But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take you stand in the presence of the Son of Man” (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Collin Eaton and Benolt Morenne titled “This Arkansas Town [Magnolia] Could Become the Epicenter of a U.S. Lithium Boom” was posted at wsj.com on July 20, 2023. Following are excerpts of the article.

These days, companies aren’t looking to find more oil – they are instead prospecting for lithium, a metal that is increasingly prized around the world as an essential ingredient in electric-vehicle batteries.

If the U.S. is to ease its dependence for lithium on other countries (such as China), it may need this quiet corner of southwest Arkansas to lead the way.

Exxon Mobil (a new player in the hunt for U.S. lithium) is planning to build one of the world’s largest lithium processing facilities not far from Magnolia – with a capacity to produce 75,000 to 100,000 metric tons of lithium a year.

At that scale, it would equate to about 15% of all finished lithium produced globally last year, according to one analyst.

The Wall Street Journal reported in May that Exxon purchased 120,000 gross acres in the area for a price tag of more than $100 million. A consultant for the seller had estimated the prospect could have the equivalent of 4 million tons of lithium carbonate equivalent, enough to power 50 million Evs.

To push the project forward, Exxon will have to profitably scale up the technology used to siphon lithium from brine, which for years has been an elusive goal across the industry.

Other companies including Standard Lithium and Tetra Technologies are planning to build in the area.

- The attraction to build is what is known as the Smackover formation – a geologic trend that runs from Texas to Florida.
- The Smackover could become as significant to domestic lithium production as the Permian Basin of West Texas and New Mexico has been for U.S. oil output.

- The Smackover is rich with saltwater brine, which once bedeviled companies drilling for oil. That brine also contains small amounts of lithium – and the companies are increasingly optimistic they can scale up technologies to extract it.

Mining companies' efforts to shore up domestic supplies have run into hurdles in recent years. But companies drilling for lithium say their extraction methods are cleaner than traditional mining, and face fewer regulatory risks.

In Magnolia (named for a tree that blooms once or twice a year), a bright two-story mural depicts oil field workers clutching rig equipment and twisting valves, recalling the period when the region was a thriving community hub of oil field activity. That all changed after the 1980s oil bust, and a series of mill closures and company departures in the years since.

Now the economic winds are shifting again.

Eddie Mobbs of Magnolia said at least three companies in the past couple of years have asked whether they can buy the mineral rights on 80 acres she and her husband own. She has decided so far not to sell, just in case they want to lease the land.

She said: "I'm wondering if its not because somebody knows something we don't know."

Exxon, which is generally bullish about the future of oil and natural gas, is also preparing for a future less dependent on gasoline. Last year, it projected light-duty vehicle demand for internal combustion engine fuels could peak by 2025 – while EVs, hybrids and vehicles powered by fuel cells could grow to more than 50% of new car sales by 2050.

CNBC judges our 50 states based on stupid, left-wing categories no sane or normal person cares about when looking for a place to live. These liars are inventing categories that have nothing to do with our standard of living. Included in the evaluation was the right to murder your unborn child just because murder is more convenient than taking responsibility for the life you created through your own voluntary actions.

But this fake survey is a good thing. Hopefully, CNBC’s lies will spread far and wide and keep the destructive, left-wing locusts out of our states. If you choose where you want to live based on how easy it is to kill your baby, we’d prefer you stay out.

An article by Jonathan Chadwick titled “Eating Meat Creates Four Times More Greenhouse Gases Than Being Vegan; [Oxford] Study Finds” was posted at dailymail.co.uk on July 21, 2023. Following are excerpts of the article.

University of Oxford experts say eating just 100 grams of meat per day (less than a single burger) creates four times more greenhouse gases compared with a vegan diet.

The new study was led by experts from the “Livestock, Environment and People (LEAP) project.

They said: “Our results (which use data from over 38,000 farms in over 100 countries) show that high meat diets have the biggest impact for many important environmental indicators – including climate change and bio-diversity loss.”

- Why is meat bad for the planet?

“Meat-heavy diets risk the health of our planet, as livestock farming on a massive scale destroys habitats and generates greenhouse gases.

“Animal agriculture contributes to global warming because of the methane, nitrous oxide and carbon emissions of livestock and their supply chain.

“The cleaning of trees to make way for grazing cattle also reduces carbon sequestration – the process of capturing and storing atmospheric carbon dioxide.

“If these emissions get too high, the result could be rising sea levels and scorching temperatures that threaten life on earth.”

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word by that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
