Luke 21:34-36—"But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man" (Weymouth New Testament).

Looking back to April 2024, an article by Melissa Quinn titled "Justice Neil Gorsuch Is Not Pleased With Judges Setting Nationwide Policy; but How Common Is It?" was posted at cbsnews.com on April 10, 2024. Following are excerpts of the article.

When the Supreme Court heard arguments in two high-stakes, separate cases last month, Justice Neil Gorsuch raised concerns about how both disputes arrived at the court.

The cases – one involving the Biden administration's communications with social media companies and the other (the accessibility of a commonly used abortion pill) landed before the justices after federal district courts issued nationwide orders that blocked federal agencies from taking certain actions.

"Rash" of universal injunctions

Known as nationwide or universal injunctions, these far-reaching orders bar the government from enforcing the policy at issue against anyone, anywhere in the country, and extend beyond the relief necessary to protect the plaintiffs who brought the lawsuits. And they appeared to trouble Gorsuch, who lamented there has been a "rash" of them lately.

Michael Morley (a law professor at Florida State University) said: "Rather than having what you might think of as a functional judicial process where if you do have important, unsettled controversial issues, the courts can give it appropriate time and consideration, you have everybody's right throughout the nation being flipped on and off like a light switch."

A study published Wednesday in the Harvard Law Review looked at the number of those injunctions issued since 1963, and found they spiked in the four years former President Donald Trump was in office.

Following is information from a data-set from the Justice Department.

- Researchers identified at least 127 nationwide injunctions issued from 1963 through 2023.
- Of those, 96 have been entered since 2001 – More than half, 64, blocked the Trump administration from enforcing or implementing its policies.

How does that number compare with other presidents?

- George W. Bush's two terms – 6 nationwide injunctions.
- Barack Obama's two terms – 12 nationwide injunctions.
- Joe Biden's one term – 14 nationwide injunctions

[Remember – Trump's number was 64.]

"Extreme forum shopping"

Morley said a single judge's power to enter a nationwide injunction incentivizes "extreme forum shopping," in which plaintiffs strategically bring their case in a specific court before a judge who will be most favorable to their arguments.

Morley said: "There are outlier judges on all sides. You can go to that outlier judge and are systematically having the most controversial, cutting edge, hot-button constitutional issues being settled and resolved by the ideological outliers rather than a more representative cross section of the judiciary."

Courts have over the past few years become the arena for hashing out high-profile political disputes, as congressional gridlock puts pressure on the president to take executive action to implement his policy agenda, said Nicholas Bagley (a law professor at the University of Michigan).

When presidents try to act unilaterally in “unusual or aggressive ways,” Bagley continued, “there’s a ripe opportunity for a lawsuit, and if you’re bringing one of these lawsuits, you’re going to do your [hardest] to bring it in front of a friendly forum.”

A judge who is more receptive to the challenger’s arguments, he said, may come to see a nationwide remedy as the more appropriate means of reining in a president.

Bagley said: “It’s a combination of a bunch of factors coming together.”

- Congressional sclerosis
- Presidential adventurism
- Judicial excessiveness

An article by Clarice Feldman titled “Do We Have 677 Unelected Presidents?” was posted at americanthinker.com on March 16, 2025. Following are excerpts of the article.

- There are almost 700 federal district court judges.
 - I say “almost,” because while officially there are 677 of them, some retired judges have taken senior status and may sit from time to time on cases – so the figure is inexact on any given day.
 - Since President Trump was sworn in for a second term, there has been an avalanche of cases seeking relief from executive actions – last month alone, district court judges issued 15 temporary restraining orders.
 - That’s more nationwide injunctions than there were issued for the first three YEARS of the Biden Administration. District court judges are out of control.”

A Temporary Restraining Order (TRO) is designed to maintain the status quo after a claim is made that there is an emergency requiring the court to maintain the matter in a holding pattern – usually for 10-14 days – until a hearing on the issue can be held.

A TRO can be granted ex parte – that is with only the plaintiff being present and without a hearing on the issue at all.

The plaintiff must show the likelihood of success on the merits of the claim and that the harm to him outweighs any potential harm to the opposing party.

To get one, the plaintiff has to show the likelihood of irreparable injury if the court fails to act.

After a hearing, the court may issue a Preliminary Injunction (PI) directing some action or continuing the initial restraint until a full trial on the matter is held.

To obtain a PI that lasts throughout the course of litigation, the plaintiff must meet a higher standard of proof.

A TRO requires the applicant to show a substantial likelihood of success and immediate harm, while a preliminary injunction involves a more rigorous evaluation of the merits, balance of equities and public interest.

There are 94 district courts and 12 federal courts of appeals, which hear and decide appeals from district courts.

Generally, TROs are not appealable, but preliminary injunctions are.

Some of the TROs issued against the administration read more like preliminary injunctions, and no matter how they are titled, if they do more than maintain the status quo for a short period, the appellate courts should step in and assert jurisdiction.

According to Bill Shipley, most of these injunctions will not survive appeal: "I think SCOTUS is going to end up staying several of these, take up a small number, and then issue a small number of decisions that will force District Judges to reconsider and rethink their rulings. But they are unlikely to take a lot of these cases up individually to decide them on the merits. They will rely on district judges to change their decisions, and the Appeals Courts to smack down those who don't."

It's clear that the curtain must fall on the notion that hundreds of unelected district court judges (of often outlying political beliefs and of various levels of judicial temperament and legal ability) should be permitted to act as Chief Executive.

An article by Harold Hutchison titled "Alan Dershowitz Describes How Trump, Congress Could Rein In Judge Blocking Deportation of Terrorists" was posted at dailycaller.com on March 18, 2025. Following are excerpts of the article.

Attorney Alan Dershowitz said Tuesday that President Donald Trump and Congress had multiple options to rein in the judge who tried to block the deportation of over 200 members of the Tren De Aragua prison gang.

- Dershowitz said: "I think Congress can do more to facilitate the exit of these bad guys, and they should do more, and they can do more to curtail the jurisdiction of courts. They can pass a statute saying a district court has jurisdiction only to grant an injunction that covers his district, to his circuit."

Dershowitz also dismissed the notion that the Trump administration's action precipitated a constitutional crisis. (Trump and Congress could rein in the lower court judges.)

- Dershowitz said: "Congress clearly has the authority. It can abolish the district courts all over the country. It could say we don't have any more district courts. Nothing in the Constitution about district courts. It just says that you know it can have, there can be lower courts, but it doesn't indicate how many there have to be and where the circuits are and how many court of appeals judges [or] district court judges. Those are all issues for Congress, and Congress can have greater input than they now do. So, there is no constitutional crisis, let's be clear, but Congress can help avoid the constitutional clashes by legislating on some of these issues."

An article by Will Potter titled “Jake Tapper Shocks Viewers by Airing List of Grievances He Agrees With Trump On” was posted at dailymail.co.uk on March 15, 2025. Following are excerpts of the article.

Jake Tapper shocked his CNN panel as he admitted that President Trump’s condemnation of the justice system is built around “legitimate grievances.” The CNN host made the comment in response to speech Trump gave at the Department of Justice on Friday [March 14].

- Trump railed against “the lies and abuses” that allowed him to be previously charged with federal crimes.
- Trump said: “(The DOJ) weaponized the vast powers of our intelligence and law enforcement agencies to try to thwart the will of the American people.”
- After airing the clip, Tapper defended the president’s remarks.
- Tapper said: “You don’t have to be a member of MAGA to say, ‘You know what those Peter Strozok-Lisa Page texts were awful.’ ”
- Tapper said: “There was a FISA abuse. There was that weird thing with Carter Page . . . I don’t know about that Alvin Bragg case where he is, like, basically invented a felony. You don’t have to a member of MAGA to look and say, ‘You know what? He does have some legitimate grievances.’ ”

After Tapper’s remarks, CNN political commentator Xochiti Hinojosa mentioned Trump being indicted on 44 counts.

Tapper responded: “I should not I was talking about the Russiagate investigation and the Alvin Bragg case, and you deftly switched it to the Jack Smith investigation.”

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word by that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
