Luke 21:34-36—"But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man" (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Gabriel Hays titled “Attempted Murder of Justice Kavanaugh Neglected by Front Pages of Major U.S. Newspapers” was posted at foxnews.com on June 9, 2022. Following is the article.

Several major U.S. newspapers—and their corresponding websites—hardly mentioned, or outright ignored, the attempted assassination of Supreme Court Justice Brett Kavanaugh on the front pages of their Thursday morning editions.

Special advisor of communications for Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Tex., Steve Guest, tweeted on Thursday that the USA Today and The Chicago Tribune front pages failed to mention that a man armed with a pistol, a knife, pepper spray, and other tools meant to harm Justice Brett Kavanaugh was arrested near the justice’s home on Wednesday.

The suspect was identified as 26-year-old Nicholas John Roske. He claimed to be angry with the conservative justice’s intent to vote to overturn Roe v. Wade—as indicated by the recent leaked Supreme Court draft opinion—as well as frustrated with the court’s potential rulings on Second Amendment cases.

Guest also claimed that The New York Times and The Los Angeles Times barely mentioned this earth-shattering story. It was relegated to the bottom of each paper’s respective front pages, in fine print.

Guest tweeted, "No mention of the assassination attempt on Justice Brett Kavanaugh on the front pages of USA Today or the Chicago Tribune. The New York Times and The Los Angeles Times hid the news on the bottom of the page in small font."

"Shameful," he added, sharing screenshots of the front page of each paper. The images confirmed that there was no story about Kavanaugh's would-be murderer on the front pages of USA Today or The Chicago Tribune.

The images also confirmed that The New York Times teased the story at the bottommost section of the front page. The small entry vaguely claimed in bold, "Arrest Near Home of Justice," and provided a quick blurb. "Officials said an armed man who went to Maryland with plans to kill Justice Brett M. Kavanaugh has been charged with attempted murder."

NewsBusters managing editor Curtis Houck confirmed this, tweeting, "Here's the front page of The New York Times. Not one story on the attempted assassination of Brett Kavanaugh. Instead, you have a footnote to see A-20 and a rather brief article."

"Articles that were longer? A journo goes deep into the Amazon and a deadly Korean ferry accident," he added, along with corresponding screenshots.

WEX Magazine managing editor Jay Caruso pointed out on the day of the arrest that The New York Times website sidelined the major story as well.

Sharing screenshots, he tweeted, "The police arrested a man who wanted to assassinate Supreme Court Justice Brett Kavanaugh, and the @nytimes has it in their 'More News' section of their home page with the title, 'Armed Man Is Arrested Near Home of Justice Kavanaugh.'"

In a subsequent post, he mentioned how the new Jurassic Park movie gets a top Times slot, while Kavanaugh's attempted murder is located near a Trader Joe's piece. "Top of the page - story about Jurassic Park film franchise. A foiled plot to assassinate a sitting Supreme Court Justice? Near the story about Trader Joe's employees wanting to unionize," he tweeted.

Fox News found that the L.A. Times website featured a small mention of the incident on Wednesday, which read "Armed California man arrested near Justice Brett Kavanaugh's Maryland home." That was found in the "More News" section of the website, which is several scrolls down the page.

As of early Thursday afternoon, Fox News found that the only mention of the Kavanaugh murder attempt on the L.A. Times website was a Business section column near the bottom of the webpage, titled, "Column: The threat to Justice Kavanaugh reveals a path to a gun control deal."

Within about the same timeframe, USA Today's website featured the story more prominently in its main section via an opinion column published by George Washington University law professor Jonathan Turley.

Fox News found that the Kavanaugh story was relegated to the "More News" section of the Chicago Tribune's website on Wednesday and, as of Thursday afternoon, no stories related to the incident could be found on the website.

An article by Mary Schumer Promised Kavanaugh Would 'Pay the Price'—After the Arrest of Kavanaugh's Would-Be Assassin, [Now] He's Silent" was posted at dailywire.com on June 8, 2022. Following is the article.

Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-NY), who two years ago pointedly warned Supreme Court Justice Brett Kavanaugh he would "pay the price" if he ruled against abortion, remains silent hours after an alleged assassin said Wednesday that he had tried to kill the justice.

In the middle of the night Wednesday, police arrested 26-year-old Nicholas John Roske carrying a bag full of weapons and burglary tools. Roske told police he planned to kill Kavanaugh in an attempt to prevent him ruling on abortion and Second Amendment cases.

His arrest put Schumer's warning in chilling relief, prompting Republicans to accuse Schumer and activists of endangering the justices through "incendiary rhetoric on Roe."

"I want to tell you, Gorsuch," Schumer threatened the justices in March 2020, "and I want to tell you, Kavanaugh. You have released the whirlwind, and you will pay the price. You won't know what hit you if you go forward with these awful decisions."

"Senate Democrats, led by Senator Schumer, have waged a campaign for years to undermine and intimidate the Court," she told The Daily Wire on Wednesday evening. "Schumer's outrageous threat to Justices Gorsuch and Kavanaugh—on the steps of the Court after the June Medical decision no less—was a call to action."

Mark Paoletta, the former general counsel for the Office of Management & Budget under President Donald Trump who worked on Justice Clarence Thomas' confirmation, argued that Schumer's comments were "chilling and criminally reckless."

"The Dobbs leak was an outgrowth of this despicable threat," he told The Daily Wire on Wednesday evening. "Do anything at all costs to stop the overturning of Roe v. Wade."

Schumer was speaking in reference to the Supreme Court case June Medical Services v. Russo, an abortion case in which the court ultimately ruled with abortion advocates. His threats prompted a rare rebuke from Chief Justice John Roberts, who called the remarks both "inappropriate" and "dangerous."

The senate majority leader did not respond to requests for comment from The Daily Wire. In early May, he said that he supports protesting outside the justices' homes "if protests are peaceful."

As of Wednesday evening, Schumer and many major top Democrats had not weighed in on or condemned the would-be assassin.

Not all—Nancy Pelosi's Deputy Chief of Staff Drew Hammill told The Daily Wire late Wednesday afternoon that the Speaker of the House "believes that violence against public officials has no place in civilized society" and that Pelosi "condemns this abhorrent criminal act."

And though President Joe Biden did not issue a statement himself, his deputy press secretary told The Daily Wire on Wednesday morning that Biden "condemns the actions of this individual in the strongest terms, and is grateful to law enforcement for quickly taking him into custody."

Pressed to provide a statement from Biden himself, White House Assistant Press Secretary Alexandra LaManna told The Daily Wire on Wednesday evening, "Violence and destruction of property have no place in our country under any circumstances, and the President denounces this action."

"We should all agree that actions like this are completely unacceptable regardless of our politics," she added.

Since the infamous leak of the draft Roe v. Wade decision, pro-abortion activists have escalated both rhetoric and protesting surrounding the issue: a slew of pro-life clinics and pregnancy centers have been firebombed, vandalized, or attacked, protestors make weekly visits to loudly demonstrate at the homes of the Supreme Court justices, and swelling crowds have protested outside of the Supreme Court itself.

These crowds have a message: "abort the court." That's a sentiment pushed for years by Demand Justice, a progressive group backed by dark money mother-ship Arabella Advisers, in a years-long campaign to intimidate, threaten, and smear the reputations of Supreme Court justices, conservative-leaning experts have told The Daily Wire.

"If we don't get it, tear it down," protestors chanted into the wee hours of the night outside the Supreme Court following the leak. "Lets make a deal," read a female protestor's sign, held high above her head with a hanger. "For every woman who dies from this, one of you goes too."

"Why is Schumer silent now?" Paoletta questioned. "Because he is beholden to the hard Left, and he won't cross them. And he wants to burn down the Court because the Justices won't obey him on abortion."

Other Democratic lawmakers have repeatedly called for increased protesting following the draft opinion leak, though none have apparently issued so strong a threat as Schumer's. Their language calls for increased action, ordering activists to "fight like hell" and to protest in the streets.

"Protect abortion rights by any means necessary," said Rep. Cori Bush (D-MO). Democratic Washington Rep. Pramila Jayapal called for "people" to "take to the streets across the country." Democratic New York Sen. Kristen Gillibrand ordered activists to "fight like hell to preserve our fundamental human rights."

"Let's be clear: this is not final and the far-right Supreme Court majority will not have the last word," tweeted Sen. Tammy Duckworth (D-IL) following the leak. "The American people will. Tonight, it's important we get loud, organize and demand action from the Senate. Retweet if you agree it's time to protect Roe v. Wade NOW."

Duckworth, who has not weighed in on the would-be Kavanaugh assassin and did not immediately respond to a request for comment from The Daily Wire, accused Republicans of trying to jail women seeking abortions in a Wednesday afternoon tweet.

Leftist media and commentators have also escalated rhetoric: "1000% of the blame and rage needs to be rocket-launched at the Republican zealots who made this possible," claimed Huffington Post Contributor Bob Cesca. "Blaming other liberals isn't going to change a damn thing and will only confuse the matter. Decide today, right now, what you plan to do about it."

"I go back and forth between: MAYBE YOU [STRONG EXPLETIVE] SHOULD HAVE VOTED FOR THE EMAIL LADY and MAYBE YOU [STRONG EXPLETIVE] SHOULD HAVE BURNED IT DOWN WHEN MCCONNELL WOULDN'T SEAT MERRICK GARLAND," tweeted The Nation's Elie Mystal (a board member for Demand Justice).

And commentator Keith Olbermann joked, "[STRONG EXPLETIVE], LET'S BURN THIS PLACE DOWN," regarding the Supreme Court.

In the days following the Uvalde, Texas, massacre, there were hundreds of additional shooting incidents in the U.S. Thirty-three of these qualified as mass shootings, but all of these shootings were tragedies, nonetheless. One of the reasons these senseless incidents continue to occur is the refusal of the left to consider an important causal factor that figures into all of them: the absence of God the Father in American culture and the lives of the perpetrators.

If pushed, the left will discuss the negative effects of human fathers missing from the lives of mass shooters. Like Salvador Ramos—the Uvalde murderer—most of the mass shooters over the past several years grew up in fatherless homes. Even with this well-documented statistic, the left prefers to avoid the subject because so many of their policies encourage fatherless families. Further, try to engage the left in discussing the even more negative effects of God the Father missing from the lives of mass shooters, and you will be ridiculed.

We warn of the debilitating consequence the lack of God is having on American society in our new book, “Tragic Consequences: The Price America is Paying for Rejecting God and How to Reclaim Our Culture for Christ” (available from all major booksellers). Following the Uvalde tragedy, comedian Jamie Foxx posted this note on social media: “Never thought I would live in a ‘Christian Society’ where they would let little children die over and over again.”

Wake up, Mr. Foxx. You don’t live in a Christian society. That is the problem. It is why these abominable tragedies continue to occur. You live in a society that for decades has done its best to drive God out of the culture. You live in a society where children are not allowed to pray in school. You live in a society branding people who quote Holy Scripture as purveyors of hate speech. You live in a society responding to the COVID-19 pandemic by closing churches but allowing bars to remain open. You live in a society where the number of professing Christians is declining rapidly. You live in a society where the church once influenced the culture, but increasingly, the culture influences the church.

One of the inevitable effects of secularization is it encourages the darker side of human nature, and the darker side of human nature shows through in the gun violence plaguing our country. Ramos did not slaughter innocent little children at Robb Elementary School in Uvalde because he is a Christian filled with the love of God. He committed his unthinkable act because he grew up without the God of Holy Scripture—the God who commands His followers to love their neighbors as themselves and whose Sixth Commandment is you shall not murder.

Criminal profilers know young men—the average age of mass shooters in America is 18 and, so far, they have all been men—who grow up without human fathers are at risk of developing feelings of hate, anger and self-loathing. However, even without an earthly father, if these boys grew up with God the Father, they could have overcome destructive feelings and their negative self-images. Instead, these young men have given themselves to the father of lies, Satan.

Because no one placed much value on their lives, they learned to place no value on the lives of others. This kind of deep-seated bitterness is causing young men to commit the unthinkable acts we now associate with Robb Elementary School, Columbine High School and Marjorie Stoneman Douglas High School—acts that could have been prevented if we could have a rational discussion of their root causes.

An article by Matthew Whitaker titled “Biden Executive Order Defunds the Police by Another Name” was posted at foxnews.com on June 7, 2022. Following is the article.

Between historic surges in violent crime, frequent calls to “defund the police,” and a deluge of soft-on-crime policies emanating from the Democratic Party on a regular basis, President Joe Biden’s recent signing of an executive order that ostensibly advances “effective” policing and strengthens “public safety” likely came as a relief to many Americans.

But sadly, like far too many other Biden policy initiatives, the language surrounding the executive order is wildly misleading. In reality, “Advancing Effective, Accountable Policing and Criminal Justice Practices to Enhance Public Trust and Public Safety,” signed by Biden on May 25, does more to appease far-left priorities than it does to reduce crime, improve policing, or make our communities safer—and it should sound the alarm for every American who cares about our nation’s heroic men and women in law enforcement.

■ First, it was intentionally designed to bypass Congress and impose extreme anti-police policies onto the nation by way of executive fiat.

“I’ve called on Congress to pass the George Floyd Justice in Policing Act, but Senate Republicans have stood in the way of progress,” Biden tweeted. “That’s why this afternoon, I’m taking action and signing an Executive Order that delivers the most significant police reform in decades.”

But Republicans did not object to the George Floyd Justice in Policing Act without good reason. According to the Heritage Foundation, if signed, the Act would have made it more difficult for police officers to do their jobs by blocking law enforcement agencies from receiving surplus military equipment, prohibiting the use of no-knock warrants in cases related to drug use, and imposing new and burdensome standards that limit when police officers are allowed to use deadly force—each of which could put officers’ lives at risk. The bill also sought to imperil qualified immunity rights and require the Department of Justice to create a national registry for police misconduct complaints, which could easily allow sensitive information about officers to become public.

■ Second, the executive order is rooted in the lie that American law enforcement is systemically racist.

A White House fact sheet detailing the executive order, for instance, nods to the so-called “legacy of systemic racism in our criminal justice system and in our institutions more broadly.”

Even though a long series of academic studies have thoroughly debunked this divisive narrative, it remains foundational to many of the left's policy proposals—particularly when it comes to policing. The lie that our men and women and blue are somehow tainted by “systemic racism” is a slanderous lie that damages the law enforcement community to a remarkable extent. And Biden's proliferation of this charge should not be seen as anything other than the left's umpteenth attempt to vilify our law enforcement heroes to score cheap political points.

■ Finally, and most concerning, the executive order seeks to fulfill the left's long-standing ambition of defunding the police—albeit in a discreet way that targets local and state-level law enforcement agencies.

The order states that executive branch agencies will be authorized to “promptly review and exercise their authority, as appropriate and consistent with applicable law, to award Federal discretionary grants in a manner that supports and promotes the adoption of policies of this order” by state and local governments. That is, if state governments fail to implement these dangerous and far-reaching policies, Joe Biden will deprive them of federal funding.

Biden's executive order does absolutely nothing to support our police officers, make our communities safer, or clamp down on soaring crime rates when Americans most need it. After last week's vicious attack of defenseless children in Uvalde, Texas, it is clearer than ever before we need well-trained, well-funded, and well-respected law enforcement officers—whose decisions and actions can be the difference between life and death. In the shadow of the heartbreaking carnage in Uvalde, it should be as obvious as ever that a law enforcement officer's duty is to serve and protect American citizens—and that they should not be demeaned, degraded, and disempowered for political gain.

Unfortunately, Biden's executive order will not even come close to improving our nation's quickly deteriorating standards of public safety. And until he chooses to embolden our officers rather than burden them, thank them rather than ridicule them, and lift them up rather than tear them down, our nation, our communities, and the men and women who put their lives on the line every day will continue to pay the price.

An article by Allen West titled “Constitutional Rights vs. Ideological Rights” was posted at townhall.com on June 8, 2022. Following is the article.

On 31 July 1982 I took an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign, and domestic. Today I am the Executive Director of the American Constitutional Rights Union (ACRU).

As a career military serviceman and combat veteran, I believe the oath that I took then has no statute of limitations. As a Member of Congress, that oath was my guiding principle and light, as the Constitution is our rule of law.

The U.S. Constitution was established to restrain the powers of the federal government. As a matter of fact, when you read Article 1, Section 8 of the Constitution you will find the (18) enumerated duties of the legislative branch, the most powerful of our three branches of government. Article II and Article III lay out the duties, qualifications, duties, responsibilities and scope of the executive and judicial branches. Our founders intentionally described and limited the federal government.

Unfortunately, the left does not subscribe to these limitations. Today there exists competing philosophies of governance—constitutional conservatism and progressive socialism. Leftists do not believe in the absolutism of the Constitution, our rule of law, and certainly not the ideal of constitutional rights. Leftists believe in the dangerous concept of ideological rights.

The left in America embraces an ideal that is the antithesis of our constitutional rights. They believe their ideology defines our rights. They believe they can grant and take our rights away.

I find very disconcerting the repeated assertion by the current occupant of the oval office, Joe Biden, that no amendment to the Constitution is absolute. His current focus is the Second Amendment, whose language is quite simple and forthright. His line has been parroted by many progressive socialists, elected officials and media pundits.

The Second Amendment is part of our individual Bill of Rights, the first ten amendments to the Constitution. It is established in our founding documents, along the principle of natural rights theory, that our unalienable rights and all individual rights come to us from our Creator God, the Judeo-Christian God. They do not emanate from the government, and that is codified in our Declaration of Independence which Thomas Jefferson referred to as the "laws of nature and nature's God".

Here we have the President of these United States of America who took an oath to uphold the Constitution declaring our constitutional rights are not absolute.

The left tells us that we have a right to healthcare. We have a right to free college education. We have a right to change our gender. None of these are enumerated rights, but they are ideological rights of the Left.

Once upon a time, during the Carter administration, the Left told us that every American had a right to own a home. They passed legislation called the Community Reinvestment Act which led to the subprime mortgage crisis and financial meltdown some 30 years later. Just last week a Democrat Congressman from Rhode Island publicly stated that he deemed constitutional rights as bovine excrement. Yes, a US Congressman who is supposed to have taken an oath to the Constitution says constitutional rights are BS!

Now you can see why we need an organization called the American Constitutional Rights Union?

If no amendment to the Constitution is absolute, then I guess the left wants to make me a slave again? Recall, Democrats did not support the 13th and 14th Amendments. Today, this same group, who now embraces socialism and Marxism, is promoting economic enslavement.

If the left in America is able to define our rights based upon their ideological agenda and have it enforced by the rule of the mob...America faces dark days ahead. And if the Left is successful in disarming the American populace, their sponsored mob, Antifa, will leverage coercion, threats, intimidation, fear, and violence against anyone not in compliance.

If the progressive socialist left does not like our Constitution, they can go through the amendment process. Passing ideologically based laws, or issuing edicts, orders, mandates, and decrees, does not override our constitutional rights.

Recall, our respective States would not ratify our constitution until it had an individual Bill of Rights. The 10th Amendment clearly states, "All the powers not delegated to the federal government are reserved to the States and to the People." If the 10th Amendment is not absolute, then the leftists in America become the repository of all power in America.

America is the longest running Constitutional Republic because of individual constitutional rights...not rights based upon progressive, socialist, statist, Marxist ideology.

Steadfast and Loyal.

Looking back to November 2021, an article by Dennis Prager titled "Is Stealing Wrong? Not on the Left" was posted at townhall.com on Nov. 2, 2021. Following are excerpts of the article.

To most readers of this column, the question is absurd. The reason is not because the question is, in fact, absurd; it is because most readers of this column are conservative, and many are religious.

Am I implying that most leftists do not believe stealing is wrong? Yes, I am.

As incredible as this assertion is to just about all religious people and virtually all conservatives, most leftists do not believe stealing is wrong. Since I always draw a distinction between those on the Left and liberals, let me add that I suspect most liberals think stealing is wrong. But it almost doesn't matter because they vote for people who do not think it is.

It is hard to believe that millions of Americans do not deem stealing from stores morally wrong, so let's try to explain how this has come about.

■ Reason No. 1 is moral relativism.

For as long as there has been a Left, it has rejected moral absolutes. As the great British historian, Paul Johnson, pointed out a half-century ago in his magnum opus, "Modern Times," the secular world applied the relativism of the natural sciences to morality.

■ Reason No. 2 is the reason for reason number one: the collapse of the Judeo-Christian value system and the accompanying abandonment of, and often disdain for, biblical ethics.

Biblical morality posits moral absolutes—meaning that stealing is wrong for everyone, certainly people of every color. Yes, one can offer a biblical defense of a starving man stealing food for his starving family. But that is hardly what is happening in San Francisco and other American cities.

■ Reason No. 3 is Marxist morality.

From Marx to the present, Marxism has divided the world not between right and wrong, but between economic classes. Therefore, it is morally acceptable for members of the poorer classes to steal from members of the more affluent classes. This notion has made its way into young people's minds for decades. About 30 years ago, I spoke to students from four Cleveland high schools. I asked them to raise their hand if they would steal something they really wanted from a department store if they were certain they would not get caught. Nearly all the students raised their hands. When I asked some of them to justify their reasoning, they all said the same thing: they wouldn't steal from a mom-and-pop store, but they would steal from a department store. It is OK to steal from "the rich."

■ Reason No. 4 is leftists' view of nonwhites, especially blacks, a view that conservatives have never shared.

Leftists truly believe that blacks are intellectually and morally inferior to whites. The evidence? They do not believe blacks should be held to the same intellectual and moral standards to which leftists hold whites. Leftists do not defend whites who steal, and they hold whites to higher intellectual standards. Leftists do not argue for lowering math standards for whites, only for blacks.

There is a reason nearly everyone is familiar with the saying, "The road to hell is paved with good intentions."

The reason is, of course, that it is true and therefore it helps explain why there is so much evil.

Take the 20th century, the bloodiest century on record, in which about 100 million people—all noncombatants—were murdered by despotic regimes, nearly all of them communist. Many of the people who supported communism—both outside and inside communist countries—thought they were doing good.

The Soviet Communist Party's Gulag Archipelago; the Holodomor (the communists' deliberate starvation of 5 million-plus Ukrainians); the Cambodian killing fields (the communist massacre of about a quarter of the Cambodian people); the Chinese communist government's mass starvation and other forms of killing of more than 60 million of its own people; and the creation of the world's largest prison camp, communist North Korea—the roads to all these communist hells were paved by many people who had (or believed themselves to have had) good intentions.

Were it not for many well-intentioned people who believed in communism, the truly evil people who implemented these genocides might not have come to power. To cite but one example, it was Western men and women (primarily Americans and Brits), presumably with good intentions, who delivered to Stalin the secrets to making an atom bomb.

But what about the Nazis' rise to power in Germany?

Not every German who voted for the Nazis in 1932, in Germany's last free elections until after World War II, had evil intentions, let alone the aim of murdering all Jews. In fact, in campaigning that year, Hitler toned down his anti-semitism in order to appeal to a broader base of German voters. The Nazis won only a third of German voters in that election, and the primary reason they voted for that party was not antisemitism. The primary reasons were the Great Depression and Germany's hyperinflation, fear of communism, widespread political violence and resentment of the Versailles Treaty. In other words, even many of the minority of Germans who voted for Hitler did so with the good intention of solving Germany's economic and political crises.

I use the Nazi example only to show that even those Germans who voted for the man and party that unleashed the greatest documented evil in history were not all motivated by bad intentions.

Thank God there is no mainstream movement in America with genocidal aims. But the road to lesser hells in this country is almost always motivated by people with good intentions.

I am sure that most of the many teachers who are robbing young children of their sexual innocence are motivated, certainly on a conscious level, by good intentions. Most of the Americans who vote for politicians who seek to defund the police—a true recipe for increased evil—do so with good intentions. The great majority of those who stormed (not to mention those who merely saw open doors and strolled into) the Capitol on Jan. 6, 2021, had good intentions. Most of the vast number of Americans who believe that free speech does not apply to anything they deem “hate speech” have good intentions—the elimination of hate speech; yet they comprise the first mass movement against free speech in American history. They pose a mortal threat to liberty in this country. But they believe they mean well.

The truth is that, on a conscious level, only a small minority of people wake up on any given day with an intent to do bad. The 51 heads of intelligence agencies who signed a statement a month before the 2020 presidential election declaring the Hunter Biden laptop story “Russian disinformation” lied. Yet, they probably believed that their mendacious assertion was morally justified because, in their view, the larger good was to ensure that then-President Donald Trump not be reelected.

The road to hell is paved by good intentions because most people who do harm, even many who do evil, are motivated by good intentions.

So, then, given that good intentions are almost always morally worthless, what are we to do if we wish to see good triumph over evil? Or, to pose the question another way, if good intentions are morally useless or, worse, actually pave the road to hell on Earth, with what should we pave the road to heaven on Earth?

The reason to worry about the future of America and Western civilization is not that its elites are composed of people with bad intentions; it is that the elites are composed of people devoid of wisdom.

The word for those who lack wisdom is “fool.” Most college professors, deans and presidents and, increasingly, most teachers in high schools and elementary schools; most editors and other journalists; most of the businesspeople who run big companies; most “experts”; and most of the rest of the elite (including, frighteningly, in the medical profession) are fools.

Why are they fools? Why are these men and women devoid of wisdom?

Because they were never taught wisdom. One must study wisdom to know how to do good, just as much as one must study physics to know how to do physics. If you are taught wisdom, there’s a good chance you will become wise. If not, there’s a good chance you will be a fool. And fools do a great deal of harm.

But wisdom is no longer taught by most parents and nearly all schools.

Until the early decades of the 20th century, American students were expected to know the greatest sources of wisdom—the ancient Greek and Roman writers, Shakespeare and, most important of all, the Bible.

But about 100 years ago, America embarked on the road to hell when it stopped teaching wisdom—and what wisdom is all about, moral virtue—when it secularized all education. First the universities and then the lower grades decided that knowledge could substitute for wisdom. Now American young people get no wisdom and, for that matter, little knowledge.

It is not a coincidence that the most foolish institutions in America and the rest of the West are the universities. They are the most radically secular.

You don't have to be religious to realize that the most secular institutions are also the most foolish institutions. You just need not to be a fool.

The road to a good world is paved with wisdom.

An article by Stephen Moore titled "Beware: 100% Green Energy Could Destroy the Planet" was posted at townhall.com on June 7, 2022. Following is the article.

The untold story about "green energy" is that it can't possibly be scaled up to provide anywhere near the energy to replace fossil fuels. (Unless we are headed back to the stone ages, which is what some of the "de-growth" advocates favor).

Right now, the United States gets about 70% of its energy from fossil fuels. To go to zero over the next 20 years would be economically catastrophic and cost tens of millions of jobs. With gas prices at nearly double their price back from when Donald Trump left office and inflation up from 1.5% to 8% in just 15 months, we are already experiencing the economic damage from the green energy crusaders.

But we also have to ask whether green energy is even good for the environment. Some environmentalists are pointing to a little-noticed study by the World Bank showing that moving toward 100% solar, wind and electric battery energy would be just as destructive to the planet as fossil fuels. This was precisely the conclusion of a story in Foreign Policy magazine, hardly a right-wing publication.

According to the Foreign Policy analysis, moving to a "carbon-free" energy future "requires massive amounts of energy, not to mention the extraction of minerals and metals at great environmental and social costs."

Here are some of the numbers. Going all-in on batteries, solar and wind would require the following.

- 34 million metric tons of copper
- 40 million tons of lead
- 50 million tons of zinc
- 162 million tons of aluminum
- 4.8 billion tons of iron

Those tens of millions of windmills, solar panels and electric batteries for cars and trucks aren't exactly biodegradable. So, we will have the most prominent energy graveyard with toxic pollutants that will be 100 times larger than any nuclear waste storage. And yet, the Left is worried about plastic straws!

I'm all for mining for America's bountiful natural resources of copper, lead, magnesium and precious metals. But ironically, it's the greens that want to shut down mines, which is like saying you want food, but you oppose farming. Talk about cognitive dissonance.

Then, the land space is needed for the windmills and solar panels. Bloomberg reports that getting to zero carbon by 2050 would require a land area equal to five South Dakotas “to develop enough clean power to run all the electric vehicles, factories, and more.”

In other words, the liberals are calling for a full-scale industrialization of America’s wilderness and landscape.

Now, even many of the most liberal areas of the country are shouting “no” to green energy in their own backyard. Vermonters are rebelling against unsightly solar panels spoiling their views. According to the Bennington Banner, “Vermont’s utility regulator has rejected permits for two 2 MW solar farms proposed in Bennington, pointing to aesthetic concerns and current land conservation measures in the town plan.”

Meanwhile, a town in Wisconsin is suing state regulators to “stop construction” of what would be “the state’s largest solar project,” according to the Wisconsin Journal.

Even blue Massachusetts residents are fighting green energy projects. Off-shore wind farms are delayed off the coast of Cape Cod, where per capita income is nearly the highest in the country, because they don’t want their ocean views spoiled from their beachfront villas.

In other words, real nature lovers are finally starting to awaken to the reality that wind and solar aren’t so green after all. A nuclear plant takes up at most 1 square mile of land. Wind and solar farms require hundreds of thousands of acres. So, to provide enough electric power to keep Manhattan lit up at night would require paving over nearly the whole state of Connecticut with windmills and solar farms.

The public is starting to ask: How is any of this green? The Green New Deal strategy makes especially no sense given that by increasing our use of clean-burning and reliable natural gas, we are reducing energy prices AND cutting carbon emissions. Add nuclear power to the mix, and we wouldn’t need to start building wind and solar farms in our forests, deserts and national parks.

An article by Star Parker titled “Congress Ignores Pressing National Business While It Obsesses about January 6” was posted at creators.com on June 8, 2022. Following is the article.

As the House Select Committee to Investigate the Jan, 6 Attack on the United States Capitol starts public hearings, we must ask what motivates those on the committee.

Is the sole concern the ideals of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States? Or is it to get media to attack and undermine political opponents?

It is indeed possible that infractions of law can be investigated without a carnival platform designed to mobilize media and national attention.

The public material of the committee already reeks of motivations other than seeking truth.

The committee has already announced on its website that the Jan. 6 incident was "one of the darkest days of our democracy."

Really? Against a civil war where some three-quarters of a million Americans were killed, fighting over what American freedom is about, one incident of a few hours, where law enforcement finally prevailed, was one of our "darkest days"?

There are just 24 hours in any day, so time taken on one matter means attention not given to other matters.

If these members of Congress really cared about our principles of freedom and democracy, they wouldn't be ignoring every day other pressing matters in which the freedom of American citizens is blatantly violated.

Take, for example, that as the Jan. 6 investigation monopolizes media attention, on June 3 the Trustees of Medicare and Social Security issued their annual report.

Both systems are bankrupt and in dismal shape financially.

The cash shortfall of Medicare in 2021 was $409 billion. Projection is that Social Security will be out of adequate cash flow to meet obligations to retirees by 2035—just 13 years from now.

The Trustees estimate that there are only adequate funds in Social Security to meet 80% of benefits in 2035. The payroll tax, now 12.4%, would have to be raised 26% in order to generate sufficient funds to meet those obligations.

In other words, today every working American age 55 and below who plans to collect Social Security benefits at age 67 is paying a payroll tax into a system that cannot provide the benefits promised.

Can you imagine a private insurance company sending a letter to policy holders saying that, in 13 years, they will only be able to meet 80% of the payments promised to policy holders?

The lawsuits would be flying.

Let's forget about the fiscal situation of the system for a minute and whether it is even worth saving this program. How about the issue of freedom that our members of Congress want us to believe they care about so much?

Take a young citizen, age 21, fresh with his or her new degree, entering the work force for the first time. Immediately, 12.4% of their paycheck is deducted into a system they involuntarily enter, in which there are inadequate funds to meet promised benefits.

Shouldn't this new young worker be able to say, "No, thank you, I don't want to participate"?

Even if the system were not broken, and benefits could be met, in our free country, shouldn't everyone be free to manage their own retirement?

According to the Committee to Unleash Prosperity, the average return of Social Security over the last 40 years was 1%. Over the same period, average return on stocks was 6%.

Back to this new young worker, by the calculations of the Committee to Unleash Prosperity, this single worker, if they earned the median national income and were able to invest 10% of their income into a diversified stock and bond portfolio over 40 years, instead of paying the payroll tax, could have annual income at retirement of $55,143 against $19,646 from Social Security.

So, hey, members of the Select Committee. Enough of pretending that you care about American freedom. How about wrapping up the carnival and getting down to the real challenges every American faces today?

An article by Virginia Kruta titled "Washington Commanders' [Formerly Called Washington Redskins] Coach Jack Del Rio Calls January 6 a 'Dust-Up'—Blasts Double Standard on George Floyd Protests" was posted at dailywire.com on June 8, 2022. Following is the article.

Washington Commanders defensive coordinator Jack Del Rio sparked backlash when he referred to the January 6 riot on Capitol Hill as a "dust-up"—and complained that those responsible for riots all across the country during the summer of 2020 were not held to the same standard.

Del Rio spoke to reporters on Wednesday, and someone asked about a recent tweet in which he had compared the riots after George Floyd's death to the January 6th riot and asked why—given all the focus on the latter—no one had any interest in getting to the bottom of the former.

Responding to a report detailing a guide to the January 6th hearings, Del Rio tweeted, "Would love to understand 'the whole story' about why the summer of riots, looting, burning and the destruction of personal property is never discussed but this is ???"

When asked about the tweet on Wednesday, Del Rio doubled down: "I'm being respectful. I just asked a simple question," Del Rio replied. "Let's get right down to it: What did I ask? A simple question. Why are we not looking into [the protests], if we're going to talk about [the Capitol riot]? Why are we not looking into those things?"

Del Rio went on to make the direct comparison again, laying out what he viewed to be a double standard between the way the George Floyd riots were addressed and the way January 6th was still at the forefront of the national conversation.

“It’s kind of hard for me to say, I can realistically look at it. I see the images on TV, people’s livelihoods are being destroyed, businesses are being burned down, no problem,” Del Rio said. “And then we have a dust-up at the Capitol, where nothing burned down, and we’re going to make that a major deal.”

Del Rio’s comments come as the January 6th Committee prepares for hearings that will be broadcast live on most major cable networks—the exception being Fox News, although Fox Business Network will carry full coverage.

Several others have criticized the continued focus on the Capitol Hill riot as well, saying that the American people might be more concerned with inflation and other issues that are impacting them every day.

“The View” guest host Lindsey Granger made that exact point during Tuesday’s broadcast, only to get shouted down by regular host Whoopi Goldberg.

An article by Charles Lipson titled “The Biden Administration’s Five Stages of Grief” was posted at newsweek.com on June 7, 2022. Following are excerpts of the article.

- It’s not really a problem—you just think it is.
 - It’s only a problem for some people, especially rich people. It doesn’t affect ordinary folks.
 - It’s only a temporary problem. Although folks may be feeling some pain right now, it will go away soon thanks to our policies.
 - The problem is lasting a little longer than expected, but none of the experts anticipated that. The president himself is working hard to fix everything.
 - It’s not our fault, and there’s nothing we can do to fix the problems. Who is to blame? (In 2021, it was Trump; in 2022, it is Putin.)

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the LORD while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the LORD, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not you thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word be that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
