But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take you stand in the presence of the Son of Man” (Weymouth New Testament).

An article by Victor Davis Hanson titled “Harvard – Out of the Frying Pan, Into the Fire” was posted at dailycaller.com on Jan. 4, 2024. Following are excerpts of the article.

Harvard may assume the forced resignation of its president, Claudine Gay, has finally ended its month-long scandal over her tenure. Gay stepped down, remember, amid serious allegations of serial plagiarism – without refuting the charges. She proved either unable or unwilling to discipline those on her campus who were defiantly anti-Semitic in speech and action.

But Gay’s removal is not the end of Harvard’s dilemma. Rather, it is the beginning. In the respective press releases from Gay and the Harvard Corporation, racial animus was cited as a reason for her removal. Gay did not even refer to her failure to stop anti-Semitism on her campus or her own record of blatant plagiarism.

Yet, playing the race card reflects poorly on both and for a variety of reasons.

- One, Gay’s meager publication record – a mere 11 articles without a single published book of her own – had somehow earned her a prior Harvard full professorship and presidency.

Such a thin resume leading to academic stardom is unprecedented.

- Two, the University of Pennsylvania forced the resignation of its [white] president, Liz Magill. She sat next to Gay during that now-infamous congressional hearing in which they both claimed they were unable to discipline blatant anti-Semitism on their campuses.

Instead, both pleaded “free speech” and “context” considerations.

Such excuses were blatantly amoral and untrue. In truth, Ivy League campuses routinely sanction, punish, or remove staff, faculty, or students deemed culpable for speech or behavior deemed hurtful to protected minorities – except apparently white males and Jews.

Yet Magill was immediately forced to resign, and Gay was not. Also noteworthy was Magill’s far more impressive and extensive administrative experience, along with a more prestigious scholarship that was free of even a suggestion of plagiarism.

Academia’s immediate firing of a white woman while trying desperately to save the career of a less qualified and ethically challenged black woman will be seen not as a case of racial bias, but more likely of racial preference.

Indeed, to keep Gay’s job and to defend her from plagiarism charges, both Harvard and Gay herself were willing to say things that were simply absurd, if not patently untrue.

Harvard invented a new phrase “duplicative language” to euphemize the reality of Gay’s intellectual theft.

Even after Gay resigned, Harvard jumped the shark by further downplaying her plagiarism by dubbing it as mere “missteps.”

- Harvard and its supporters further embarrassed themselves by alleging that if the victims of Gay’s plagiarism didn’t object, then why did her expropriation matter that much?
- Are we then to assume that plagiarism is not a serious violation of the entire ethos of scholarship, quite in addition to the aggrieved plagiarism party?

Liberal Harvard, through its lawyers, even threatened the New York Post with legal action if it aired charges of Gay’s plagiarism.

Yet only days later, the university was swamped by further proof of Gay’s scholarly misconduct, involving improper use of data and more plagiarism extending back even to her dissertation.

Harvard, remember, claimed that it had conducted a thorough investigation that had cleared her of actionable plagiarism – even as more charges arose of her prior culpability.

But more importantly, what happens to ex-president Gay now?

- Does resigning from the Harvard presidency and returning to a full professorship mean that charges of plagiarism disappear?
- Would any other Harvard professors continue to be employed without addressing over two dozen separate charges of plagiarism lodged against them?
- Do Gay, the Harvard Corporation, and the more than 700 Harvard professors who closed ranks and wrote a letter supporting Gay now argue that plagiarism is no longer a serious offense at the nation's supposedly most preeminent university?
- Will students who emulate Gay's habit of copy-and-paste, failure-to-footnote, and misuse-of-data now be exempt from dismissal or suspension?
- After Gay's embarrassing December 5 congressional testimony and her resignation, what now is the Harvard policy toward anti-Semitism?
- If next week, anti-Israel students once again call for the destruction of the Jewish people in Israel all the way "from the river to the sea," or if they again storm Harvard's Widener library, screaming support for the October 7 massacre and intimidating Jewish students, what will the new (or old) Harvard do?

Again nothing?

Finally, Harvard insinuated that Gay was fired by racist outside pressure – despite the fact that many of her critics were large donors furious about the diminution of the reputation of their alma mater.

- Is Harvard suggesting that its own mega-donors are racist?

What then might come next? The resignation of the entire board of the Harvard Corporation that is the ultimate cause of Harvard's descent into mediocrity.

An article by John Stossel titled "Are You a Maker or a Taker?" was posted at townhall.com on Jan. 3, 2024. Following is the article.

Politicians are often takers. They take our money (and freedom) in the name of achieving goals they rarely achieve. Elon Musk and Sen. Elizabeth Warren may be the best examples of maker and taker. They're the stars of my video this week.

Warren shouts, “Tax the rich!” She especially want to tax Musk, the richest man in the world. In her eagerness to grab his money, she spun a scandal in the media – claiming Musk paid no taxes. She went on TV again and again to tell people that in 2018, “He paid zero!”

It was true. In 2018, Musk paid no federal income tax. But that was only because his pay was entirely in the form of “stock options,” and that year, they gave him no income.

But at the very moment Warren launched her “zero-tax” screed, Musk was paying the U.S. government $12 billion – more tax than anyone has ever paid in history. Warren didn’t mention that.

- I wish Musk paid much less tax.
- It would be better for the world if he spent the $12 billion himself – rather than giving it to Warren and her cronies. I say that because Musk, a maker, does so many useful things. That includes things that the government is unable to do.

NASA has given up building spaceships. Even NASA bureaucrats now understand that they don’t do things very well.

In 2008, NASA administrator Mike Griffin said, “We can’t keep doing the same old things as before” and invited private companies to join the space race.

That got results. By 2020, Musk had sent astronauts into orbit, something NASA hadn’t been able to do for nine years. Musk lowered the cost of nearly every component of space flight.

- NASA spent $1,500 on door latches.
- Musk’s team built the part for $30 by modifying a latch from bathroom stalls.
- Musk developed reusable rockets, which drastically cut costs.

“Reuse the rocket, say, 1,000 times,” said Musk. “That would make the capital costs of the rocket per launch only about $50,000.” Why didn’t NASA do that? Because in government, people do what they’ve always done. Lowering costs isn’t important. They’re spending other people’s money.

Musk also created Starlink. Starlink satellites now provide low-cost internet service to people all over the world. He’s so successful launching satellites that most satellites now orbiting earth are Musk’s. He’s given more poor people access to the internet than any government ever has.

Musk develops the world’s popular electric car, gives poor people internet access, reinvigorate space exploration and creates 110,000 jobs.

So, Warren wants to punish him?

She sent a letter to the Securities and Exchange Commission, demanding the government investigate Tesla for “not properly representing shareholders.”

Seems like a bizarre accusation, given that Tesla’s stock has increased in value by $790 billion.

Warren didn’t like that Musk became CEO of Twitter. She demanded that “conflict of interest” be investigated.

But it’s great that Musk bought Twitter. He told Joe Rogan that he’s lost money on the company, but that taking over Twitter was still worth “everything,” because he’s protecting open debate. I agree. Twitter’s previous owners censored political views that didn’t conform to left-wing bias. They even reduced the number of my Twitter followers. Only when Musk took over did the total climb back above a million again.

Now Musk’s company, Neuralink, is trying to help paralyzed people access the internet and operate artificial limbs – just by using their thoughts.

Neuralink, Tesla, SpaceX, Starlink. Musk is a maker and a hero!

Warren, the taker, attacks people who create wealth.

She pushes a skewed narrative about “greedy” corporations. Of course, corporations are greedy! Greed works. It motivates people to try harder. But (outside of government) greedy people can only satisfy their greed by pleasing customers. Unlike politicians, they can’t force anyone to pay.

Our world needs fewer Elizabeth Warrens and more Elon Musks.

- An article by William Upton titled “Gun Ownership Up, Homicides Down” was posted at thenationalpulse.com on Jan. 4, 2024.

The number of homicides across the United States fell by nearly 13-percent in 2023, fueling a corporate media news cycle about how crime overall is down despite public perception. What is being ignored, however, regarding the shift in crime levels since the pandemic is the fact gun ownership has drastically increased.

A recent poll showed 52-percent of registered voters acknowledged they or someone in their household owned at least one firearm – an all time record high.

A similar poll in 2023 found only 42-percent of Americans said they or a household member owned a gun.

Pew Research produced a survey showing over 40-percent of Americans at-large live in a home where someone owns a firearm – with nearly half-of self-described Republicans saying they owned a gun.

Between 2020 and 2022, Americans owned an estimated 60 million firearms. Compared to two decades ago, gun sales in the United States have nearly doubled. The recent spike in sales appears to be fueled by concerns President Joe Biden and Congressional Democrats would work to put new restrictions on gun purchases and ownership through gun-control legislation.

Additionally, the Black Lives Matter (BLM) movement’s demand that local governments abolish police departments have lead some Americans to invest in personal protection and firearm self-defense training.

While cities like Detroit are on track to see the lowest homicide rate since 1966, the nation’s capital (‘gun-free’ Washington D.C.) has increasing numbers.

- There has been a 40-percent spike in violent crime.
- Murders are up 35-percent since last year.
- Robberies are up nearly 70-percent.
- Motor-vehicle thefts are up 83-percent.
- Theft is up 25-percent.

An article by Brakkton Booker titled “Trouble With [Charlamagne] Tha God” was posted at politico.com on Jan. 2, 2024. Following are excerpts of the article.

It’s not so much that Charlamagne tha God has beef with the president. It’s just that he thinks Joe Biden is a lousy messenger and that he lacks the basic political skills that (whatever one thinks about the guy) Donald Trump possesses.

Biden has faced similarly tough recriminations from other political luminaries. But coming from Charlamagne, it hits different. The radio host, 45, claims a loyal audience of 8 million monthly listeners. He is reaching the very voters Biden is struggling to draw – young and black.

Charlamagne’s breakout moment as a political influencer came during the contentious and drawn-out 2016 Democratic primary campaign between Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders. Each sought to heavily court black voters, and both candidates made multiple appearances on the show throughout the campaign season. Clinton ultimately would overwhelmingly secure the black vote in the primary and general election.

Four years later, it was Biden’s turn to face Charlamagne. In May 2020, during the height of the pandemic, he sat down for an interview over Zoom.

Charlamagne peppered Biden with questions about how he was going to energize voters without leaving his home. The host reminded the future president that many black folks, himself included, felt the Democratic Party takes their votes for granted.

Near the end of the conversation, Biden explained he had to jump off because his wife, Jill Biden, was scheduled to do a media hit from the same room.

“You can’t do that to Black media,” Charlamagne declared, as he pleaded with Biden for more time. “Because it’s a long way until November, we’ve got more questions.”

Biden responded tersely: “You’ve got more questions, but I tell you . . . if you’ve got a problem whether or not you’re for me or Trump, then you ain’t black.”

Reluctantly, Charlamagne did something he said he rarely does – he endorsed Biden’s 2020 presidential bid. Not because he was enamored by the promise of what Biden was selling, but because he selected Kamala Harris as his vice president.

After more than three years of Biden in office, Charlamagne openly questions his endorsement. Within Democratic circles, including inside the administration, there is a general recognition that the president needs to do more to reach black voters.

Administration officials downplay the idea that Charlamagne is needed to reach this group. But even if they did, his relationship with this White House and in particular Harris, has soured enough that it’s unclear if they could rely on him.

Charlamagne knows his words hold weight with his audience. “When I give people my word like: ‘Yo man, I think we should be supporting Kamala Harris for vice president . . . because she’s going to hold it down.’ When we say those things and people don’t see her holding it down, that causes issues,” he said.

There’s a difference, of course, between not endorsing someone and actively criticizing.

And for the Biden White House, Charlamagne has become something of an irritant, whether it’s raising questions about the president’s political acumen or helping elevate longshot presidential hopefuls Robert F. Kennedy Jr., Marianne Williamson and Cornel West – but not, notably, Biden or Harris.

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word by that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
