Luke 21:34-36—“But take heed to yourselves, lest your souls be weighed down with self-indulgence, and drunkenness, or the anxieties of this life, and that day come on you suddenly, like a falling trap; for it will come on all dwellers on the face of the whole earth. But beware of slumbering; and every moment pray that you may be fully strengthened to escape from all these coming evils, and to take your stand in the presence of the Son of Man” (Weymouth New Testament).

Looking back to July 2025, an article by Eric Suni titled “How Much Sleep Do You Need?” was posted at sleepfoundation.org on July 11, 2025. Following are excerpts of the article.

Feel like you are constantly chasing sleep, but never sure if you’re getting enough?

Figuring out how much sleep you actually need can feel like solving a mystery. But sleep isn’t a luxury – it’s a biological necessity. And getting the right amount can mean the difference between powering through your day and dragging yourself through it.

So, how many hours do you really need to feel rested, focused, and at your best? As a basic rule, healthy adults need at least 7 hours of sleep per night. Babies, young children and teens need even more sleep to enable their growth and development.

Getting less than seven hours has been linked to a weakened immune system, reduced job performance and a heightened risk of accidents (including car accidents). An ongoing lack of sleep is also associated with many serious health issues – including high blood pressure, heart disease, weight gain, obesity, diabetes and depression.

If seven hours is the minimum, a natural follow-up question is whether adults can sleep too much. According to experts, the answer isn’t so clear. Sometimes sleeping more than nine hours is a sign of an underlying health problem. But getting extra sleep can be appropriate in certain circumstances – such as when you’re sick or trying to catch up on sleep.

Age group	Age range	Recommended hours of sleep
-----------	-----------	----------------------------

Newborns	Under 4 months	14-17 hours – including naps
Infant	4-12 months	12-16 hours – including naps
Toddler	1-2 years	11-14 hours – including naps
Preschool	3-5 years	10-13 hours – including naps
School-age	6-12 years	9-12 hours
Teen	13-18 years	8-10 hours
Adult	18 years & older	7 hours or more

Following are some questions that can help you assess your individual sleep needs.

- Are you productive, healthy, and happy on 7 hours of sleep?
- Or have you noticed that you require more hours of sleep to get into high gear?
- Do you unwillingly doze off during the day?
- Do you have health issues that might require more rest?
- Are you taking any medications that affect your sleep or daytime energy levels?
- Do you have a high level of daily energy expenditure?
- Do you frequently play sports or work in a labor-intensive job?
- Do your daily activities require alertness to do them safely?
- Do you drive every day or operate heavy machinery?
- Do you feel sleepy while doing these activities?
- Are you experiencing or do you have a history of a sleep disorder?
- Do you depend on caffeine to get you through the day?
- When you have an open schedule, do you tend to sleep more?
- Are you pregnant or breastfeeding?

Sleep quality vs. quantity

When thinking about sleep needs, it's easy to focus on quantity. But a good night's rest isn't just about how many hours you are asleep. The quality of your sleep is just as important.

Low-quality sleep often feels restless or disrupted – making it less refreshing than solid, continuous sleep. Fragmented sleep hinders your ability to progress through the four stages of sleep.

Sleep cycles

Sleep isn't uniform. Over the course of the night, you go through several rounds of the sleep cycle – which is composed of four stages. In a typical night, a person goes through four to six sleep cycles. Not all sleep cycles are the same length – but on the average, they last about 90 minutes each.

The first sleep cycle is often the shortest – ranging from 70 to 100 minutes, where later cycles tend to fall between 90 and 120 minutes.

- Stage 1 (N1) is the lightest stage of sleep and occurs as a person first falls asleep.
- Stage 2 (N2) is where the body starts to relax deeply. Body Temperature drops, muscles relax, and heart and breathing rate slows.
- Stage 3 (N3 or deep sleep) is the deepest and more restorative sleep – allowing the body to recover and grow.
- Stage 4 (REM sleep) is where most dreaming occurs, brain activity increases, and the body becomes temporarily paralyzed.

What is REM sleep?

During stage 4, brain activity picks up – nearing levels seen when you are awake. At the same time, the body experiences atonia (which is temporary paralysis of the muscles) with two exceptions: the eyes and the muscles that control breathing. Even though they are closed, the eyes move rapidly, which is how this stage gets its name.

REM sleep is believed to be essential to cognitive functions like memory, learning and creativity. REM sleep is known for the most vivid dreams (which is explained by the significant uptick in brain activity). Dreams can occur in any sleep stage, but they are less common and intense in the NREM periods.

Under normal circumstances, you don't enter a REM sleep until you've been asleep for about 90 minutes. As the night goes on, REM stages get longer (especially in the second half of the night). While the first REM stage may last only a few minutes, later stages can last for around an hour. In total, REM stages make up around 25% of sleep in adults.

Are you getting enough sleep?

- How do you wake up? Do you feel refreshed?
- Do you experience sleepiness during the day?
- How is your concentration level during the day?

What happens if you don't get enough sleep?

- Extreme tiredness during the day
- Slowed thinking and reaction time – heightening risk of errors and accidents

- Reduced focus and memory
- Irritability
- Feelings of anxiety or depression

Increased health issues

- High blood pressure, heart problems and stroke
- Decreased immune function
- Type 2 diabetes
- Kidney disease
- Obesity

Improving your quality of sleep

- Sticking to a sleep schedule every day – even on weekends
- Practicing a bedtime routine – to make falling asleep easier
- Choosing a supportive, comfortable mattress – with quality pillows and bedding
- Minimizing disruptions from light and sound
- Optimizing your bedroom temperature between 65 and 68 degrees
- Disconnecting from electronic devices – ideally an hour before bed
- Avoiding caffeine in the late afternoon or evening
- Limiting alcohol consumption – especially in the hours before bed

What is the 10-3-2-1-0 rule for sleep?

- 10 hours – avoid caffeine consumption 10 hours before bedtime
- 3 hours – do not drink alcohol or eat any food for 3 hours before going to bed
- 2 hours – finish all work-related tasks 2 hours before bed – for your mind to wind down
- 1 hour – stop all screen time for 1 hour before bedtime
- 0 uses – wake up when your alarm goes off in the morning – with 0 uses of snooze button

Is it healthy to nap during the day?

- Nap timing – not too late, so bedtime is not affected
- Nap length – 20 minutes is desirable

An article by Chris Nesi titled “Rubio Mocks Kamala Harris for Shocking Double Standard After She Criticized Maduro Arrest” was posted at nypost.com on Jan. 4, 2026. Following are excerpts of the article.

Secretary of State Marco Rubio ripped Kamala Harris and other Democrats over their criticism of Venezuelan dictator Nicolas Maduro's arrest on Saturday [January 3].

Rubio (and other critics) pointed out that the Biden administration also offered a massive reward [$25 Million] for Maduro's arrest. They just failed to bring him in.

Rubio said: "In the Biden administration, they had a $25 million reward for [Maduro's] capture. So, we have a reward for his capture, but we're not going to enforce it? That's the difference between President Trump and everybody else . . . President Trump did something about it."

An article by Mark Jackson titled "Chuck Schumer's Own Words Come Back to Haunt Him as He Melts Down Over Maduro Capture" was posted at thepopulisttimes.com on Jan. 5, 2026. Following are excerpts of the article.

In 2020, Schumer criticized Trump for what he said was a failure to remove Maduro from power after the Venezuelan leader was indicted in March of that year on drug trafficking charges.

Schumer said at that time: "The President brags about his Venezuela policy? Give us a break. He hasn't brought an end to the Maduro regime."

An article by Andres Martinez-Fernandez titled "What Maduro's Capture Means" was posted at dailysignal.com on Jan. 4, 2026. Following are excerpts of the article.

In the early hours of January 3, elite U.S. military forces crossed into Venezuelan territory in a highly sophisticated and coordinated operation, capturing narco-dictator Nicolas Maduro. In capturing Maduro, President Donald Trump removed the core barrier to the resolution of Venezuela's years-long nightmare and the hemispheric threat of a narco-regime.

During a months-long pressure campaign, Maduro was offered countless offramps by the United States – which could have seen him comfortably living out his days in Turkey or Russia. However, Maduro would not, or could not, take these offers.

Taking Maduro off the table alone hasn't yet ended the narco-dictatorship and the threat it poses to the U.S. But Arresting Maduro has upended a status quo in Venezuela that favored continuity for the regime and insecurity for the United States.

Once Venezuela is able to fully free itself of the shackles of two decades of narco-dictatorship, there will indeed be a substantial effort required to rebuild its economy and restore stability.

However, it's important to recognize that Venezuela is not Iraq, nor is it Syria or Libya (despite the claims of some self-described "experts").

Venezuela is a nation which has deep democratic, Judeo-Christian, and western foundations. These values were all upended by a catastrophic socialist experiment turned criminal regime. But the foundations remain and make a return to stability far less treacherous for Venezuela than Iraq.

Additionally, Venezuela was once one of the world's most prosperous nations – thanks in part to its connectedness to the U.S. economy and sizable oil resources.

Indeed, in 1983, Venezuela was the first country in South America to construct a metro train system. These economic resources and foundations can fuel the restoration of stability in Venezuela, while mitigating the costs for any support from the U.S. and international community.

The U.S. capture of Maduro comes at a critical moment in the western hemisphere. Latin America is currently experiencing a resurgence of conservative, pro-U.S. leadership with recent elections in Argentina, Chile, Bolivia, Ecuador and elsewhere.

The new leaders of these nations will be invaluable partners in supporting and ensuring any efforts to rebuild Venezuela and ensure its stability.

As with any complex and fluid crisis such as this, we can't fully predict what the exact path and future for Venezuela. However, what is clear is that the situation in Venezuela and its future prospects for stability have improved dramatically thanks to Trump's decision to capture Maduro.

Isaiah 55:6-11—“Seek you the Lord while He may be found, call upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return to the Lord, and He will have mercy on him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. ‘For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways,’ says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven, and do not return there, but water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall My word by that goes forth from My mouth; it shall not return to Me void, but it shall accomplish what I please, and it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it.”
