Luke 21:34-36—"But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man" (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Robert A. Taft titled "How the East and West Will Part Ways on the Great Reset" was posted at americanthinker.com on Dec. 2, 2022.

The East and the West are both collaborating in an effort to impose the Great Reset but each side's different interpretation of the Great Reset and their incompatibility eventually will tear them apart.

These differences fall into four categories: (1) environment, (2) food production and delivery, (3) global currency, and (4) global governance.

The Environment

The West's vision is wrapped in the Green New Deal (GND). The GND is intended not to protect the earth, but is key to reduce global population and to pay off President Biden's debt to China. China, which will be the source for electric vehicle batteries and windmills, will receive some Western reparations for environment damage.

While the U.S. and the EU will make costly adjustments under the Paris Climate Accord, China will not. Meanwhile, locked in by contracts across the globe, China controls most of the world's rare minerals and is the largest manufacturer of windmills.

The East, especially China and Russia, do not care about the environment. China will continue to be the world's largest manufacturer run by carbon-based fossil fuels far into the future. China emits 27% of the world's carbon emissions, more than Japan, the EU and the U.S. combined. While the West obsesses about the environment, China and Russia have consolidated global oil producers and sellers Russia, Iran, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela against the energy buyers, Western countries and at $100 a barrel are reaping massive profits at the West's expense.

Food Production and Delivery

As for the West, both Schwab at Bali and Biden in his new biotechnology Executive Order call for building "sustainable, healthier, more equitable food systems."

But is that their intent?

Since the environmental crisis has replaced COVID, Western globalists are trying to eliminate CO2 from the atmosphere and eliminate nitrogen and fertilizers; all of which stunt plant growth to lead to the development of synthetic foods. Bill Gates is pushing fungus and crickets over methane-producing cattle.

Globalists are tampering with plant food resulting in threats to agro-ecological systems also leading to the creation of synthetic foods. High-tech crop technologies and food distribution, moreover, favor major food processors while excluding smaller stores and producers as well as rural access to food.

Large Western corporations like Bayer are teaming with Big Tech companies like Microsoft to gain detailed digital overviews of entire land, water, and food flows through artificial intelligence. Digital farming would be a boon for these companies and their investors and would leave smaller producers in the dust.

With this alliance between huge food processors and Big Tech, the West believes farmers across the globe will be forced to share "real-time data about local agricultural conditions and farmer behaviour." Gathering this data on a global scale will allow Big Tech to digitalize and control global food systems.

But the East may not be so obliging. In developing countries, farming is a staple industry and their agricultural acumen is improving each year. Intrusion by Western behemoths will not be welcome, since China will be the leader in digital food and biotechnology.

China has been gobbling up American farmland at a record pace since 2010, but also has invested in synthetic food production and is already far ahead of the West. As the West moves closer to synthetic foods, China sees another opportunity to lead in this area and reap millions in selling products to the West.

Digital Global Currency

The West wants the G-20 to control international finance. They envision a global digital currency replacing cash in a system where the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the Bank of International Settlements, and central banks all controlled by the West would manage both the flow and supply of money.

The East also wants a global currency, but not the petrodollar or any currency the West might develop. As financial misery in the West over the GND increases, China will continue its manufacturing dominance and control of international finances by selling oil and gas. They believe this move will give the East great leverage over the West, resulting in the digital yuan becoming the new global currency.

To ensure currency dominance, Russia and China formed BRICS, an acronym for an association of five major economies: Brazil, Russia, India, China, and South Africa. Each country is large and is situated in different regions of the world where, because of their individual size, they can influence their respective neighbors to form additional alliances with them.

All five are G-20 members. Collectively they represent 40% of the world's population, a quarter of global land area and a third of global GDP. More importantly they trade in their own currencies. All of them want to shed their dependence on the U.S. dollar and restructure both the international financial system and current geopolitical alignment.

Global Governance

The West believes that the G-20 is sufficiently manageable to serve as the basis for global government as long as the international banking cartel controls global finance.

The East distrusts and hates the West. The WEF vision of the Great Reset has a strong Western bias. The East, however, emboldened by its added leverage of carbon fuel and nation size membership, wants to run the Great Reset on its own terms.

The West, moreover, has based its Great Reset vision on Artificial Intelligence (AI) and other technology. China's Made in 2025 Program, however, aims to be the technological leader in 10 critical high-tech areas, including Artificial Intelligence. Its universities have received more funds for AI research than schools in any other countries while obtuse American Big Tech companies like Google are even supporting China's effort.

The Result: Cooperation or Conflict

So consider the East's edge over the West:

- In the most recent Military Index, China and Russia have militaries superior to that of the United States. Forget NATO country's "militaries."
- China leads in manufacturing, mineral deposits, pharmaceutical ingredients, biotechnology, and artificial intelligence.
- China wants to be the leader in 10 critical technologies by 2025.
- Russia leads the new cabal of oil and gas producers/sellers and the West, as energy buyers, is at their mercy.

China and Russia know their advantages but will play along with the WEF as long as it is in their interest to do so. As for the West, they have completely ignored both China and Russia's vulnerabilities. Opening up U.S. oil and gas would again reduce the price of oil from over $100 a barrel to $40, crushing Russia's mainstay. China has severe population and banking problems. The Chinese people can't get access to their money and property is being confiscated rapidly. Because they eliminated girls at birth years ago, the male-female ratio is incredibly unbalanced.

Nonetheless, the West insists on kowtowing to the East, financing their comparative advantages and thus preparing for its own demise.

The West and East share essentially the same vision, but their differences mean the race is on. If China-Russia win the race, Western globalists will be the first to go. Why? Because Western elites will seek power, which would be a real threat to the East.

Klaus Schwab should remember his history. His Great Reset has been tried before by his comrades China and Russia. Mao's "The Great Leap Forward" saw millions murdered, as did Lenin's Bolshevik Revolution.

An article by Scott Hogenson titled "The Left's Back Door Attack on the Constitution" was posted at cnsnews.com on Dec. 7, 2022. Following is the article.

Authoritarians despise the U.S. Constitution because it is an impediment to their goals. It is routinely decried by the American Left as a scrap of paper written by a bunch of dead white guys that is no longer relevant. Ergo, it must be eliminated.

But scuttling the Constitution is a pretty heavy political lift. Most Americans reflexively believe the Constitution is a good thing and would be wary of those arguing to get rid of it. So to achieve this goal, the American Left has taken a different approach.

America was founded as a Judeo-Christian nation and the Constitution relies on many principles first articulated during the Reformation. Freedom of speech, religion, conscience, self-preservation and other key aspects of our Constitution spring from the writings of Martin Luther, John Calvin and other Reformation leaders.

But the biblical underpinnings of the Constitution are not simply fundamental to our founding. They are fundamental to our continued national existence. John Adams understood this when he wrote to the Massachusetts militia in October, 1798, "Our Constitution was made only for a moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate for the government of any other."

The smarter totalitarians among us have carefully studied the American founding and have discovered a back-door means of negating the Constitution. They're doing so by persuading Americans to be immoral, amoral and irreligious.

It's working. When Bill Clinton was first elected president, the Gallup survey found that 70% of Americans were members of a church or synagogue. By 2021, that figure dropped to 47%. That's a startling decline in the number of people who engage in corporate worship.

There are myriad ways in which people are dissuaded from practicing their faith and the biggest target is Christianity. A group of Christians was recently denied service at a Richmond, Virginia restaurant for the crime of believing in the Bible.

A few hours north of Richmond, Fairfax County, Virginia, schools want to indoctrinate children with the false idea that biological sex is "assigned" at birth. It's a more subtle means of undermining the biblical truth that God created man in his own image, "male and female he created them."

These are just a few current examples of a trend that has grown in recent years. The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops records no less than 172 episodes of arson, vandalism and other violent acts against their churches since May, 2020.

What we're seeing here is a Totalitarian Two-Step. If the American Left can't dump the Constitution because they don't like it, they will intimidate Americans into surrendering their faith. When we become a nation that is no longer moral or religious, the Constitution becomes inadequate, as Adams warned.

It's an insidious strategy for fundamentally changing the United States and it's succeeding. It succeeds because our culture is increasingly infused with various forms of anti-Christianity. We are bombarded by it in cinema, the news media, music, education, even public policy and law.

Lorie Smith, a website designer in Colorado, is fighting a state law that demands she surrender her Christian belief that marriage is an institution involving one man and one woman. She is forced to argue before the U.S. Supreme Court for the right to believe and practice that which Barack Obama believed 14 short years ago.

All this is happening because to undermine Christianity is to undermine the Constitution. It paves the way for a totalitarian America that reflects elements of the evil, authoritarian civic constructs that litter history and it must be resisted.

It can be resisted through the courts, like Smith is doing. It can be fought through civic engagement, like parents in Fairfax County are doing. It can be challenged through public denunciation, like the Richmond Christian group has done.

None of this is easy and the American Left is diligent in violently marginalizing those with whom they disagree. But Christians can find the inspiration to resist in scripture.

Two thousand years ago, Jesus Christ knew this would happen and he minced no words in saying so. The Gospel of John records Jesus telling his disciples, "If the world hates you, know that it has hated me before it hated you."

The notion of being the object of hatred may not be entirely inspirational but the result of being true to the faith is. The Epistle to the Hebrews tells us that, "Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not yet seen."

This message to the Hebrews parallels that of the founders who crafted a Constitution to assure the citizens of a new nation that we may have the conviction of things hoped for, things not yet seen in our country.

That's why the Constitution is more relevant today than ever. It is our only assurance that America may continue forming a more perfect union.

Isaiah 55:6-11—"Seek you the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. 'For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,' says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word be that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it."
