An article by historian Andrew Roberts titled “Why Hamas Is Worse Than the Nazis” was posted at dailymail.co.uk on Dec. 10, 2023. Following are excerpts of the article.

My late publisher Lord George Weidenfeld knew about the Nazis. Escaping from Vienna soon after Hitler’s annexation of Austria in 1938, he managed to save his immediate family from the Holocaust – although he lost many other relatives to it.

He broadcasted to the Third Reich while working for the BBC during World War II, and published the memoirs of Nazi architect Albert Speer after it. If anyone could get into the psyche of the Nazis, George could.

It therefore came as a surprise when (over tea in the Carlye Hotel in New York nearly a decade ago) George said: “There are people who are worse anti-Semites than the Nazis.”

He went on to explain why al-Qaeda, Hamas and Islamic Jihad (although of course not genocidal on the same scale as the Nazis) were qualitatively worse than the Nazis in their belief systems, impulses and instincts.

George died in January 2016, but had he been alive on October 7 this year, he would have had the satisfaction of having his view (once considered controversial) very publicly justified.

For whereas the Nazis went to great lengths to hide their crimes from the world (because they knew they were crimes), Hamas has done the exact opposite – because they do not consider them to be so.

In October 1943 Heinrich Himmler (the head of the SS) delivered a notorious speech to 50 of his senior lieutenants in the Posen concentration camp in occupied Poland.

He said: “I want to speak frankly to you about an extremely grave matter. We can talk about it among ourselves, yet we will never speak of it in public . . . I am referring to the evacuation of the Jews, the extermination of the Jewish people . . . It is a page of glory in our history that has never been written and is never to be written.”

By total contrast, the Hamas killers 80 years later attached GoPro cameras to their helmets so they could livestream their atrocities over social media. Although the Nazis burned Jews alive in barns on their retreat in 1945, they did not film themselves doing it.

There are plenty of photographs of Nazis standing around death-pits full of Jewish corpses, but these were taken for private delectation, rather than public consumption.

When on January 27, 1945, the Red Army reached Auschwitz, they found only 7,000 living skeletons ther out of a normal camp population of 140,000. The Nazis had marched the rest westwards, partly in order to kill the death-marchers but also because they did not want evidence of their crimes to be uncovered.

Gassing operations at Auschwitz had ended in November 1944, and attempts were made to destroy the gas chambers.

“Killing installations had been dismantled, and attempts made to erase the traces of the camp’s murderous activities,” wrote historian Sir Ian Kershaw in his book The End, documenting the last days of the Third Reich.

The sheer glee with which Hamas, by contrast, killed parents in front of their children and children in front of their parents, was broadcast to the world. Nazi sadism was routine and widespread, but it wasn’t built into their operational plans in the way that Hamas’s sadism has been. The gas chambers were invented in part because the Nazis did not much enjoy the actual process of killing Jews as much as Himmler hoped they might.

As historian Laurence Rees notes of Himmler in 1941: “He had observed two years before the psychological damage that shooting Jews at close range had caused his team of killers and so he had overseen the development of a system of murder via the gas chambers that to an extent distanced from emotional trauma.”

No such trauma is evident in Hamas’s teams of killers, who telephoned their parents on October 7 to boast about the number of Jews they had slaughtered.

After invading countries, the Nazis often took hostages to ensure the compliance of the local population with their proclamations. The mayor, businessmen, the popular village priest and other worthies would be taken hostage and threatened with execution – if resistance was offered to their rule.

It was brutal and in contravention of all the rules of war. But even the Nazis (foul as they were) did not deliberately take 9-month-old babies and young children, women and octogenarians hostage, as Hamas has done. Nor did the Nazis use babies in incubators and children in hospital ICU units as human shields.

The Nazis recognized that if the Red Cross or other international agencies uncovered evidence of the Holocaust, there would be an international outcry.

But Hamas has spotted something about the modern world: Instead of demonstrations against their atrocities and hostage-taking, the largest demonstrations globally have taken place against the victim – Israel.

Even movements traditionally seen as on the Left (such as the women's movement) have failed to raise their voices against the mass rape of Israeli women on October 7. Rape has been seen in every conflict since the dawn of time.

The officer corps of civilized countries denounce it. In the World War II even the barbaric Nazis had strict rules against their Aryan master-race having sex with people they considered inferior or "Untermenschen."

Laurence Rees in his book Auschwitz wrote: "One of the differences between the atrocities committed by the Nazis who were carrying out the Final Solution and many other war crimes of the 20th century is the overt insistence by the Nazis that their troops refrain from sexual violence, not out of humanity, but out of ideology . . . The Jews and Slavic population of the East represented, to the Nazis, racially dangerous peoples . . . Slav and Jewish women (especially the later) were absolutely out of bounds. Killing Jewish women was a duty, but having sex with them was a crime."

Of course this was regularly ignored in practice: indeed, there was a brothel in Auschwitz itself. SS officers who raped Jewish women there tended to be transferred out, but not punished. One officer (Gerhard Palitzsch) was arrested, but only transferred to a sub-camp.

German officers were instructed not to punish rape when it occurred – as a 1940 memorandum from Field Marshal Walther Von Brauchitsch shows – quoted by German historian Regina Muhlhauser in Reframing Sexual Violence As A Weapon and Strategy of War.

But that is different from the Hamas leadership giving their men orders to rape as many Jewish women as they could find and film themselves doing it – and in all too many cases taking them hostage afterwards or killing them.

In Hitler's Willing Executioners, the American writer Daniel Goldhagen notes: "Hitler opted for genocide at the first moment that the policy became practical. The moment that the opportunity existed for the only Final Solution that was final, Hitler seized the opportunity to bring about his ideal of a world forever freed of Jewry and made the leap to genocide."

This came in 1941 when both Poland and the western USSR were under his control. (Over half of all Europe's Jews lived in the Soviet Union then.)

Yet Hamas embarked on its genocidal attack when it only had southern Israel under its control for a few hours, and thus when it knew that the Israeli response would be instantaneous and devastating.

Unlike the Nazis (who hoped that their murders could be hidden by the fog of war and complete territorial domination), Hamas grasped at their window of opportunity in the full knowledge that they would be punished for it, and soon.

Whereas the Nazis assumed they would win the war and thus would never have to face retribution for their crimes, Hamas knew it was only a matter of hours away, yet still they launched their attack – caring nothing for the effect on ordinary Gazans.

Their lust for torturing and murdering Jews was therefore even more powerful than the Nazis', who waited until the front line had pushed forward before sending in the Einsatzkommando to wipe out Polish and Russian Jewish communities.

Toward the end of the war, senior Nazis like Himmler and Ernst Kattenbrunner tried to exchange Jews for cash, exposing how fundamentally cynical and corrupt they were. But also how they were willing to put greed over the killing impulse.

Hamas, by contrast, was doing well out of the relative hiatus in military activity before October 7, with thousands of Gazans being issued work permits to earn more in Israel than they ever could in Gaza.

Unlike even the heinous anti-Semites Himmler and Kaltenbrunner, therefore, Hamas has not put its greed for cash over its one true love: killing Jews.

In his book Hitler, The Germans and the Final Solution, Sir Ian Kershaw observes: "Very many, probably most, Germans were opposed to the Jews during the Third Reich, welcomed their exclusion from the economy and society and saw them as natural outsiders . . . Most would have drawn the line at physical maltreatment. The very secrecy of the Final Solution demonstrates more clearly than anything else the fact that the Nazi leadership felt it could not rely on popular backing for its extermination policy."

Here, too, the contrast with Hamas is obvious. The elimination of Jews in the Near East is openly promised in the Hamas constitution – as it tacitly is in the 'From the River to the Sea' chant so beloved of today's demonstrators in the West.

Gazans voted for Hamas in 2005 in far greater proportions than Germans voted for the Nazis in 1932. And a good proportion of them celebrated wildly when Hamas paraded its hostages through the streets of Gaza on the afternoon of October 7.

Kershaw writes: “The Final Solution would not have been possible without the . . . depersonalization and debasement of the figure of the Jew.”

In both Gaza and the West Bank, printed educational textbooks present Jews as despicable, worthless and sinister figures – utterly depersonalized and debased. This is a recipe for further generational conflict.

George Weidenfeld was therefore correct back in 2015, and the events of October 7 have confirmed it.

Hamas is (while taking into account the wild disparity in the sheer geographical and numerical extent of their crimes) qualitatively even more anti-Semitic than the Nazis were.

One thing in which they are exactly equal, however, is that Nazi barbarism had to be utterly extirpated, and that goes for Hamas, too.

An article by Allen West titled “The Real Dictators” was posted at townhall.com on Dec. 11, 2023. Following are excerpts of the article.

Dictator (noun): A ruler with total power over a country, typically one who has obtained control by force.

Last week, during a town hall meeting in Davenport, Iowa, Fox News commentator Sean Hannity asked former President Donald Trump if he planned to be a dictator. The question came as a result of the new talking point and false narrative of the progressive socialist leftist media. This is a point that has been championed by Liz Cheney, who is (as Vladimir Lenin coined the term) the left’s favorite “useful idiot.” Ms. Cheney is, of course, currently making the rounds on leftist media outlets promoting her book, “Oath and Honor: A Memoir and a Warning.”

Former President Trump’s response to Hannity’s question sent the left into a more profound apoplectic meltdown of deranged lunacy. Instead of just saying I am not a dictator, Trump went on to say he would be a dictator on his first day after being sworn in as 47th President to secure the border and return to energy resource drilling.

Now, let me take a moment to enlighten our delusional leftist comrades and Ms. Cheney.

- Abiding by the U.S. Constitution and securing our national sovereignty is not dictatorial.
- Returning America to energy independence and perhaps dominance is not dictatorial.

Well, it is to the leftists who prefer to undermine our sovereignty and sell off our Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) – now down to a mere 17 days – to China. This is where Donald Trump could have silenced his Marxist detractors on this issue.

One thing we should recognize is that whatever the leftists are accusing someone else of doing, it is because they are doing it. The real white supremacists have always been on the left. And the real dictators have always been leftists.

- It is quite dictatorial to tell an entire nation what type of vehicle they can drive – especially when the American automobile industry has been telling the Biden administration that no one wants these electric vehicles. No one except China is the primary beneficiary in their role as the real violator of climate change.
- Dictators mandate how you can transport yourself, regulating your freedom of movement.
- Dictators are the ones who recommend mileage taxes and monitor your vehicle to report your travels.
- Dictators are the ones who tell you what type of stove, dishwasher, and other appliances you can have in your home.
- Dictators tell you how you must build your own home and even attempt to regulate the heating and cooling of your home.
- Dictators tell you that your children are not your own, that they belong to them.
- Dictators pass laws that allow them to mutilate the bodies of your children without your consent or knowledge.
- As well, dictators tell you that they will take your children away from you if you do not affirm the diabolical ideological agendas they use to indoctrinate your children.
- Dictators (such as Democrat Governors Roy Cooper and Katie Hobbs) feel threatened by the passing of educational freedom legislation and seek to reverse those measures.
- Dictators refer to parents who want better educational opportunities for their children as “domestic terrorists.”

- Dictators illegally surveil, intimidate, and arrest their political opposition – especially those standing in the way of murdering unborn babies in the womb by dismemberment (which is the philosophy of a white supremacist revered by dictators – Margaret Sanger).
- Dictators use government agencies to undermine and erode your rights to keep and bear arms because dictators want unarmed subjects, not armed citizens. That is why Biden, the Dictator, used the BATF to implement an unconstitutional executive order that would have turned millions of Americans into felons overnight – the pistol brace ban.
- Out in New Mexico, their dictator, Governor Michele Lujan Grisham, thought she could suspend the Second Amendment because of high crime rates by criminals using firearms.
- Dictators like Chicago Mayor Brandon Johnson refuse to deal with rising crime and shootings, and his response to retail stores, including grocery stores, fleeing Chicago? Yep, we will just create government grocery stores – because dictators want to control you food consumption.
- Perhaps that is why dictators are telling us we cannot eat meat. Instead, they want us to eat bugs. Well, you first, me never.
- By their very nature, progressive socialists, Marxists, leftists, and communists are the real dictators. After all, who says “from each according to his ability, to each according to his needs?” Yep, wealth distribution is all about, taking from one group (the contributors) and distributing to another group (the consumers). It is the expansion of the welfare nanny state, the dependency society. Who embraces that sort of warped principle? Dictators.
- Dictators tell law-abiding citizens that they must live in fear while they release violent criminals back onto their streets. Those same dictators tell Americans that law enforcement officers should not protect them while they also seek to disarm them. In Illinois, their version of a dictator (Governor Pritzker) wants to hire illegal immigrants as law enforcement officers.
- Not to be outdone, another Illinois dictator (Senator Dick Durbin) wants to recruit illegal immigrants to serve in our military. Yeah, sure, let’s take all these single military-aged males who violated our Constitution and have them take an oath to support and defend the very rule of law they violated.
- Dictators come up with cute-sounding themes like “equity” – believing they can make us all equal.
- Dictators dismiss the rule of law. They abide by only one premise and rule and create a dual-tiered system of justice that enables the implementation of their agenda.
- Dictators tell businesses they must shut down, but throw a fit if anyone speaks of shutting down the apparatus of their dictatorial designs – the government.

- Finally, dictators censor opposing thoughts, insights, ideals, and perspectives. They do not believe in free speech – only their version of accepted speech. This is evident in these incubators for dictators – our college and university campuses.
- The modern-day American Democrat party is a collection of leftist dictators. The bottom line is that Democrats are the real dictators.

Steadfast and Loyal.

An article by Newt Gingrich titled “John Kerry Is Crazy” was posted at gingrich360.com on Dec. 8, 2023. Following is the article.

John Kerry is crazy. This is not hyperbole or exaggeration.

According to the Merriam Webster dictionary, the word crazy means “not mentally sound: marked by thought or action that lacks reason.”

I was convinced that Kerry is truly crazy after seeing his recent emotional speech to the United Nations Climate Change Conference.

Kerry made a plea to end all coal burning power plant construction in the entire world. This was precisely an example of a statement “marked by thought or action that lacks reason.”

While speaking for the United States (not merely as a private citizen climate extremist), Kerry clearly articulated bold but utterly unrealistic goals.

At the same conference (according to CNBC), Conference President Sultan Al-Jaber (who is also the United Arab Emirates climate chief) “claimed there was ‘no science’ behind calls for a phase out of fossil fuels.” He went on to assert that a fossil fuel phase out would not allow sustainable development “unless you want to take the world back into caves.”

Ironically (according to the Washington Post), “If the climate summit now has the vibe of a business expo, then the fossil fuel industry might have the greatest number of booths. More than 2,400 people with ties to oil, gas and coal companies or trade associations have registered to attend this year’s summit, known as COP28.”

So, while the president of the conference asserted outlawing fossil fuels would set humanity back centuries (and while surrounded by several thousand fossil fuel lobbyists), Kerry decided to go all-out to demand radical, ridiculous change.

Kerry asserted: “I am becoming more and more militant about this because we are not getting where we need to be.”

Of course, I debated Kerry on environmental issues in 2007, and he was drifting toward militant and crazy then.

His current idea of greater militancy was to call for the elimination of all new coal-burning electric generation.

In today’s real-world context, Kerry’s battle cry is silly, self-destructive, and makes the United States look delusional.

After Kerry’s many trips to Beijing and his earnest pleas for cooperation on climate, the Chinese Communist government announced a 42 percent increase in the production of coal-based electric generation.

India is even more aggressive. According to the Center for Research on Energy and Clean Air, we read the following.

“Three non-captive coal plant expansions (3.9 gigawatts, or GW) received permits in the first five months of 2023 alone, up from zero the year before, as well as seven other coal plant proposals (7.6 GW) also moving forward in the permitting process by receiving Terms of Reference, and two additional coal plants (2.9 GW) appeared under consideration for the first time this year . . . India has an estimated 65.3 GW of proposed, on-grid coal capacity under active development: 30.4 GW under construction and 34.9 GW in pre-construction (14.4 GW permitted, 11.8 GW pre-permit, and 8.8 GW announced). This capacity represents nearly a third of the country’s operational on-grid, non-export coal capacity (212.5 GW).”

Other countries expanding their coal-based electric generation include Indonesia, Bangladesh, Turkey, Vietnam, Mongolia, and Laos.

King Canute (who was king of England, Norway, and Denmark in the early 1000s) became famous for teaching his sycophantic staff that despite all their praise he could not control the ocean. Canute knew that reality was bigger than him or any idea he had.

Kerry never learned this. A lot of countries want to build more coal-based electric generating plants. Does Kerry think his sincerity, passion, and moral superiority will bend them all to his will? It appears so. It’s clearly nonsense, “not mentally sound,” and “lacks reason.”

Of course, it makes sense for a cognitively challenged President Joe Biden to have a crazy climate “czar” in his administration.

America needs new leadership soon. Otherwise, the world will believe we are all crazy.

Looking back to January 2023, an article by Jonathan Chadwick titled “How to Survive a Nuclear Blast” was posted at dailymail.co.uk on Jan. 17, 2023. Following are excerpts of the article.

A nuclear blast is usually measured by the amount of over-pressure (the pressure in excess of the normal atmospheric value) in pounds per square inch (spi) – which depends on distance from the nuclear bomb as it detonates.

Anyone in the general vicinity of a nuclear bomb going off would be instantly vaporized, while radiation can also pose a fatal risk.

However, there is another potentially fatal danger – the blast wave generated by the explosion (which is defined as an area of pressure expanding outward at supersonic speeds).

A blast wave can produce airspeeds strong enough to lift people into the air and cause serious injury or death – even in indoor spaces.

Researchers in “Physics of Fluids” wrote: “Primary danger to human survivability in indoor spaces becomes the extreme high-speed winds that enter through the various openings in the building, like windows. Supersonic shock waves arising from the blast undergo expansion as they enter a room through an opening leading to channeling effects.”

Researchers note that the following advice is applicable if in a nuclear explosion’s moderate damage zone (MDZ), or far enough from the source of the blast – which may come down to luck.

- Be inside a concrete building.
- Position yourself at the corners of the room, facing the blast.
- Avoid windows, corridors and doors.
- If there’s not enough time, hiding in the corner of a corridor might be safer than being in the middle of the corridor.
- Immediately take shelter under tables and chairs.

Isaiah 55:6-11–“Seek you the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word by that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
