretending that Joe Biden isn't involved in massive corruption.

■ The reason people who tell the truth that the climate has always changed cyclically and naturally are called climate change deniers, anti-science, and stupid is to silence them and destroy them in the minds of the public.

■ Climate change fearmongers like the UN, journalists, scientists, Hollywood, politicians, and bureaucrats can't allow debate because they would get their clock cleaned with one question: Where is the scientific data that shows a direct link between the human population, fossil fuels and temperatures? There is none. If there is no correlation, there can be no causation.

The founding fathers gave the media great power in the First Amendment to hold the powerful to account, not to protect them and campaign for them and certainly not to intentionally mislead the public to promote policies they support.

An article by Larry Elder titled "Media Collusion of Hunter Biden/Joe Biden Bombshell Story" was posted at townhall.com on April 7, 2022. Following is the article.

About three weeks before the 2020 election, the New York Post published a bombshell, election-changing story about presidential candidate Joe Biden's son, Hunter, that, if true, derailed Joe Biden's claim to know nothing about his son's multimillion-dollar influence peddling.

The Post claimed: "Hunter Biden introduced his father, then-Vice President Joe Biden, to a top executive at a Ukrainian energy firm less than a year before the elder Biden pressured government officials in Ukraine into firing a prosecutor who was investigating the company, according to emails obtained by The Post.

"The never-before-revealed meeting is mentioned in a message of appreciation that Vadym Pozharskyi, an adviser to the board of Burisma, allegedly sent Hunter Biden on April 17, 2015, about a year after Hunter joined the Burisma board at a reported salary of up to $50,000 a month . . .

"The blockbuster correspondence—which flies in the face of Joe Biden's claim that he's 'never spoken to my son about his overseas business dealings'—is contained in a massive trove of data recovered from a laptop computer.

"The computer was dropped off at a repair shop in Biden's home state of Delaware in April 2019, according to the store's owner."

The pro-Democrat/anti-Republican/anti-Trump media promptly sprang into attack mode.

From the New York Times to The Washington Post to CNN to The Hill to Politico, among others, the media dismissed the story as "Russian disinformation." The Hill wrote: "More than 50 former intelligence officials said emails alleged to have been found on a laptop belonging to Hunter Biden show signs of a Russian disinformation operation."

The statement of the 50-plus intelligence officials read: "We want to emphasize that we do not know if the emails, provided to the New York Post by President Trump's personal attorney Rudy Giuliani, are genuine or not and that we do not have evidence of Russian involvement—just that our experience makes us deeply suspicious that the Russian government played a significant role in this case."

CNN's Brian Stelter said on his TV show: "Let's get back to the new season's storyline. Let's break down how this all happened. Because it was launched, as I showed you, by the New York Post, and then promoted by another Murdoch media property, which of course is Fox News. You worry about Trump's corruption and Fox says, 'What about Biden?' Every hour of the day. So Fox is a producer of this serialized drama, but there are big questions about who might have created this show. And that's what's probably most important here."

Twitter, when the story broke, took down two of the Post's stories about Hunter and the laptop and blocked users from posting pictures of the emails or links to New York Post stories, preventing the Post from distributing it on that platform, dramatically reducing the number of people who would and could learn about the bombshell allegation. Facebook suspended distribution of the story over "signals" that the story is false and said that its "fact-checkers" were examining it.

Now, some 17 months later, The New York Times, among other media outlets, admits the Hunter Biden/New York Post story is true. And the emails suggest that not only did Joe Biden know about his son's influence peddling, but that Joe Biden might have financially benefited. For example, in one email Hunter talks about "10 percent for the big guy." The "big guy" likely refers to father Joe.

This is a small consolation to former President Donald Trump and the 16% of Joe Biden voters who, according to a Media Research Center poll, claim that had they known about the Hunter Biden story, they would not have voted for Joe Biden.

Worse, after the authentication of the Hunter Biden laptop story, one of the 50 former intelligence officials who wrote the "Russian disinformation" letter now says, in essence, "So what? Trump lost." John Sipher, who retired after a 28-year career with the CIA, in response to a commenter tweeted: "I lost the election for Trump? Well, then I (feel) pretty good about my influence."

Stunning.

Looking back to May 2021, an article by Allum Bokhari titled "'Recipe for Mischief': FCC Commissioner [Nathan Simington], President Trump's Big Tech Expert Slam JCPA [Journalism Competition and Preservation Act]" was posted at breitbart.com on May 17, 2021. Following is the article.

The law professor who led President Trump's efforts to tame the tech giants, and current Republican FCC commissioner Nathan Simington, have warned lawmakers that the Journalism Competition and Preservation Act (JCPA), in its current form, is a gift to Big Media and could undermine independent journalism.

The JCPA allows media companies an antitrust exemption to form cartels, for the sole purpose of negotiating with the tech companies that can make or break a media company's fortunes. This author has criticized the bill in detail here.

Adam Candeub, a tenured law professor who led President Trump's efforts to change the rules around Section 230 of the Communications Decency Act, and FCC commissioner Nathan Simington are both considered experts on the topic of communications and media law.

In comments to Breitbart News, both men expressed alarm that the bill has been presented to members of congress as a means to protect independent journalism, arguing that it will instead benefit multi-billion dollar organizations like CNN and the New York Times, to the detriment of independent competitors.

In conversations with Breitbart News Candeub and Simington made a series of dire warnings about the bill.

- The bill risks creating an "elite cartel" of a few big media companies who negotiate favorable terms with Silicon Valley tech giants while excluding smaller competitors.
- The bill includes a loophole permitting media companies to exclude competitors that are not "similarly situated" to them from the benefits of deals with the tech giants.
- Commissioner Simington warned that vaguely defined terminology in the bill risks the creation of uniform editorial standards across the news industry that small news operations are unable to meet.

■ Far from protecting local and independent journalism, the bill could accelerate the consolidation of media into a few big companies that collude with tech giants to suppress smaller competitors.

Prof. Candeub said: “The bill addresses a real policy concern: the underproduction of local news and elimination of diverse press voices given Big Tech’s ability to extract the advertiser revenue that newspapers once enjoyed. Unfortunately, the bill as it stands risks creating another, worse problem: an elite cartel of a few media companies colluding with Big Tech to silence everyone else. The failure of the the law to make negotiated licensing terms available to all news content creators as well as the lack of transparency for licensing terms is a recipe for mischief.”

Commissioner Simington echoed Candeub’s point that while the protection of a free and diverse press is important, the bill could actually harm that goal, by strengthening large, well-funded media organizations to the detriment of smaller competitors. Simington warned that the bill’s beneficiaries are likely to be the “biggest, best-funded national journalism content creators,” with independent voices locked out.

He said: “Local journalism is a fundamental democratic institution, and I have been engaged with promoting local journalism since the beginning of my term on the Commission. The public consistently reports higher trust in local journalism than any other form of news. I have been speaking with local broadcast journalists and was astonished by their sense of mission, community involvement, and tenacious service in the face of natural disasters. However, one difficult headwind facing local journalists is the consolidation of national journalism. If the practical effect of the Journalism Competition and Preservation Act is to strengthen national journalism, I am concerned that it will undermine local journalism—both in its independence of voice and its community engagement. I worry that negotiations permitted under this bill would be dominated by the interests of the biggest, best-funded national journalism content creators. Without a mechanism to prevent this, the bill will effectively give such creators the ability to negotiate on behalf of an industry that they do not truly represent. I would love more clarity on what counts as ‘similarly situated,’ what constitutes a ‘digital news organization,’ and ‘terms that would be available.’ For example, if a local newspaper has inferior economies of scale to a national one, commercial terms with bulk rates per click are worse for the local newspaper, while commercial terms with a lump sum per piece of content are worse for the national newspaper. If these terms are available to both, but negotiated by the national newspaper, they will actively harm the local one. Are these two newspapers ‘similarly situated?’ This might become a question for the courts. Another possibility is that such terms may also include standards for sourcing, perhaps in the name of combatting misinformation, that reduce local editorial independence or that cannot be met at all by smaller operations. Without greater clarity, it is easy to imagine a parade of horrors. Regardless of one’s position on the workability of the JCPA and the challenges it presents for univocal negotiation in the print journalism sector, I would note that broadcast journalism can be just as strongly benefited by far less extraordinary regulatory relief.”

In addition to the warnings of Simington and Candeub, the bill also specifically carves out an antitrust exemption for negotiations that relate to “quality, accuracy, attribution or branding, and interoperability of news.” This further supports Simington’s point that media companies might aim at the creation of a uniform notion of “quality” across the news industry that locks out small competitors.

That media companies will also be able to negotiate on the basis of “branding” also creates the opportunity for media companies to argue, as the New York Times has done, that they are less of a brand risk to digital advertisers than their competitors in the independent media, adding another justification to exclude competitors from the benefits of deals with Silicon Valley.

An article by Allum Bokhari titled “Big Media Lobbyists Try to Save JCPA [Journalism Competition and Preservation Act] With Sham Amendment” was posted at breitbart.com on April 7, 2022. Following is the article.

Big media companies are making another attempt to pass the Journalism Competition and Preservation Act (JCPA), a bill that would protect them from online competition, propping up legacy media in the face of widespread public distrust and a failing business model.

According to an exclusive story published by News Corp’s Wall Street Journal (News Corp has been a major backer of this legislation, and similar efforts around the world), the new version of the JCPA would give an even bigger advantage to legacy media companies, giving them an antitrust exemption for ten years instead of the four years of the original bill.

Publishers would be given the legal authority to form a cartel, usually illegal under antitrust law, to collectively bargain with Silicon Valley tech giants for financial handouts and special treatment, such as prioritization in search results, news feeds, and other core features.

The amended bill would also force Big Tech to come to terms with Big Media, by imposing an arbitration process on them. If Big Tech companies cannot voluntarily make a deal to favor discredited Big Media companies, an arbitrator will force one upon them.

The likely losers of the bill are the new generation of independent journalists and content creators on Substack, YouTube, Twitch, and other platforms, creators that younger demographics increasingly turn to as trust in the legacy media fades. As they are not traditional media companies, this new generation of media creators would likely be excluded from the benefits of the bill.

The previous version of the bill excluded any media creator that is not “similarly situated” to other members of the cartel, which certainly would have excluded the legacy media’s new online competitors.

There is no indication in the Wall Street Journal’s report that this has changed.

Multiple Republican legislators including GOP leader Rep. Kevin McCarthy (R-CA), Sen. Marco Rubio (R-FL), Sen. Marsha Blackburn (R-TN) and Sen. Tom Cotton (R-AR) have all denounced the JCPA, warning that it is a handout to discredited media companies that also deepens their collusion with Big Tech.

Experts including FCC Commissioner Nathan Simington, President Trump's Big Tech expert Prof. Adam Candeub, and former federal antitrust enforcer Dr. Daniel Francis have all warned that the legislation is misguided.

The Wall Street Journal points to a new amendment, which restricts the bill's protections to media companies with fewer than 1,500 employees, as evidence that the amended bill is not simply a bailout for the world's largest and richest media companies.

This is incorrect. Many wealthy and influential national media brands, including MSNBC and the Washington Post, already have fewer than 1,500 employees.

Moreover, it would be trivial for companies with more than 1,500 employees, including the Wall Street Journal, to use corporate restructuring to split divisions into separate companies, allowing them to benefit from the bill's protections.

Restructuring to avoid antitrust law is common in the corporate world. For example, Google—which owns YouTube—restructured into Alphabet, of which Google and YouTube are now, technically, mere subsidiaries.

There is no indication in the Wall Street Journal that the 1,500 employee cap will address this. There are many large media conglomerates, including News Corp, Disney, Hearst, and others that own multiple news companies with 1,500 employees or fewer.

Nothing in the Wall Street Journal's report indicates that these giant parent companies (some of which are worth billions of dollars) or their subsidiaries will be excluded by the cap.

In other words, the bill still looks like corporate welfare for some of the world's least trusted brands.

It also comes at a time when Big Tech companies are voluntarily giving huge sums of money to legacy media companies.

Last year, it was reported that Facebook is paying massive "licensing fees" to news publishers totaling $1.6 billion. Google has been pouring hundreds of millions of dollars into news companies for years, including a recent deal worth tens of millions of dollars for access to News Corp content.

Big Tech favors Big Media in other ways, including censoring its competition and artificially promoting them to users. In 2018, Breitbart News released a leak from YouTube showing how the video platform rigs its search results to favor legacy media.

Despite this favoritism and the handouts they already receive, big media companies continue to push for the JCPA, and for similar laws around the world.

Media lobbyists persuaded the government of Australia to pass laws forcing tech companies to give them handouts, and similar legislation has now been proposed in Canada.

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the LORD while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the LORD, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word be that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
