Luke 21:34-36—“But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man” (Weymouth New Testament).

“Eye on the World” comment: This edition was not posted on our website at the traditional time (on Friday evening) due to the town of Big Sandy (including our church building) having a loss of electricity due to storms and tornadoes. We apologize for any inconvenience.

An article by Miranda Devine titled “Meet DOGE’s Patriotic Musketeers – Led by Elon and the Belief That America Needs Their Expertise, Now” was posted at nypost.com on March 30, 2025. Following is the article.

Most Americans know very little about Elon Musk’s team of brainiacs at the Department of Government Efficiency, and may have misconceptions about who they are.

However, Bret Baier’s interview with Musk and seven of his lieutenants at DOGE last week shed a welcome light on these unfamiliar names.

For starters, they look nothing like the image that has taken hold in the public imagination, driven by a story in Wired about a group of pimply teenage nerds with online nicknames like “Big Balls” running riot through government systems.

Instead, we saw seven highly accomplished, respectable adults, all but one in a suit and tie. They are friends of Musk that he has tapped as “tech support” for the federal government, at least for the 130 days he has committed himself to.

Some work in his companies. At least one is a self-made billionaire in his own right. The last thing they need is a federal government job. They don't speak like partisan activists but like the successful engineers and businesspeople they are. They may well be Democrats, like Musk once was, but you wouldn't know it, and nor should it matter.

They have volunteered to fix the antiquated computer systems and operations of the federal government and safeguard them from fraud and waste because, like Musk, they believe America is in dire need of their expertise and can-do energy.

These are the seven Musketeers.

- Joe Gebbia

Joe Gebbia, the billionaire co-founder of Airbnb and a close friend of Musk, has volunteered at DOGE to modernize the retirement process for federal government employees, contributing what he calls his “designer brain and start-up spirit.”

“I loved the challenge, so I jumped on board,” he told Baier. “We’re taking the best of Silicon Valley and the business world and bringing it into the government . . . I’m here because it’s an interesting problem. We can use design and good engineering to solve it and really create a better experience for everybody.”

He described an underground mine in Pennsylvania that “houses every paper document for the retirement process in the government” and hasn’t changed in 70 years. He plans to digitize the mess of 400 million pieces of paper in 22,000 filing cabinets and create an “Apple Store-like experience” for government services.

- Steve Davis

Steve Davis, an aerospace engineer, is Musk’s top lieutenant from Space X and most recently ran Musk’s Boring Company, the tunnel-digging startup. He is the head of operations for DOGE.

“To have the country going bankrupt would be a very bad thing,” he says. He and the others have “put our lives on hold [because] we believe there is a chance to succeed.”

Among DOGE’s discoveries are 15 million people aged over 120 marked as “alive” in the Social Security system. “Social Security numbers that were clearly fraudulent were floating around that can be used only for bad intentions.” There also are 4.6 million credit cards in the federal government for some 2.4 million employees.

- Tom Krause

Tom Krause, a Silicon Valley CEO who has been in Musk’s orbit for 15 years, joined DOGE in January to apply “public company standards to the federal government.”

He told Baier it was “alarming” to find “only one bank account that’s used to disburse all monies that go out of the federal government.”

“There’s $500 billion of fraud every year and hundreds of billions of improper payments and we can’t pass an audit,” he said. “We’re serving 580-plus agencies and up until very recently, effectively they could say ‘make the payment’ and Treasury just sent it out as fast as possible, no verification.”

He signed up to a stint of thankless toil at DOGE because “I’m blessed with four beautiful children, my wife and I, but we have a real fiscal crisis, and this is not sustainable. What’s worse, back to my children and everyone else’s children, is we are burdening them with debt, and it’s only going to grow.”

- Aram Moghaddassi

Aram Moghaddassi is a young Silicon Valley software engineer who works for Musk’s company Neuralink.

“I thought I’m a software engineer who could maybe make a difference here,” he says of his work with DOGE.

He is embedded in the Social Security Administration, where the computer systems are over 50 years old and vulnerable to fraud. He aims to make two improvements for Social Security beneficiaries: “Protect them from fraud . . . and make the experience better.” Forty percent of the calls to Social Security are from fraudsters trying to steal retirees’ money, he says.

- Brad Smith

Brad Smith, a Nashville-based Rhodes Scholar with degrees from Harvard and Oxford, is a health-care entrepreneur. He told Baier his aim was to make “700 different IT systems at HHS . . . speak to each other.” He also wants researchers to receive 85% of federal grant money rather than the current 60 percent, with the rest going to their universities.

- Anthony Armstrong

Anthony Armstrong is a former Morgan Stanley tech banker who helped orchestrate Musk’s $44 billion acquisition of Twitter (now X). He serves as a senior adviser to the director at the Office of Personnel Management, the federal government’s human-resources department.

His focus is on shrinking the federal workforce by targeting “duplicative functions” and wasteful spending.

As an example, he points to “1,400 people at the IRS whose job is just the hand out laptops and cellphones to staff.”

- Tyler Hassen

Tyler Hassen is a Texas energy company executive who dropped everything to join DOGE because he feels it is his patriotic duty.

“I was running five businesses in Houston,” he said, “ and I left that . . . to do this, and my wonderful wife said, ‘go for it,’ and here I am . . . This is me giving back to the country.”

He is embedded in the Department of the Interior, where he says, “Under the Biden administration, there was no departmental oversight whatsoever.”

He waved a piece of paper in the interview, a $905 million contract for a customer service survey so simple “I could have done in high school.” After DOGE’s intervention, the contract was canceled, saving all but $75 million, one of the many taxpayer savings that activist federal judges have tried to block.

- People working hard for America

For the world’s richest man, the abuse he has endured since he joined forces with Trump and devoted himself to the Department of Government Efficiency seems only to have strengthened his resolve.

Musk said: “The reason we’re doing this is because if we don’t do this, America is going to go bankrupt.”

The changes DOGE is making will “allow the federal government to pass an audit and enable taxpayers to know where their money is going [and] that their hard-earned tax dollars are being spent well.”

“When I say our job is tech support, I really mean it,” he added. “What we have here is a bunch of failing computer systems . . . preventing people from receiving their benefits, preventing research from happening, [and] that are extremely vulnerable to fraud. We’re fixing it.”

In an era when public service is too often associated with self-interest and partisan political games, it is heartening to see people working hard for the American people in consequential ways for what appear to be genuinely altruistic reasons.

An article by Scott S. Powell titled “What’s the Real Target of the Assault on Tesla?” was posted at americanthinker.com on April 3, 2025. Following are excerpts of the article.

The war on Elon Musk and Tesla is driven by far more than politics. One thing is for sure: Tesla owners never saw this one coming. After all, Tesla fans are generally predisposed to embrace climate change and much of the Green New Deal – positions with large support among people the Left side of the political spectrum.

For many, owning a Tesla is a statement of virtue signaling that you are doing your part to save the world and save the environment. Owners of Teslas are more likely to vote Democrat than Republican.

- So why would Tesla dealerships and Tesla car owners be targeted for destruction?
- And who are these radical property destroyers?

If the American people have learned anything in the last 10 or 15 years (particularly highlighted by the $2 billion destruction of national urban properties that came about after the police detention death of George Floyd in May of 2020), it is that destructive riots are not organically spontaneous.

The trigger events for riots are understood and sometimes planned well in advance. Once the trigger event happens, the riot plan gets executed and implemented.

Militant activist rioters (many being members of BLM and Antifa) can be mobilized and bussed to target areas, paid as much as $300 a day from various NGOs, to engage in protest, obstructionism, and property destruction.

Other evidence that the 2020 riots were planned and managed could be clearly observed in the strategic delivery of pallets of bricks in many of the targeted cities for the purpose of facilitating the breaking of windows and looting.

With the deterioration of law and order in urban America (which has also been planned) and with very few rioters arrested and sentenced to jail time in 2020 and the years that followed, it is little wonder that this is happening again.

Ostensibly, the domestic terror attacks on dozens of Tesla dealerships nationwide and random vandalism and destruction attempts of Tesla vehicles are being done to protest and stop Elon Musk and his DOGE audits of federal government agencies and NGOs.

Trump's DOGE initiative is the most important initiative ever undertaken by a Republican administration because it is directed at dismantling the administrative state by unmasking waste, fraud and abuse – and defunding the deep state internal enemies of America.

One thing should be clear to everyone now: The deep state is not going down with a fight.

But the real agenda and targets go beyond Tesla and Elon Musk. Donald Trump is the ultimate target, since he is the first American leader to exhibit the courage and persistence to take on domestic enemies attempting to subvert the Constitution – with a mind to totally defeat them.

Trump has now connected the dots to show that America has actually been going through its own “color revolution” with three stages.

- Demoralizing and disorienting the American people by driving God out of the culture, and disconnecting the people from the virtues of their heritage.
- Dividing the American People along racial, economic, gender, and ethnic lines.
- Then, creating a crisis (like a civil war) from which the country cannot recover.

America has already passed through the first two stages of this color revolution and is not in the crisis stage. If we have learned anything about the enemies of America, we know they are unscrupulous, unprincipled and unrestricted by any traditional norms. It is impossible to forecast the future, but because Trump’s enemies are likely to get more desperate rather than back down, American patriots need to prayerfully connect the dots and thread the needles of entrapment scenarios.

As we approach America’s 250th birthday on July 4, 2026, we must remember that vigilance is the price of liberty. And it requires us to keep our eye on the prize of a restored and victorious constitutional republic, and the defeat of a corrupt administrative state.

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word by that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
